Croatia to Secede From Yugoslavia If Demands Fail

Croatian Leader Says Autonomy Needed and if Not Granted Will Probably Lead to World War

'BELGRADE CLIQUE'

States Yugoslavia Can Only Remain Strong State by Dividing Country Into Equal States

By ROBERT PARKER
Associated Press Foreign Staff

Kupinec, Yugoslavia, Aug. 1 — (AP)—Charging that interference by "the Belgrade clique" threatened home rule aspirations of his people, Dr. Vladko Machek, the Croatian leader, said today that Croatia would secede from Yugoslavia unless his autonomy demands are met.

To the question, "won't that mean revolution?" the Peasant leader answered, "it will mean more—it will probably mean a world war."

Asked how he believed an independent Croatia with 5,000,000 inhabitants could live apart from the Serbs, Machek acknowledged there probably would be a protectorate over the Croats. Yugoslavia's total estimated population is 15,630,000.

As for Germany, bordering Yugoslavia on the northwest since the annexation of Austria, Machek said: "All right—Germany then—let her come and make order. Someone must take order in Yugoslavia. If Belgrade cannot make order in Yugoslavia, Germany can."

Why the Weather!

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Weather and the garden! The average temperatures for August for inland stations of United States and Canada are one or two degree lower than for July but those on the coasts are about the same or slightly warmer for August. In the North, very early beets, kohlrabi, and radishes may be sown. Onions should be pulled as soon as the tops begin to ripen, and then aired by allowing them to lie on the ground for two or three days; further drying may be continued in a well-ventilated room. Tomatoes may be slow ripening; if so, put in straw in a cold frame with glass in place. Continue the dusting of potatoes and other vegetables.

REV. W. D. CRAIG OF SHANNONVILLE DIES SUDDENLY

On Eve of Month's Holidays, Minister is Stricken—He Served Overseas in Great War—Has Been on Shannonville Charge for Two Years

Rev. W. D. Craig, United Church minister at Shannonville, for the past two years, died very suddenly at his home on Monday afternoon. He had conducted services as usual on Sunday and yesterday had washed his automobile and mowed the lawn on the eve of a month's holidays he was about to take. He went into the house and told Mrs. Craig he was not feeling very well. He lay down to rest. He appeared to be resting comfortably and some time later Mrs. Craig asked him how he was but received no answer. Help was summoned but was of no avail as he had expired. He was but forty-four years of age.

The late Mr. Craig was a member of the Orange Order and chaplain of the Shannonville Lodge.

The funeral will be held on Wednesday morning at the house, thence to the Shannonville church. After the service, the body will be taken to Merivale for burial.

Mr. Craig came to Shannonville circuit from Roblin. His present circuit included Shannonville, Melrose, Lonsdale and Salem charges.

His is the third death in the family within one year, his father and his brother's wife having predeceased him recently.

He had been doing very fine work on the Shannonville charge and his death is a very great blow to those to whom he has ministered faithfully and to the community in which he has been living. The deepest sympathy is felt for Mrs. Craig in her great loss.

Born in Merivale, Ont., the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Craig, the deceased graduated from Merivale schools, later graduating with a Bachelor of Arts degree from Queen's University.

Joining the ministry of the church he entered his first work in the mission field of Saskatchewan, later being transferred to Chalk River, Ont. Later years saw him at the pastorate of Roblin, Ont., where he served faithfully until he was sent to his last charge at Shannonville.

Previous to his joining the church the late Mr. Craig, entered the Canadian Army serving with an infantry regiment, for a period of eighteen months.

Surviving are his widow, the former Isa Ramage, two brothers, John and Samuel E., both of Merivale, and three sisters. Mrs. Jos. Stinson, Merivale, and the Miss W. A. Craig of Greenbank, Ont., and Miss Delma Craig of Ottawa.

The funeral notice appears elsewhere in this edition.

CLAIMS 3 REGIMENTS FORMED IN DANZIG

Warsaw, Aug. 1 (Or-Havas)—Under the title "the full truth about Danzig," the semi-official newspaper Gazeta Polska, today listed what it said were verified details of the recent military development of the free city.

Before the March crisis there were in Danzig 1,000 men of the police who have since been reorganized into three regiments of 1,500 men each," the paper said. "Two of these regiments have already been formed and the third is in process of being formed."

M. P.'S TO SPEND VACATION NEAR BRITISH CAPITAL

Chamberlain's View Dark but Hopeful of International Situation

TACIT WARNING

Observers View Words of Chamberlain as Hint to Germany Way Still Lies Open

London, Aug. 1—(CP)—The cabinet will remain within easy call of Prime Minister Chamberlain throughout parliament's August-September "danger period" holiday.

Taking their cue from the Prime Minister's dark but still hopeful view of the international picture, the ministers for the most part have decided to spend their holidays at nearby country homes or on short trips.

Discussion of the far-eastern situation with Japan and negotiations for a British-French-Soviet pact are expected to keep both the Prime Minister and Viscount Halifax, Foreign Secretary, close to their offices after parliament rises Friday.

8,000 TRANSIENTS SEEK WORK IN TOBACCO FIELDS

Quest for Employment Hopeless Authorities State

YIELD NOT HEAVY

Delhi, Ont., Aug. 1—(CP)—Hundreds of transients, men and women, youths and girls, began anew today a quest for work in Norfolk County's spreading tobacco fields, a quest authorities say is hopeless. Each hour brought scores of others from many parts of Canada into the district.

The influx of transients is a seasonal movement in Ontario's tobacco-growing counties which extent along the coast of Lake Erie from Simcoe to St. Thomas. But this year the growers say unfavorable weather conditions have reduced the crop and no work is available for other than district residents.

Estimates last night placed the number of work-seekers in the area at from 8,000 to 10,000. Police Chief Ernest Platt of Delhi placed the number of men and women in the town at 3,000, more than doubling Delhi's normal population of 2,300. Their presence created a problem for police authorities who said many citizens are apprehensive that disorders may result.

Firemen Answer Two Calls to Fire In Port Hope Store

Port Hope, Ont., Aug. 1—(CP)—Firemen received two calls early this morning to the store of J. T. Steen, Walton Street, when a blaze, coupled with dense smoke and water, caused considerable damage to the interior of the store and stock in trade.

The brigade received its first call at 3.30 o'clock, and its second summons at 6 o'clock. Cause of the blaze is unknown.

Occupants of apartments above the store and in adjacent suites of the building were forced to the streets by the heavy smoke. Smoke filtered into nearby stores but without doing any damage.

Germany Unlikely to Declare War on Either France, Britain Says Eminent English Writer

London, July 31—(CP)—While it is Chancellor Hitler's ambition to live in history as a bloodless conqueror, "the present condition of strain can hardly last much longer," writes G. Ward Price, English journalist and friend and biographer of Hitler and Premier Mussolini.

In a new book, "Year of Reckoning", the foreign correspondent of the Daily Mail attempts to guess what Germany is going to do next.

To the question, "will Britain be involved in war?" Price writes:

"The Germans are unlikely to declare war on France or Britain. If a conflict comes, it will probably arise from the resistance of some state guaranteed by these two countries, or else from a clash between the western powers and Italy in the Mediterranean."

Here is his forecast on what Germany plans for the future:

Germany is determined to extend her authority over the whole of Eastern Europe. To do this she must go through Poland or Hungary. Poland is too tough a nut; Hungary is easy.

The fate contemplated for Hungary is partition into a number of German protectorates based on pre-war frontiers. This means the detachment from Yugoslavia of her Croat minority, giving Germany access to the Adriatic. Italy would be compensated with Dalmatia.

Serbs Tough Fighters

Yugoslavia may prove a difficult proposition; the Serbs are tough fighters. The next stage will be a triple push:

1. Along the shore of the Baltic to the Estonian frontier.
2. The carving of a semi independent Ukrainian Republic out of South Poland and South Russia.
3. Along the north shore of the Black Sea, including the Crimea and the Caucasus.

By this time Poland will be between the jaws of a nutcracker — just as Czecho-Slovakia once was—and the final stage may be her conquest.

The question of colonies will not be raised, except as a diversion, until 1941 or 1942 and the author bases this forecast on a remark made by Hitler.

Unless the alternative of a solution of problems at an international conference is reached "the conflict of aims and interests in Europe will almost inevitably reached its climax in war," Price concludes.

Reviewing the Czecho-Slovakian crisis the author says that had Hitler been able to make arrangements for his yacht to leave Kiel in time he would have met Prime Minister Chamberlain in England instead of having the British statesman fly to Berchtesgaden for the second of their series of three meetings.

POLICE CLEAR "RIOT ZONE" OUTSIDE PLANT

Pickets Band Into Flying Squad Patrols to Harrass Police

CONTEST ACTION

Cleveland, Aug. 1—(AP)—Pickets banded into flying squad patrols today as police cleared the "riot zone" outside General Motors' huge Fisher Body plant where nearly 300 besieged workers spent the night.

Strikers turned to behind-the-lines picketing as a city proclamation was enforced prohibiting "riotous assembly or mass formation" within 500 yards of the 40-acre plant and limiting pickets to five at each gate.

Clashes between police and strikers sent 46 persons to hospitals yesterday. Safety director Eliot Ness directed clearing of the area, which included the Fisher local union headquarters. Fewer than 100 persons were at the main gate at the time. More than 150 policemen, including a mounted section, remained on guard.

MAIL-CAR CREW BATTLE BANDITS, SAVE $56,000

Army Payroll Reaches Destination Through Courage of Crew

ALLEGED ROBBER HIT

Champaign, Ill., Aug. 1—(AP)—A $58,000 United States army payroll was safe today because a courageous railway mail car crew gave battle with bullets to two would-be train robbers.

One gun-toting robber who officials said gave the name of John F. Waldon of Chicago was under guard in a hospital at nearby Urbana. He was shot in the right leg.

His companion jumped from the train, staggered as though wounded, but escaped in an automobile driven by a confederate.

Heroes of the frustrated hold up yesterday aboard a speeding Illinois Central train were mail clerks Guy O'Hern of Chicago, who was slugged with a pistol butt, and Earl Boothman of Chicago, who shot it out with the robbers.

Boothman said the overall-clad robbers boarded the train at On-

PROVINCE-WIDE SEARCH BY POLICE AFTER JAIL BREAK

Made Escape in Gangland Fashion by Sawing Cell Bars

BREAK IS PROBED

Dropped 20 Feet to Exercise Yard and Then Clambered Up Rope Ladder

Hamilton, Aug. 1—(CP)—A province-wide police search for John Chylinski, 22-year-old prisoner of Barton Street jail, who made a spectacular break for freedom last night in traditional gangland fashion by sawing cell bars, using bedclothing for a rope and scaling prison yard walls was being conducted today. Officials of the Provincial Secretary's Department launched an official inquiry into unexplained aspects of the episode.

J. Wilkie Lawrason, Sheriff, completed an inquiry this morning. He awaited the arrival of T. G. Gourlay, Acting Deputy Provincial Secretary of Prisons, who was sent to Hamilton to determine how Chylinski could have left his cell, carefully locking it after him, and then gone through an involved series of manoeuvres to reach the street.

"I have conducted my own investigation and am expecting officials from the Provincial Secretary's Department," the Sheriff said. "The problems I am trying to solve is how he opened his cell door. He must have worked some device to slip the lock."

Officials will endeavour to learn how Chylinski was able to emerge from his cell, said to have been double-bolted, enter a corridor without being observed by guards, proceed to the north end of the corridor and drop a rope made of bed coverings from the window adjacent

4 or 5 to 1 Against War In Year 1939

New York, Aug. 1—(AP)—J. M. Patterson, President of the New York News, said today in a cable dispatch to the News from The Hague, The Netherlands, that he believed "the chances are more than 10 to 1 against a general European war before September and 4 or 5 to 1 against war this year."

Reviewing his observations on a 10-day motor trip from Berlin to the Dutch border, Patterson commented:

"The reason I doubt war soon is the condition of the crops and the condition of the public works, particularly the junctions of the big motor roads built since Hitler came to power.

"What have these roads or autobahnen to do with war? Because they seem to have been built primarily for strategic purposes to increase the mobility of the German army; in a war on two or more fronts, they would increase the value of interior lines."

Patterson said "the Germans look well nourished, both the young and the old, but there is little food to spare and there is a clear shortage of wheat and milk products."

Citing damage to grain crops in Bavaria due to heavy rain, Patterson said: "I think the Germans will get their harvests home first, even if they intend to start something later."

Doctor Rigs Up Device to Save Boys, Uses Jar, Tube, Oxygen Drum

Idabel, Okla., Aug. 1—(AP)—Twin boys, four months old, owed their lives today to a young country doctor who rigged up an oxygen-breathing device from a fruit jar, four lengths of rubber tubing and a drum of ordinary welders' oxygen.

The infants are Charles and Larrie Faulkner, born April 8.

A few weeks ago they contracted whooping cough. Their condition grew serious the other day and their respiration nearly failed.

The physician, Dr. George K. Fisher, 29, sent out a hurry call for oxygen to a nearby welding shop. Then he obtained an ordinary fruit jar from the mother and four lengths of rubber tubing from the father, Louis Faulkner. He telephoned his office to send out a stomach pump.

By the time the drum of oxygen arrived, Dr. Fisher had most of his home-made apparatus ready. One tube was run through the cover to the bottom of the jar, which had been filled with sterilized water. The others were led just through the top. Two were placed in the nostrils of the twins and the oxygen released through the water, so it could be measured.

Once the infants' respiration was improved, Dr. Fisher fashioned a nose mask from the stomach pump and attached it to the remaining tube.

"The youngsters will come along all right now, I guess, but even after we had this thing rigged up they nearly died," Dr. Fisher said.

Thos. Prestridge Shot in Forehead, Gun Found Near

45 - Year - Old Wife of One Month Apparently Strangled — Body Recovered by Three Men Just Before House Falls in Ruins

GIRL BADLY WOUNDED

Daughter of Dead Woman by Former Marriage Found Shot Through Forehead and is in Grave Condition in Hospital at Cobourg — Police Hope to Find Out Story of Tragedy When Girl Revives

Grafton, Ont., Aug. 1—(CP) — Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Prestridge, married a month, were found dead today in their burning farmhouse near here—the 35-year-old farmer shot throught the forehead and his 45-year-old wife apparently strangled.

Mrs. Prestridge's daughter by a previous marriage, 23-year-old Marjorie Moyse, also was found in the house in critical condition from a wound in the forehead. Rushed to hospital at Cobourg, seven miles west of here, she was said to be in grave condition.

Girl May be Able to Tell Story

Police hoped to find out what happened at the farmhouse when the girl recovers consciousness. She revived momentarily after reaching hospital but lapsed back into a coma after saying a few words to a police officer by her bed.

Clifford Avery, a part-time employee of Prestridge, discovered the bodies when he saw smoke coming from the farmhouse, one mile east of Grafton on No. 2 highway. With two truck drivers, Herman Keetch and Frank Hill of Oshawa, he broke down the front door of the house.

Prestridge's Body at Foot of Stairs

They found Prestridge's nude body at the foot of the stairs, a rifle nearby.

A transport truck driven by Charlie Hill of Oshawa was backed up to the verandah of the house and the men climbed to the top and entered the second storey through an open window. Miss Moyse was lying nude and unconscious in the room.

Bruises on Wife's Throat

While the men were taking Miss Moyse out, Din Calnan and Frank Cameron fought their way up the smoke-filled staircase to another bedroom where they found Mrs. Prestridge's body. There were bruises on her throat and her face was purple.

A few minutes after Mrs. Prestridge's body was removed the house was burned to the ground.

The Prestridges and Miss Moyse moved to Grafton after the recent marriage. They had lived on farms north of Cobourg before that.

Avery, who helped Prestridge with the harvest yesterday, told police that everything appeared to be all right then. He said Prestridge, his wife and the girl all appeared normal and happy.

QUITS DRIVING CAR, GOES BACK TO HORSE

Lucknow, Ont., Aug. 1 (CP)—Albert Towle, 83, reversed the usual order of things. It is common to read about men driving horses for years and finally decide to buy an automobile. Towle decided to stop driving a car and use a 50-year-old two-wheeled cart drawn by a horse.

GUNNERS NEED NOT BE EINSTEINS

London, Aug. 1 (CP)—The Naval Air Service wants more gunners, and they don't have to be Einsteins. Instead of examinations in mathematics, all they will have to pass is a special "intelligence test" of five questions, none about gunnery. Here's a sample: "Brown is sitting on the left of Robinson. Jones is sitting on the right of Robinson, which of the three is in the middle.

Four Children Buried Beneath Load of Grain

Picton, Aug. 1—Four children were buried beneath a load of grain but were rescued in time by four adults who were present at the time. One of the children, Joanne Rozamiak, a Toronto visitor, suffered a fractured ankle.

The accident occurred at Black Creek, when the rack slipped from a wagon as it was descending a hill. The grain was thrown into a heap, and while the children were buried beneath it the adults were able to keep on top. The children were soon rescued, very much frightened.

Six holiday visitors at Black Creek had asked Harry and Stirling Grimmon if they might enjoy a ride on the top of the load to the barn and their request was granted. The mishap occurred when the wagon was nearing the bottom of the hill. Stirling Grimmon, who was driving the team, managed to prevent them from running away but suffered several strained muscles. Miss Florence Hornebrooke of Toronto had her glasses broken. All were shaken up as a result of the spill.

Withdrawal of Liners Causes Comment

London, Aug. 1—(CP Cable)—Commenting today upon the impending withdrawal of a pair of Harrison liners from the Leeward and Windward Islands and British Guiana service The Evening News (Independent) said:

"After October British citizens officials and private persons, on their journeys between Britain and these most ancient and loyal of British Dependencies will have to travel in foreign ships heavily subsidized by foreign governments.

"The West Indies have for long been a somewhat neglected and depressed corner of the Empire. Is this latest step calculated to warm their loyalty or make them believe Britain cares about their fate?"

Duke of Devonshire May Be Canada's Next Governor General

Liverpool, England, Aug. 1—(CP Cable)—The London Letter in the Liverpool Post (Liberal) today said the Duke of Devonshire "is being spoken of as a likely successor to Lord Tweedsmuir" as Governor General of Canada.

It added that the Duke would be following in his father's footsteps.

The 19th Duke of Devonshire has been Under-Secretary for the Dominions and Chairman of the Overseas Settlement Board since 1936. Aged 44, he succeded his father in 1938.

The ninth Duke was Governor General of Canada from 1916 to 1921.

Lord Tweedsmuir assumed office in 1935. The customary term for Governors General has been five years.

BERRY PICKERS LEAVE FOR P.E.C. PATCHES

Fifteen berry-pickers left the city yesterday enroute for the berry patches of Prince Edward County, where recent rains have brought a crop that was slowly drying up, a new lease of life.

Pickers left the city in trucks supplied by anxious farmers, and returned the same way last night. Crops were reported as being good.

CHIPMUNK CAUSES EXCITEMENT IN OFFICE

Believed to have entered the city in a truckload of farm produce a small chipmunk caused temporary excitement in a city relief office on Saturday morning.

After curiously investigating the interior of the office, while startled stenographers looked on, the little striped animal disappeared through a door.

A AND N VETS TO ATTEND DRUMHEAD SERVICE

Members of the Army and Navy Veterans in Canada, Belleville Branch 201 have received an invitation to attend a drumhead service in Cobourg on Sunday. The service is being held under the sponsorship of the Canadian Legion, and it is expected that a large number of veteran organizations of the district will attend.

Local veterans will travel by bus which leaves the Front Street club rooms shortly after noon.

GRADE TEMPERATURES MUST BE OBEYED

Under regulations strictly enforced by the Dominion Department all cheese graders have been given definite and rigid orders not to grade cheese whose temperatures are above 70 degrees or lower than 50 degrees. Lately some holdup in grading has occurred in this central section due to the fact the cheese have been too warm for grading, it was reported today by J. L. Irwin, Dominion grader.

"It is up to the factories to heed these regulations and to observe them. We have no choice in the matter," stated Mr. Irwin today. "And cheese which are above or below these temperatures definitely will not be graded."

To ensure proper temperatures for grading, cheese should be placed in cold storage for a matter of 48 hours at least during the summer heat, it was pointed out. This will put them in the proper condition to receive the highest score possible.

NEW CONSTRUCTION CONTINUES STRIDE

Building permits to the value of $22,200.00 were issued in Belleville during the month of July. MAKERS GET USED TO FORMS IN TRIPLICATE

Cheesemakers of the Central District have lately become more accustomed to the work and detail connected with the filling out in triplicate of the special forms provided by the department, made necessary by the new point system of grading, it is reported by J. L. Irwin, district grader. At first many of the makers found the forms confusing, and the extra work an onerous task not usually associated with the industry. But since becoming accustomed to the work, little difficulty is being experienced.

TRYING TO COOL OFF FOXBORO PIG DROWNS

Believed due to its effort to escape the heat and dryness of Saturday last, a valuable 100-pound pig owned by Harold Longwell of Foxboro scrambled and climbed up the protecting concrete curbing of a deep pond of the farm one-half mile west of the village and tumbled in the fairly deep water. After apparently swimming round and round the pond for a lengthy period in an effort to climb out again, the animal finally sank and was found drowned by the owner some time afterward.

LARGE LIVESTOCK ENTRY FOR FAIR

While livestock entries at the Belleville Fair compare favorably with those of former years, the number this year will in all likelihood exceed it, if entries received up to the present time are any indication, Secretary R. H. Ketcheson stated today.

"They are coming in very well, and we expect a splendid exhibit of all branches of livestock," he added.

The date for entries closes on August 18th.

Mr. Atkinson is one of the outstanding leaders among students of the College.

Police Blotter

Apprehended loitering at the rear of McFee's jewellery store early today, two transients, who gave their names as John Potter and Eric Knapp, no address given, were arrested by P.C. Taylor at 1.35 a.m. today on charges of vagrancy. The men were remanded to the custody of the County jail until Friday.

P.C. Taylor was patrolling his beat shortly after midnight when he observed two men hiding in the shadows behind a verandah at the rear of McFee's jewellery store. The officer called upon the men to surrender. When questioned the men said they were merely seeking a quiet place to sleep. They were accommodated at the police station, until this morning ,when H. B. Wilson, local Justice of the Peace, remanded them until Friday on charges of vagrancy.

Shortly after daybreak today an automobile, the property of Wm. Heath, Harold, was stolen from the Heath farm. Two suspicious looking characters were seen in the vicinity early today. Mr. Heath informed Provincial Police after the car had been taken. The vehicle was a 1935 Ford sedan bearing Ontario licence plates No. 24-N-14.

Odessa police also reported the theft of a 1934 Plymouth motor car this morning and bearing licence plates No. 4 C 984.

Inspector Frank Gardner, of the O.P.P., today issued a warning to motorists, who park their motor cars in the vicinity of Shannonville to keep their parked vehicles locked, whenever possible. Last evening a tourist reported the theft of a camera, aero-pack, two fishing rods, a reel and one pair of shoes, taken from a parked car in Shannonville, Provincial Police today were informed.

BOXING RING COLLAPSES ON FIVE MEN

Montreal, Aug. 1 (CP)—Five men were injured in the Exchange stadium last night when the boxing ring, under which they had sought shelter from rain, collapsed under the weight of 50 other fans who had climbed up on the platform.

The men dodged under the ring when a heavy rain storm broke.

Meantime, officials hoisted a canvas over the ring and 50 other spectators climbed under the shelter, causing a support to buckle and the centre of the ring to cave in.

GRAIN, FIELDS NEVER SO CLEAN

Alva Simmons, District Thresher, Discusses Appearance of Fields

"I don't know when I've seen grain as clean and free from weed seeds and foreign matter as it is this year," stated Alva Simmons, district thresher now engaged in the first of the season's heavy work through the section. "Nor have I seen the grain fields as clean and neat as they are at present."

From reports of others connected with the agricultural industry today, it is apparent that this season's crop of grain is exceptionally clean of noxious weeds, while fields this year have been comparatively bare in spite of the reportedly heavy infestation of weeds in the majority of sections.

Part of the explanation of the fewer weeds on district farms this season is accounted for by the fact that more growers are concentrating on better and better crops. Of late years field crop competitions have been heavier and of larger registration with considerably more interest showing. This has led to the gradual clearing up and cleaning up of former weed-grown acreage on which now thrive some of the best crops of Ontario, according to one local official.

Heavier use of seed cleaning plants through the section has also resulted in cleaner grains and seeds.

REDUCE LOUDNESS OF AUTO HORNS

London, Aug. 1 (CP)—British automobile horns may only be as loud as a busy room of typists. The Ministry of Transport has reached an agreement with manufacturers limiting the noise made by horns to 100 phons—a phon being a unit of noise output of a typing room would also be about 100 phons.

BLUE RASPBERRIES AND TOMATOES MARKET FEATURES

Sweet Corn Declines in Price to 15 Cents a Dozen

CHERRIES SCARCE

The rich scarlets of ripe home-grown tomatoes vied with the reds and blues of raspberries today as the feature attraction of a heavy early-week offerings of produce on the city market.

A sharp decline in the price of the tomatoes was noted today as increasing quantities of the vegetable was apparent. Berry-box lots dropped from twenty cents quotations of Saturday to ten cents today while eleven-quart containers were offered at seventy and seventy-five cents.

Sweet corn likewise noted a decrease in price with good quality ears selling today for fifteen cents the dozen. Stocks were fairly heavy and buying was brisk during the early hours.

Red raspberry quotations were steady with boxes offered at ten cents each. Blues sold at three boxes for twenty-five cents with slight reductions for crate-lots. Cherries were scarcer than usual with Montmorencies offered at forty-five and fifty cents the basket.

Potatoes were firm at thirty cents the peck with new vegetables selling at prevailing prices.

A small offering of whitefish and lake trout sold at seventeen cents and twenty cents the pound respectively.

Gable Turns He-Man To Overpower Youth in Closet

Clarke Gable and Carole Lombard Have Another Laugh

Van Nuys, Calif., Aug. 1 (AP)—Clark Gable and Carole Lombard, whose uproarious courtship was a matter of note, still enjoy a good laugh.

They had it when the screen's No. 1 male star turned he-man at home yesterday to overpower and disarm an 18-year-old Polish youth he found hiding in the closet of his dressing-room.

The No. 1 he-man of the films said he regretted he had to turn Willard J. Broski over to the police. The officers said the youth probably would be given a psychiatric examination before any charges were filed.

Gable had just finished a shower bath and was about to get into his clothes when he saw the door of his dressing room closet move and the tip of a man's shoe protrude.

"Come out of there," Gable yelled. Broski came out and Gable leaped on him. A revolver, taken from the gun room of the Gables' Van Nuys home, fell to the floor in the scuffle.

Difficulties in Way Of Wartime Haven

By J. F. Sanderson
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Aug. 1—(CP Cable) — "Insuperable difficulties" stand in the way of using Canada as a wartime haven for British children, mothers and infirm people, Sir Thomas Inskip, Dominions Secretary, told the House of Commons today.

He was asked by Rev. Reginald Sorensen, Labor, whether the government "has considered the desirability and possibility in the event of hostilities involving this country of the temporary settlement of suitable infirm people, mothers and children in Canada."

BODIES FOUND IN CAR

New Castle, Pa., Aug. 1—(AP) — Coroner Piper Byers said today he believed a former New Castle High School athlete and steel worker shot and killed his uncle and then turned the gun on himself as they sat in an automobile on a country road near here.

A farmer found the bodies of Edward Dombroski, 24, and his 45-year-old bachelor uncle, Ignatz Dombroski, last night when he investigated the continuous blaring of the machine's horn. A pistol lay beside the bodies.

OBITUARY

LATE JOSEPH EARLE SMITH

The funeral of Joseph Earle Smith, late residence Oshawa, Ont., and a former resident of Belleville, took place from the Belleville Burial Company Funeral Home, Campbell Street, Monday afternoon. The service in the chapel and at the graveside in Belleville Cemetery was conducted by the Rev. J. W. Flatt.

The bearers were three brothers, Messrs. Percy Smith, Croft Smith, Rae Smith, two sons, Messrs. Clifford Smith and Howard Smith, son-in-law, Mr. W. Richards.

LATE MRS. LESLIE A. BROAD (Bancroft)

Monday afternoon the funeral of Mrs. Leslie A. Broad, who passed away in the Belleville General Hospital on Saturday, July 29th, took place from the residence of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Delyea at Bancroft, Ont., to St. Paul's United Church in that village and was very largely attended. The service in the church and at the graveside in Mount Pleasant Cemetery was conducted by the pastor, the Rev. W. J. Davis.

During the church service, Mrs. Thomas Jones of Madoc sang, "No Disappointment in Heaven" and Mr. Allan Porter sang "The Old Rugged Cross." At the graveside, Mrs. W. J. Davis sang "Good Night and Good Morning."

The bearers were three brothers-in-law, Messrs. Geo. Broad, Geo. Thompson and Ray Watson; a cousin, Mr. Geo. Twiddy, and friends, Messrs. Hugh Vance and Milton Brough.

The floral tributes were beautiful and many in number. The following six pupils who attend Mr. Leslie A. Broad's school were the flower-bearers: Ronald Plumley, Allan Joynt, James Munro, Cecil McAlpine, Terrance Mahoney and Howard Vance.

LATE ALEXANDER DUNN (Wellington)

Bereted veterans of the Great War in Wellington and its environs paid fitting tribute to a departed comrade on Sunday when they accorded military honors to the late Alexander Dunn, fifty-three year old veteran who succumbed suddenly to war injuries in his home in the lake side village on Friday last.

With bowed heads, the bemedalled veterans slowly passed the flag-draped bier of their dead comrade and reverently placed blood-red poppies on the bright colors of the draped Union Jack.

The band of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment played the funeral dirge, "The Dead March," as the cortege left the late residence of the deceased veteran.

A large crowd of friends and relatives of the late Alexander Dunn accompanied the cortege to Wellington Cemetery where last rites were given.

Pallbearers were members of the Wellington Branch of the Canadian Legion of which the dead veteran was a highly valued member.

1,500,000 GAS HELMETS FOR BRITISH BABES

LONDON, Aug. 1—(CP)—The Government today began distribution of 1,500,000 gas helmets for protection of babies in event of war.

The helmets resemble a diver's headgear. Air is pumped in through an accordion-like device on the side. They are tied around the waist.

The new devices were not given directly to parents, but will be held in convenient central depots.

STATE TROOPERS PATROL STREETS

Strikers Seek Higher Wages and Reinstatement of Four Employees

South Barre, Mass., Aug. 1 (AP)—State Troopers patrolled the streets here today in an effort to avert riots and bloodshed feared by Barre selectmen in connection with a strike at the Barre Wool Combing Company.

Twenty-five troopers took over last night and cleared the streets of a throng estimated at 3,000 persons, breaking up fist fights outside the gates of the truck plant and sending loiterers to their homes. More than 280 workers on a night shift were held inside the building for about an hour while police dispersed the crowd. Several windows in the plant were broken by bricks.

The strikers, members of an American Federation of Labor Union, were seeking higher wages and reinstatement of four employees.

A small group was permitted to continue picketing in front of the plant after the officers took charge.

Anthony Valente, Union organizer, said last night's trouble started when a picket and a spectator came to blows following an exchange of words.

About 200 of the plant's 1,000 workers are on strike, officials said.

Enjoys Holiday At O. A. C. Camp

Tweed — (Special) — Mrs. (Dr.) M. G. Dales, who has been a patient in Belleville General Hospital for the past two weeks, returned home on Sunday much improved in health following a serious operation.

Douglas Connor who spent the past two weeks at the Ontario Athletic Commission Camp at Lake Couchiching, returned home on Saturday. There were one hundred and five junior boys fifteen yeas of age and younger at the camp, winners in their district meets and representing Ontario centres from Kenora to Ottawa. These youngsters were given two weeks of training in athletics under the direction of one of Canada's finest athletes, Alex Wilson, who placed second in the Olympic half-mile in 1932. He was assisted by a corps of competent trainers and instructors. Among the frequent visitors at the camp were the Conacher brothers, Lionel and Charlie, of hockey fame.

An athletic meet was held on Saturday afternoon just before the camp broke up with all the boys competing in their specialties. Douglas placed second in the shot-put with a mark of 42 feet 10 3-4 inches.

Approximately three inches of rain have fallen over Tweed and district during the past three days, bringing to an end the longest dry spell of the season.

Rev. Merritt Price of Actinolite, was in charge of the service at Tweed United Church on Sunday morning. He gave a most practical address in which he warned his hearers of the danger of wasting their energies in undertakings of secondary importance and having little with which to serve God. Reg. Wilson sang "The Holy City" very effectively. Mr. Price will be the preacher for the next three Sundays.

During the absence, on holidays, of Mr. W. S. Gordon, superintendent of Tweed United Church, Mr. S. H. Connor and Mr. T. E. Moffat will be acting superintendents.

4th Sidney

4th Sidney — A very enjoyable afternoon was spent on Wednesday when the young people on this line entertained the members of the L. A. of the Stone church also guests from Zions Hill, Wallbridge, Cannifton and Bethany, on the spacious lawn of Mr. and Mrs. C. Vermilyea. Small tables dotted the lawn and a very appetizing lunch was served. Everyone enjoyed themselves until 5 o'clock when all wended their way home hoping that soon another afternoon would be spent together.

The Sunday school picnic was held at Oak Lake on Tuesday. It being a busy time not many attended.

Mr. and Mrs. George Beer spent Wednesday with Mr. and Mrs. A. Woods.

Mrs. Lough and children are spending a few days with her parents.

Miss Clara Belle MacPherson of Bermuda is spending a week with Mr. and Mrs. F. Harris and renewing old friendships on this line. All are glad to see her again.

Miss Lila Woods and sister, Gwendolyn, spent a few days recently with their sister, Mrs. Lough of Marsh Hill.

Mrs. Shearer and children are spending their vacation with Mrs. Shearer's parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. McMurter.

Miss Clara Belle MacPherson and Miss Lela Woods spent Thursday with Miss Lenore Vermilyea.

Sound of the threshing machine is again heard and reports are that the grain is turning out fair. The farmers are busy cutting their grain as it has ripened rapidly on account of the very dry weather.

Mrs. Hannah, with her son, spent a day recently with her sister, Mrs. J. Wannamaker of Madoc.

Four young men, W. McMurter, G. Yarwood, Geo. Woods and E. Eaton started for the west on Tuesday morning for the harvest months. Friends wish them success in their work.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Putnam and Mrs. Montgomery of Michigan, were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. Detlor.

On Friday afternoon a number of young ladies met at the home of Miss Peggy Ketcheson in honor of the bride-to-be, Miss Reta Woods and presented her with a tea towel shower. A very happy time was spent.

Mrs. Frank Harris and Miss Clara Belle MacPherson spent Friday afternoon with Mrs. A. Walt and also took tea with Mr. and Mrs. Nobbs.

Sister, Brother Meet Tonight After Forty Years

Napanee, Ont., Aug. 1 (CP)—Not having seen each other for 40 years, Mrs. Agnes Young and her brother, Peter Scott, will meet tonight when he steps off the Vancouver train at Toronto, completing the journey from his home in New Zealand. Both were born in Scotland and Mrs. Young came to Napanee when a small girl. Her brother was a deep water sailor until he settled down 30 years ago.

His wife died two years ago and there are four children.

Following a short visit to Napanee, Mr. Scott and his sister are leaving for a vacation in Scotland. He plans to return to New Zealand this fall.

Optimistic Reports Given At Rotary Club Luncheon

All Committees Functioning Smoothly in Anticipation of Fine Regatta

TWO BANDS ATTEND

A general air of optimism pervaded the weekly banquet of the Belleville Rotary Club at its noon luncheon yesterday when General Chairman of the Regatta Committee, Vice-President MacLean Haig, and the chairmen of his various committees, gave clubmen favorable reports on arrangements for their first annual regatta, being held off Massassaga Park on Civic Holiday.

"The committees have been functioning smoothly and efficiently, and everything seems to be going well," Chairman Haig stated.

"Everything is fine as far as the racing committee is concerned," Chairman Lloyd Hicks reported. "The course will be laid out within a day or so while the docks and pits are in readiness. Scoring and timing arrangements have been completed, while the official barge will arrive from Picton a day or so before the regatta. Entries are still coming in and present indications point to a record entry list with international champions and others competing."

Fixing Road

Chairman Ken Dyson, Traffic, reported the roads to Massassaga Park in good condition. "Mr. Wallbridge is fixing up the road near the gate. Traffic will use the good road during the morning and early hours of the afternoon, when the old trail will be used to handle the traffic. Roads have been marked and indication pointers placed so that people will have no difficulty in finding their way to the park."

The Rotary Trophy, emblematic of the District Softball Championship will be sought by four outstanding teams of the city and district, Corby's and Shell-Oil of Belleville, Mountain View, Prince Edward County and the Wallbridge team of Sidney.

A pretentious sports program for boys and girls and men and women has been drawn up with attractive prizes for each event, Chairman Joe Shortt, of the Sports Committee reported.

Posters, bills and extensive newspaper advertising has broadcast the event over a large area, Chairman Harry Moorman told the clubmen. Nine district weeklies will carry large advertisements this week, while in all probability the Peterboro, Oshawa, Brockville and other dailies will also carry ads.

The beautiful Belleville-Sargent Trophy, emblematic of the championship of the meet, is ready and gleaming in its bright gold with base of red cedar. Other trophies, the Gerald Jenkins Cup; the Riggs Motor Sales Trophy and the Charles A. Cameron Cup will be on display within a day or so. A beautiful silver cocktail set has been donated by Rotarian Mack Robertson, and will be given away as the special door prize at the Grand Ball to be held in the Arena on the night of the holiday. The $600 boat will also find its owner at this function.

Two Bands in Attendance

The R.C.A.F. Band of the Trenton base, sixty strong, and the Belleville Municipal Band under Lieut. Fred Jobson will be in attendance and will play a continuous program of music from one to six p.m. Refreshments will be served from the various booths on the grounds, and will be "manned" if present plans materialize, by the Rotary Anns. Members of the Kinsmen Club of Belleville have volunteered their assistance to the Rotarians, it was reported.

Games will be played at the grounds in the afternoon and in the Hume Arena in the evening. Loud-speaking equipment through the courtesy of Arthur Young, Stewart-Warner Company, will broadcast the days doings.

Emphasis was placed on the importance of the sale of tickets. President Howard Clark, who occupied the chair reported that this important phase was being well taken care of.

A meeting of the committee chairman will be held in the Y. M. C. A. on Thursday evening, Chairman Haig stated, asking for one hundred percent attendance.

3rd. Sidney

3rd Sidney—Running a Christian Race, as taken from the text of Hebrews 12: 1-2, was the subject chosen by Rev. L. W. Scott at the service at Aiken's on Sunday morning. Mr. Scott urged that Christians set aside each week sin that would hinder in running the Christian race with patience, courage, faith and trust. Contestants looking unto Jesus would come out victorious and win the crown of life. During the service Miss Edith Hogle sang "For He Is So Precious to Me." At the close of the Sunday school session Mrs. W. H. Kells conducted the Temperance program, bringing startling figures concerning the consumption of strong drink in the province. Why stress the point that liquor sales bring revenue to the treasury asked Mrs. Kells, when it comes from the people, and could be used to much better advantage in other ways.

The Misses Marian and Barbara Allan have returned to their home in Belleville after a week's holiday at the home of their aunt, Mrs. Will Bush.

PROVING HIS WORTH

Proving his worth to Il Duce, Achille Starace, 55-year-old secretary of the Fascist party is seen carrying his bicycle on his shoulders, during a route march to test the physical fitness of leaders of the Fascist party.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Saylor and Mr. and Mrs. Selburn Westover spent the dinner hour on Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. E. K. Hubble and family.

Mrs. Jas. P. Elliott of Cobourg is a guest for a few weeks at the home of her niece, Mrs. Wilmot Bailey.

Miss Clara Adams and her sister, Mrs. Hartford, are spending this week at Muskoka.

Mrs. Wm. Wheeler is visiting relatives in Napance.

Mr. Wilkie Orr and Mr. and Mrs. John Orr spent Sunday in Sydenham. Mr. Frank Vallier, who has spent the past week with Mr. and Mrs. Orr, returned to his home in Sydenham on Sunday.

Mr. Wm. Bowers spent Sunday evening with Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Adams.

Relatives and friends gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Hubble, north of Frankford, on Friday last, it being the occasion of Mrs. Hubble's birthday. A delectable meal was served at the noon hour and during the afternoon Mrs. Hubble, who is confined to a wheel chair a sufferer of arthritis, was presented with a radio. Mr. and Mrs. S. Westover, Mrs. H. Hubble and family attended this gathering.

The week-end showers were very welcome in this district. The pasture fields were especially dry resulting in lower milk production throughout the country.

Despite the extreme heat of Thursday last, the Aiken's W. A. was well-attended at the home of Mrs. Wm. and Mrs. Ken Bush.

The president, Mrs. Fred Westover, opened the meeting with the theme song, followed by the Lord's Prayer.

After a hymn the Scripture was read by Mrs. Ken Bush, with comments on the Scripture by Mrs. Leon McMullen.

Twenty-three members answered the roll call with a "Household Hint." A reading, "A Good Housewife Speaks," was given by Mrs. Perry Hamilton, and a delightful solo "My Task," by Mrs. Earl Bush.

During the business session an interesting letter was read by Mrs. S. Westover from the former pastor, Rev. H. B. Johnson, who now resides at Douglas, Ontario.

The work shirt was on display that was to be presented to Mr. Wm. Wheeler, the winner in the "travelling shirt" contest. Plans were made for a tea to be held at the home of Mrs. Arthur Saylor.

The new pastor, Rev. L. W. Scott and Mrs. Scott, were present each bringing greetings to the society members.

Readings—"Life is a Garden" by Mrs. E. K. Hubble and "What's wrong with the Pudding" by Mrs. C. McMullen and the hymn "Blest Be the Tie That Binds" brought the program to a close. The president voiced her appreciation to the hostess and to the members for leaving their homes in the extreme heat. The Benediction was pronounced by the Rev. Scott. A social half hour was spent and a delicious lunch served.

Troop Strength in India Reduced Considerably

London, Aug. 1 (CP)—Troop strength in India has been reduced considerably, Lieut.-Colonel A. J. Murhead, Parliamentary Under-secretary of State for India, told the House of Commons Monday.

Major-General Sir Alfred Knox, Conservative, had asked for the strength of the British army in India and the comparative figure of two years ago.

"The strength of the British army in India on July 1, 1939, was 2,630 officers and 37,668 men," Colonel Murhead replied. "At the corresponding date in 1937 the strength was 3,052 officers and 52,387 men."

8,000 TRANSIENTS

More than 800 transients were forced to run for shelter last night when heavy rain drove them from the grounds of the municipal park, where they have been sleeping recently. Many were given shelter in a barn on the outskirts of the town and others were allowed to sleep in the old drive-sheds of two churches.

Ontario's 98,427,900-pound tobacco crop was worth $20,000,000 in 1938, but growers said today this year's yield will not approach that record production. An extended drought has cut down the estimated yield, though heavy rains last weekend improved new crop prospects.

No disorders among the work-seekers so far have occurred but police in Delhi, Tillsonburg and other centres reported the transients have gathered on street corners. The groups have dispersed quietly when ordered to so by constables. At some points the men have been told to keep off the highways.

Only Two Officers

Only two police officers are stationed at Delhi, Chief Platt and Constable Sidney Bryson. Chief Platt said he and his constable have been working 22 hours a day in recent days. The chief constable said 95 per cent of the transients in the area are striving to obtain honest work but the other five per cent are trouble-makers.

The chief said the situation is "charged with dynamite." Some of the more troublesome element among the job-seekers have raided vegetable gardens for food. Bottles of milk have been stolen from doorsteps and several bicycle thefts have been reported.

Theft of an automobile in Tillsonburg was attributed to transients. Constable Bryson saw the car entering Delhi and a 75-mile-an-hour chase ensued. The car was found abandoned 14 miles from Delhi early yesterday. Two men seen in the machine had disappeared.

Sidney Crossing

Sidney Crossing — The regular monthly meeting of the Aikens W. A. was held on Thursday of last week at the home of Mrs. Wm. Bush and was well attended.

Mr. Fred Spafford returned home on Sunday after visiting relatives in Trenton.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Rutledge, (nee Helen Card), returned to Toronto on Saturday after spending a couple of weeks touring the mountains and other sections in Eastern United States on their honeymoon.

Mrs. Wm. Wheeler has been spending the past week in Napanee.

Sunday school was quite well attended at Aikens United Church on Sunday morning and Mrs. L. Kells took charge of the Temperance program. The church service followed in charge of the pastor, Rev. Scott. His text was taken from Hebrews 12:1-2. During the service Miss Edith Hogle favored with a solo, "For He Is So Precious To Me."

Mr. and Mrs. Manchester Ketcheson called on Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Hamilton one evening last week.

CROATIA

Same Elements Present

The Autonomy leader said "there is an analogy between our situation and that of Czecho-Slovakia" and remarked that "the same elements are present in both states; I hope there may yet be time to save us but I am afraid it may be too late."

Machek, who has been conferring with Premier Dragisha Cvetkovich, said "if it only depended on us, Croatia would have had her freedom long ago."

For new opposition to an agreement satisfying Croation demands for home rule, Machek blamed a "Belgrade clique" that he identified as a group of "plutocrats and generals."

'If Yugoslavia is to stay together as a strong state," Machek said, "there must be a United States of Yugoslavia. The country must be divided into equal states of Croatia Macedonia, Montenegro and Serbia."

POLICE CLEAR

Officials of the C.I.O.-United Auto Workers Union, sponsors of the strike, protested the orders and prepared to contest them in court. William Corrigan, union lawyer, assured Ness, however, that strikers would not attempt to assemble within the zone.

No Repetition Guaranteed

"There will be no repetition of yesterday's trouble if there is no provocation by police," he said after a conference with city officials.

Pickets were assigned to cars cruising in the neighborhood and others took up posts back of the lines.

Anthony Peterson, Chief of company police, said more than half the 463 non-strikers remained inside the plant. Others trickled out of the plant one by one and were to return to work today.

A reporter touring the plant and grounds estimated about 300 workers stayed in. About 200 slept on cots on the fourth floor of the modern seven-storey plant, situated in Cleveland's industrial east side factory district.

Others dozed in their cars on the factory parking lot. A few were in offices. Some slept on piles of cardboard. The "stay-ins" were fed in the company cafeteria. Additional food supplies were taken into the factory in a mail truck as special delivery parcel-post packages.

Clerk of Lords Weds Lady Rachel Howard

Arundel, England, Aug. 1 (CP)—Colin Davidson, clerk of the House of Lords, and Lady Rachael Howard, sister of the Duke of Norfolk, hereditary Earl Marshall of England, were married Monday at the chapel adjoining Arundel Castle.

More than 1,000 guests, including the Duchess of Gloucester, filled the chapel of the castle, the Norfolk family seat. Following the ceremony, the newly-weds received a papal blessing. The dowager Duchess of Norfolk held a reception at the historic castle.

The bride worn a gown of heavy ivory satin with a square-necked bodice and a long train covered with old family lace. Her lace veil was held in place by a coronet of orange blossom.

9 REAR ADMIRALS NAMED

London, Aug. 1 (CP)—Nine new rear admirals were appointed by the Admrialty today. They are Captains John G. P. Vician, Edye K. Boddam-Whetham, John G. Grace, Colin Cantlie, Arthur Lyster, James W. S. Dorling, Charles P. Harris, Harold M. Burrough and Thomas B. Drew.

Read-Admiral Boddam-Whetham and Harris are placed on the retired list with their new rank.

FATHER MISUNDERSTANDS JUNIOR'S MESSAGE

Scottsbluff, Neb., Aug. 1 (AP)—Five-year-old Nile Gray was astonished to see a fire truck and a score of firemen dash up to his house after he telephoned his father about a minor domestic mishap.

I thought you said you started a fire," gasped the father.

"I said," repeated Nile, "that I spilled the flour."

DEFIES CONSULATE

Beautiful Vera Hruba, Czechoslovak skating star of the Hotel New Yorker, sneered a very beautiful sneer at the German consulate in New York, when the German Consul ordered her to stop dancing on ice to the music of the Czechoslovakian national polka. Quoth Vera, "Mr. German Consul, not for one small moment can you tell me what to do. You my boss? Ha, ha."

"Pete" Barnes A Great Friend Of Singing Cowboy

Many an insignificant thing has been the cause of great friendships but in the case of "Pete" Barnes, originator of the "Foto-Nite" craze that is sweeping United States theatres at the present time, a pair of handsome black and tan, ornately trimmed cowboy boots, started a strong friendship between he and Gene Autry, famous western singing star of the screen.

"Pete" who is here at the Capitol Theatre, stood in his theatre in San Angelo, Texas, when Autry walked in. The star noticed the boots Pete was wearing and stopped to admire them. The result, a pair of similar boots for Gene and a sturdy friendship between the two men.

Now when Gene goes to Dallas, or San Angelo he stays with Pete, and when Pete goes to Hollywood he Hollywood he bunks down in the Autry bunkhouse.

Has Southern Drawl

You've got to hear Pete talk to appreciate him. He has the typical southern drawl of the native Texan, and has lived in the Lone Star State for the most of his twenty-seven years. "Gene", he says, is a real he-man. An honest-to-goodness cowpuncher, who has played and sang his way into the hearts of millions of Canadians and American movie fans.

He has a handsome home in Hollywood, as well as small ranch on the outskirts of the film capital where he stables his "hawses". He has a lovely wife, (Pete went with her before Gene saw her), loves to sing and play his guitar at all times, does not drink or smoke and is of the homeloving type. He seldom goes to night-clubs, and has fifty cowboy suits of all hues and shades.

Loves fine clothes and buys any article of clothing on sight if it appeals to him.

Pete is the proud possessor of a black-trimmed white doeskin cowboy suit, the gift of Gene. He always proudly displays a green-checkered shirt and bandanna that the star gave him.

The Tall Texan will be the master of ceremonies at the Capitol Theatre on Wednesday night when the first "Foto-Nite" ever held in Belleville will get under way.

SOUVENIR FIENDS

It was like the Charge of the Light Brigade minus the cannons to stop them that Provincial Officer McClevis of Walkerton found himself up against as the Yankees from across the border bore down on him at the Falls as they sensed he was a special guard of royalty and were bent on getting the brass buttons off his coat to take back as souvenirs to the old folks at home. Although he fought bravely he was unable to prevent the carnage to his costume, for the come-ons so disregarded care, courtesy and common sense that they would have ripped the mantle off Elijah if it savored of a royal souvenir. What they did to the brass buttons of Bruce's best baton differ would make a jury of undertakers weep. Nor did they confine their cravings to costumes for on the local officer emerging from the royal train with four drinking cups they fell on him like wolves and wanted to bring home the bacon by fair means or foul. The offers he turned would make the purveyors of paper cups go haywire with envy, but he managed to withstand the golden images that were used to tempt him to yield and by adroit means he managed to save the drinking vessels and bring something back to hand down to posterity as a memo of his farewell to Their Majesties after performing as a special guard to royalty in many Ontario centres. — Walkerton Herald Times.

SAFE CRACKERS FORGET RINGS ON TOP OF SAFE

Cincinnati, Aug. 1 (AP)—"You've heard of the Absent-minded professor, but listen to the case of the absent-minded safe crackers; investigating the robbery of a safe in his insurance office, Herman Harrison discovered it had been cleaned of $15 in cash, a $50 watch and five rings he valued at $1,275.

Then he look on top of the safe. There were the rings, all laid out by the burglars— and forgotten.

2 BALLOONS CRASH

London, Aug. 1 (CP)—Two balloons of the barrage designed to protect the capital against air raids crashed to the ground Monday.

One was ripped by a cable and came down on a Greenwich house where it was picked up by Royal Air Force men.

The other was struck by lightning while being tested at the R. A. F. station at Cardington, Bedfordshire, and fell onto the airdrome grounds in flames. It was the sixth balloon to meet disaster from lightning at Cardington within the past fortnight.

FOURTH BIRTHDAY PASSED IN IRON LUNG

Chicago, Aug. 1 (AP)—Fred Snite, Jr., who has smiled his way into the sympathy and admiration of three continents, today observed his 29th birthday and the end of three years and four months in an iron lung.

In observance of the youth's birthday anniversary—his fourth passed in the mechanical respirator—an informal party was planned.

Snite was stricken at Peiping, China, during a world tour, and was placed in an iron lung April 1, 1936.

HOLIDAYS AND WORLD OUTLOOK

World tension grows less. The world has been saturated with predictions of dread days of August and September and August is here, and September will soon be around. September 1938 was a bitter month, and there were predictions it would be repeated. But these are losing their power to stir up fear. It will be remembered that early in the year there were fears of international events preventing the royal tour of Canada with the visit to the United States and these, not war, have become the greatest historical events of this year.

Now Mr. Chamberlain is not going to keep his Commons in harness all through vacation. The average Englishman has come to the holiday season. He knows he is armed and that if war should come his cause is just, so he takes his holidays. Even noted Italians take a holiday.

It looks as if the dictators have more to do now than stir up Germans and Italians with speeches on international complications. They have economic problems to deal with which tax them to the fullest of their capacities and their future is not yet clear. They mock the fear of what they call the plutocracies, but all the while they show signs of having been stalemated in whatever their intentions as to the future of Europe.

So the British Commons will take a holiday, a rather fair gauge that conditions are not unduly tense.

These holidays this year give a sense of security, something which those of last year did not give.

KNOWLEDGE MAKES MEN FREE

The ancients looked at the sky and saw ruddy Mars and spoke of the god of war and feared war.

Men in 1939 gaze quietly upon the same red star in the southern sky. Time has done one thing. It has spread knowledge and people do not fear and tremble at "portents" as they used to be called. They gaze calmly, not with trepidation, for they know a great deal of the natural law which holds the planets, even Mars, in their course.

So knowledge is eliminating those forces which were so terrible in olden days—the forces of ignorance and of fear. True some remain, some very silly, as fear of a black cat and so on, but we can pass through a solar or lunar eclipse and fear nothing. To us an electric storm is more to worry about and even we have learned how to guide somewhat the electric bolt danger in the meeting of clouds charged with electricity. We use lightning rods and avoid shelter under trees. We know that so much that helps us to possess ourselves without fear.

The great astronomers, physicists, geologists, chemists, biologists and psychologists have brought a common sense view of life down to the average man. Even the least enlightened does not worry over a comet.

DR. WILLIAM MAYO

Dr. William survived his younger brother, Dr. Charles, by only two months. Born of a line of physicians, sons of a noble father, they were consummate artists in their marvelous skill, their disinterested service and their public benefactions. William was a child of 2 when the family settled in a "primitive" little hamlet in Southeastern Minnesota. It will be fifty years next fall since the Mayo Clinic was opened. Its staff then consisted of the elder Dr. Mayo and his two sons. Now Rochester and its clinic are known over the world. The staff is now of more than five hundred. A generation ago Sir Henry Burdett was dreaming of a "Hospital City." The Mayos have made his dream a reality.

It is not only a medical center but an advanced medical school, part of the University of Minnesota. It is a clearing house for surgical information. The Mayo Clinic from its first and poorest days adapted its bills to the purse of its patients and has taken no money from charitable institutions. It became so famous for diagnosis and operation that money flowed in. In 1915 the brothers gave $1,500,000 to establish the Mayo Foundation. "We never regarded the money as ours," said Dr. William. "This money came from the people, and we believe, my brother and myself, that it should go back to the people."

These men who have done so much to enrich science, to diminish pain and to prolong life, leave much more behind them than famous names. Their works do follow them. Their practice is continued in their Foundation. If the tornado of 1883 in Rochester was the origin of the Mayo Clinic, that storm has turned into a wind of healing that will not cease.—New York Times.

THE SHEPHERD WIND

When hills and plains are powdered white,
And bitter cold the north wind blows,
Upon my window in the night
A fairy-garden grows.

Here lilies that no hand hath sown
..Bloom white as foam upon the sea,
And elfin bells to earth unknown,
Hold frost-bound melody.

And here are blossoms like to stars
Tangled in nets of silver lace—
My very breath their beauty mars,
Or stirs them from their place.

Perchance the echoes of old songs
Found here a resting-place at last,
With drifting perfume that belongs
To roses of the past.

Or all the moonbeams that were lost
On summer nights the world forgets,
May here be prisoned by the frost,
With souls of violets.

The wind doth shepherd many things,
And when the nights are long and cold,
Who knows how strange a flock he brings
All safely to the fold.

BERYL MERCER IS DEAD. One of the most lovable character actresses of the screen world died in a Santa Monica California, hospital, after an operation, aged 57. Beryl Mercer was born in Spain, and began her stage career in Drury Lane Theatre, London, in child roles. Coming to New York she had an important part in "Outward Bound," that weird play in which all the characters are supposed to be dead, but conscious, and facing the unknown on a ship "Outward Bound," with various degrees of courage. She took many character parts in screen plays and always turned in a good performance. Many cinema patrons admired the work of Beryl Mercer and became genuinely attached to her. The news that she is now "Outward Bound" in earnest will be received with genuine regret by the many who admired her talent and the lovable characters she portrayed.

ATTENDANCE AT THE NEW YORK WORLD'S FAIR has proved disappointing and every effort is being made to bolster it up. The admission fee of 75 cents has been reduced and combination tickets are being issued entitling the holder to admission, eats, and several shows for about half price. The latest effort to pep up the attendance is to give an automobile away every day to an admission ticket holder. Seems like Grover Whalen has heard of Belleville Fair methods and realizes that most folks are gamblers at heart. Contractors who erected buildings at the New York World Fair are becoming uneasy, it is said, on account of unpaid balances on their work, said to amount to about twenty million dollars. And the heart of Grover Whalen, creater of the Fair, was not gladdened to any appreciable extent by the news that special excursions are to run from Singapore to the New York World's Fair at the cut rate of $1,500, plus. In the meantime California's World's Fair is having troubles more or less serious but is saying little about them. Just goes to show that two world's fairs in one country at the same time is a little too much for the cash customers to support, especially since the world's fair idea is no longer a novelty.

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

August 1st., 1919.

Two fine barns, the property of Mr. German Ridley and Mr. J. Cranston, in Rawdon Township, together with their contents were destroyed by fire yesterday. Threshing was in progress and sparks from the engine caused the fires.

Mr. J. T. Warren spent yesterday in Oshawa.

Miss May Lawson, Trent Bridge, is visiting at the home of her uncle, Mr. James N. Hudgins, Dunbar Street.

Mr. and Mrs. George F. Richardson, Whitby, are the guests of the latter's sister, Mrs. Thomas A. Gardner, Ann Street.

Mr. Joe Roe of the staff of the Oak Hall Clothing Store, is spending his vacation at the Sandbanks.

August 1st., 1909.

Last evening on the Coleman Flats diamond a baseball match was played between the Athletics and Coleman Flats teams. The latter team won, the score being 6 to 3. The following composed the teams: Coleman Flats—Jarrel, Brown, Smith, Bateson, Delaney, Orr, Bowen, Clement, Quincey. Athletics—P. Kelcher, Gerow, Guay, Reeves, St. Charles French, Gorman, Moore and McGuire. Umpire George gave general satisfaction.

Mrs. J. H. Gilbert of this city is visiting her son, the Rev. M. Gilbert at Dalrymple, Ont.

Mr. C. R. Wilson and wife; Mrs. Henry Winfield and Mrs. J. C. Wilson of Detroit, Mich., who are on a motor trip through Canada, are the guests of their nephew, Mr. W. C. Mikel, City Clerk.

40 YEARS AGO

August 1st., 1899.

Mr. W. H. Draycott is home from Montreal on a visit.

Mr. Joseph Walters of Brooklyn, N.Y., an old Belleville boy, is home on a visit to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Walters.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. E. Fax are visiting friends in Cheboygan, Mich.

Mr. Charles Rainbow, Jr., is home from New York on a visit.

Mr. Frank Knox of the Front of Sidney, has resigned his position as Purser on the steamer North King.

Mrs. George Lloyd of Rousseau, Manitoba, formerly of Belleville, is visiting relatives here.

Some of the city streets which have been repaired would have been better if left as they were. The top gravel has worn away and stones as large as cocoanuts are sticking up. Something should be done about this.

Mr. Herb Fish spent Sunday in Peterboro.

50 YEARS AGO

August 1st., 1889.

The steamer Quinte brought an excursion from Napanee to Massassaga Park today.

Mr. Munson, who has the contract for the earth work in connection with the bay bridge, commenced work today. It is expected the job will be completed by the end of November.

The corner stone of the new fire hall was officially laid today.

A bass weighing seven pounds and one ounce was caught yesterday by Mr. William Ryan.

Mr. Joseph Craig of the local Inland Revenue Office, and family, are camping at Stoney Lake, north of Peterboro. Miss Minnie Higinbotham of this city is their guest.

MOTORING CHANGES ONE

If anyone is ever able to discover some device which will make human beings act in their automobiles just as they act when they are walking, it is probable that the alarming toll of fatalities taken by automobile traffic each year will shrink to comparatively small proportions.

Anyone who doubts that statement is invited to consider the strange change that comes over the average person as soon as he gets behind the wheel of his car.

On foot, the motorist is usually a genial, good-natured, a more or less leisurely sort of chap. He would like to walk on a sidewalk that isn't crowded, but that isn't always possible and he makes the best of it. When he has to walk through a crowd he takes his time at it and makes due allowances for the feelings of others. Unless he has some especial reason for being in a great hurry, he doesn't jostle and push and strain every nerve to get ahead of everybody else.

Set him to driving an auto, however, and a great transformation seizes him.

Instead of taking his time he gets in a life-and-death hurry. He will cheerfully risk his neck to gain a ten-second advantage. When another car passes him he sees red. His consideration for others vanishes. He wants with all his soul to be at the head of the procession and stay there. If that isn't possible he does the best he can.

In consequence, the traffic stream on some highways often resembles a procession of irritated lunatics. The driver who goes along leisurely gets cursed from every side. All of this not only takes a lot of the fun out of driving, it makes traffic the dangerous thing that it is.—Chatham News.

NEWSPAPERS GAIN

In general, there's been a drop in magazine sales in recent months with the European rumpus blamed. It seems the newspapers nowadays do such an excellent job of interpreting events, a well as reporting them, that they've invaded the mags' field, with the time element all in favor of the daily journals.
—Neal O'Hara, New York Post.

THE LOST ADDRESS

Consider the situation which prevailed in an unnamed Western Ontario community.

When the Royal party reached that point, the King prepared himself for the inevitable presentation of the inevitable civic address, and the Queen stood ready to receive the equally inevitable bouquet. The King, so we are told, had his address of reply all in readiness to hand to the Mayor, but the latter's address failed to make its appearance.

At last, according to the story, His Majesty leaned over and said in a low voice, "Aren't you going to present the address?" and the reply of the worthy mayor is declared to have been, "I will if I can find the d——thing."

Fortunately, the King appreciated the humor of the situation. After waiting for a moment while the search for the missing document continued, remarked "Well, here's mine, anyway", and handed over his reply to the address which was never presented.— Brockville Recorder-Times.

RADIO SOUNDS

Scores of odd gadgets and contraptions help the radio sound-effects man to convey the realistic sounds to your loud speaker. For instance, the beautiful chimes which make the listener picture some old-world cathedral, come from tapping discarded brake drums with a hammer? And when the husband in the radio plays mows the lawn, on old sewing machine provides the sound effects. Why? Because a real lawn mower sounds like a threshing machine!

The sound effects library pictured has a collection of 15,000 different noises, recorded in all corners of the globe, and they augment the job of the sound man. Falling snow is nothing more than paper flakes dropped on a piece of felt.

For boat sounds there is a riverboat horn, designed especially for the "mike", and a crank turns small wooden paddles to create the illusion of a boat plying the Mississippi. The marching feet of an army emanates from a very ordinary looking frame of pegs dropped on a hard surfaced board!—Christian Science Monitor.

THE TWIN BOYS

We report, with unrestrained chuckles, on the newest development in the careers of the famous Woods twins or Amsterdam Avenue.

As you remember, these are the identical twins, now seven years old, one of whom was taken shortly after birth and given the results of the best scientific ideas about child conditioning, at a modern child study clinic.

The other little boy was allowed to grow up naturally, like any kid on the block.

It turns out now that the scientific twin hates school, likes to play rather than stucy, and get marks only little better than average.

The unscientific twin gets "perfect" marks, loves school, is quite an athlete and bosses his scientific brother around.

We know, ha-ha, that this doesn't prove anything, ho-ho-ho, that you need more evidence than this to settled the argument, ha-ha-ha, but, anyway, hee-hee, when we think of those serious-minded professors—ho-ho-ho! We'll have to stop, this is killing us.—New York Post.

BOATING WIDOWS

We have all heard of the Golf Widow. Just as real, just as long-suffering, is the Boat Widow. The Golf Widow has her troubles, but at least her husband comes home when night falls. Not so the boat widow's husband.

The first hint of Spring sees her man gone from early morning to late at night, stealing every available hour to labor like a navvy on the all consuming object of his affection, be it a luxury cruiser, a six-meter racer or merely a sailing dinghy. She may think that the conclusion of these labors and the launching of the ship will see her husband home again. What a hope!

The only difference will be that instead of coming home incredibly dirty, smelling of paint, tar and other strange marine odors, he will not come home at all. There are two things she can do about it —either resign herself to boat widowhood or become the handmaiden of this strange usurper of her husband's affections.

I decided on the latter course.—Kathryn Massie in Canadian Boating.

TOO MUCH BUTTER

After buying 90,000,000 pounds of butter up to May 29 in a vain effort to keep up the price, the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation is in the market for 25,000,000 pounds more. It is believed that the Government is losing five or six cents a pound on these purchases.

In recent months about 13,000,000 pounds a month has been given away by Uncle Santa to relief clients, but some of them are apparently getting it in their hair. There are places where the weekly allowance for a reliefer runs to two pounds—which is spreading it on thick. It is doubtful that the great majority of those who must pay the taxes to enable the FSCC to buy all that butter can really afford two pounds a week, even if they wanted it.

In some places relief clients have registered kicks against too much butter.

As a relief measure the purchase of butter by the Government hasn't afforded appreciable relief to dairymen, who are faced with further gluts, made all the worse by the artificial maintenance of prices above costs of production.

Only a whopping drought seems likely to relieve this situation, which is typical of the end bound to be reached in every farm commodity market where such operations are carried on.—Chicago Nets.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

"If your work is such that it causes excessive perspiration, add a pinch of ordinary table salt to each drink of water you take to prevent heat cramps. Laborers, mechanics, farmers and 'white-collar' wokers whose work causes them to sweat profusely, are in danger of having the amount of salt in their tissues so reduced that they may develop heat cramps."

I am quoting from Weekly Health Message, Iowa State Department of Health.

What are the symptoms of heat cramps? There is pain in abdominal muscles, headache, and sometimes nausea and vomiting. The temperature remains at normal and there is no increase in the pulse rate which shows that no acute abdominal condition such as appendicitis is present. "Body salt losses occur without the knowledge of the individual until the amount of salt in the tissues is so much below normal that the abdominal muscles give warning in the form of cramps.

In some factories and offices, tablets containing about a quarter-teaspoonful of salt (15 grains) are placed beside the drinking fountains and a tablet taken with each drink of water. Sometimes a tablet containing salt and sugar is used, the sugar helping to give energy. "Work men whose duties require much muscular exertion should be especially careful to add more than the usual amount of salt to what they eat or drink."

Milk is a good source of salt and will help make up for the loss of salt due to perspiration. The body may lose as much as an ounce and a half of salt during hot days.

The cramps in the abdominal muscles due to loss of salt cause many individuals to believe they have what is popularly called "stomach flu" and "summer flu" but the fact that the pain is in the muscles only, and there is no rise in temperature or pulse rate show that pain (cramp) is not due to any form of flu.

During hot weather then or when you are perspiring freely, don't wait for heat cramps to warn you that your tissues have lost too much salt. Take a pinch of salt with every drink of water and take more salt on your food.

PICKETS WITH CAMERAS

The traditional strike picket-line, with its banners, slogans, shouted appeals, and the like, has now been overshadowed by the 1939 streamlined version—a picket-line armed with cameras, busily clicking off a record of those who are determined to work in defiance of the pickets.

There is peculiar power in this new weapon in the labor wars. Men may well quail before the starting lenses who would fight their way through clubs and stones. The same reluctance has been observed on the part of pickets in some strikes, for once the shutter clicks, there is the record, permanent as the strip of film, not to be gainsaid by denial or alibi.

This sort of camera record has often in the past been used to identify men who have taken part in violent strike disturbances. Now it has been turned the other way in an effort to apply a little goose-sauce to the gander.

Probably every man has done at some time things he would not care to be photographed in the act of doing. Yet if we are correctly taught, each man some day must face and explain a more-than-photographic face and explain a more-than-photographic record on the Heavenly Books. Why, then, worry, about a little earthly camera-work?—Sherbrooke Record.

WOMAN'S HAIR

One of the photographers who works at making portraits of the glamor girls of Hollywood made a comment which interested me. He said that never yet has he had one of the lovely creaturs pose for him but that she has complained that her hair didn't look its best that day either it was too recently washed or else it hadn't been washed recently enough; sometimes the curls are too tight and sometimes they are too loose. The comments vary, but they never fail to come.

This interested me because it conforms so exactly with my own observations. I have frequently heard women who looked perfectly groomed make such statements as this "I spent three-quarters of an hour on my hair today and still it doesn't look right".

I have watched that same woman, in the course of the evening, giving frequent pats to her hair—sneaking, on occasion, surreptitious glances at the mirror extracted from her bag. Sometimes her nervous fidgeting has driven me nearly to distraction and all too often the constant pulling and hauling she has given her tresses reduced them to disorder.—Baltimore Sun.

FEW CORRECTIONS

The Canadian Press, considered among the finest news gathering organizations in the world, was forced to make a correction the other day when an inaccurate report was received from Red Lake to the effect that two men were killed by lightning while working on a hydro line at that point. The Canadian Press had a correction in the papers which used the story the following day.

It is rather unusual to find such a correction because the C.P. has an enviable reputation for accuracy. It has the complete confidence of editors all over Canada as a most dependable source of news copy. So careful is the Canadian Press with regard to accuracy that it is one of the first qualifications necessary in its correspondents. If there is any doubt about the accuracy of a story in the mind of the correspondent, the C.P. would rather it be delayed until verification is possible or eliminated altogether if verification is impossible. Readers of newspapers, when digesting articles with the C.P. mark on the date line, can be pretty sure they are reading accurate news.—Lindsay Post.

THE BOAT MALIGNED

The other evening, I am told, a bat entered the open window of a rather large room in which were gathered twenty or thirty women and a few men. One woman saw the bat and screamed, whereupon as if by reflex action, every one of the other women immediately covered her head—some using their little fur neckpieces, some their "bolero" jackets— and a few their skirts.

Called to account for it, they explained that it is the habit of bats to entangle themselves in the hair of women. None of them had ever known, at first hand, of a woman with a bat caught in her hair, but they all knew women who knew women who had had bats in their hair. They all agreed that nothing could possibly be worse than having a bat caught in one's hair and they were therefore taking no chances.—Baltimore Sun.

MOON ON THE WATER

by Ruby M. Ayres

He bent to kiss her, but she turned her face away, and he said with a touch of temper, "Well, if you don't want to kiss me——" And the next moment he had gone.

Jane went across to the window, standing so that she could not be seen from the road. Her head was throbbing badly, but she hardly noticed it now, as with strained eyes she watched the old car move away from the gate. She could hear Dulcie laughing, and she saw Gavin glance down at her smilingly, and then the bend in the road hid them from view.

Pamela came into the room.

"Where have those two gone?" she demanded suspiciously.

Jane forced herself to answer, "Dulcie wanted to go to Knighton, and—and she thought it might be foggy coming home; it was last night, you know—so—so I suggested that Gavin drive.."

"You suggested," Pamela said; she shrugged her shoulders. "I think you're a perfect fool," she declared with sisterly candor.

Jane tried to laugh. "Don't be silly—I could have gone if I'd wanted, but I've got such a vile headache."

There was an eloquent silence till Pamela said more kindly, "Shall I get you a cup of tea and an aspirin? It's not like you to have a headache."

"I know—it's silly, isn't it? I can't think what the reason can be," but even as she spoke, she knew well enough what the reason was; that sub-conscious, vague worrying which had tormented her for the past week, the sleepless nights, and the continual effort to blind herself to the thing she dreaded; the determined refusal to admit that since Dulcie's arrival Gavin had not been the same to her; the haunting dread that there was some truth in Pamela's blunt assertion that it was only her money he wanted.

Her essential loyalty would not allow her to be convinced that it was so—and yet—sometimes she felt that she knew even though she refused to admit that she knew.

The fire had been lit that day because, although it was April, it grew chilly at midday, and she walked across to its warmth, wondering why she felt so cold and wretched.

The moon on the water!

How her head throbbed! She wondered whether she was going to be ill! And then her lips curved into a little contemptuous smile. She had never had a day's illness in her life. And then suddenly another little unkind memory arose out of the past to stare at her, of a winter when Pamela and Dulcie had had measles, and when she herself had remained free from contagion, and Dulcie, crying and miserable because she had to be kept in one room had complained, "Why doesn't Jane get it? I want Jane to have measles, too."

She had been quite willing to share the discomforts with her sister, even though she determinedly kept the pleasure to herself.

And then Jane told herself that it was all wrong that she should remember such incidents, that she ought to be ashamed of herself for the tide of jealousy which was surging through her heart. This was being in love, she supposed, but somehow she had not thought it would mean so much pain, for surely love should bring only happiness and complete trust—and yet here she was imagining all sorts of dark things which probably had no existence except in her own aching head.

Pamela came back with the tea and the aspirin.

"Sit down by the fire and drink it," she said she touched Jane's forehead with a business-like hand. "Goodness, you're in a fever", she said in alarm. "I'm sure you ought to go to bed and have Doctor Bingham."

But Jane insisted that she was quite well except for an ordinary chill. "And that's nothing," she declared.

She drank the tea and curled up in the big, shabby armchair until, lulled by the warmth, she fell asleep.

Pamela looked at her and shook her head, and then gently pulled the curtain a little to darken the room before she tiptoed away.

It was late when Jane awoke.

The spring afternoon had closed in grey and chilly, with a very definite mist already rising below the trees and across the fields.

She started up and ran to the window, peering out, but there was nothing but greyness to be seen and she turned to look at the clock.

Half-past six!

"They ought to be home by now," she thought, "It's only eight miles to Knighton, and they ought to be home."

Her head still ached miserably, but she went up to her room and bathed her flushed face and changed her frock, trying to persuade herself that she felt much better.

Pamela was in the kitchen and she glanced up in surprise from her task of ironing handkerchiefs when Jane opened the door.

"Goodness, I hope you were still asleep!" she said. "Is the head better?"

Jane answered the question by asking another.

"Haven't they come back? It's half-past six—they ought to be back by now."

Pamela banged the iron down with rather unnecessary force. "It's getting foggy," she said briefly.

Jane wandered back to the drawing-room; the old doubts and sense of restless distrust were returning, though she did her honest best to banish them. She peered again into the grey world. Where were they going? Perhaps the old car had broken down again. She wished she had gone with them; the worst headache in the world was surely easier to bear than this gnawing doubt and sense of hateful distrust.

She tried in vain to calm her throbbing nerves, and then suddenly to her mind came some words she had either read or which she had heard said:

"There are some things you know for sure, without knowing for certain."

And this was one of those things!

Dulcie had engineered this drive because she wished to be alone with Gavin—perhaps he, too, had wished it, and so they arranged it between themselves. Dulcie was always clever at getting her own way; Dulcie always wanted a thing that belonged to some one else. And then Jane thought with a sense of fear:

"I'm beginning to hate her—I must be ill—or mad, but I'm beginning to hate her."

Across the hall she could hear Mary laying the table for supper and singing in an unmusical undertone the air of some doggerel song of which she was particularly fond, and of which Jane knew the refrain—

"And so she took him away from me,
She took him away from me."

The moon on the water! The fair woman . . . .

Her father came into the room.

"Is the head better, my dear? Pamela says you have a bad headache."

"It's much better, thank you."

He crossed over to where she stood.

"Another fog!" he said. "One expects them in the autumn. but not at this time of the year."

"It's only a mist," Jane said.

She went back to the fire restlessly.

Pamela busted in.

"Shall we wait supper?" she asked. "Or would you rather not? It's a hot supper, and it will spoil if we wait."

Jane glanced at the clock again.

"It's only seven; can't we wait a quarter of an hour?" she said a little fretfully.

But when half an hour had passed there was still no sign of Dulcie and Gavin.

"They may be staying out to supper," Pamela said. "I shall tell Mary to dish up."

There was the sound of a car in the road and Jane turned her head, her cheeks paling, but it went on into the silence.

INSTALMENT 12

Supper was an uncomfortable meal.

"You're not eating, my dear," Mr. Brookes said, and Jane answered hurriedly that she was not hungry, that she really thought she had a rather bad cold.

"If you're not better tomorrow I shall send for Doctor Bingham," Pamela said. She rather enjoyed sickness and the presence of a doctor in the house.

When the meal was ended Pamela said, "I don't see why I should bother to keep anything hot for those two. They surely might have rung up to tell us if they meant to stay out."

Jane did not answer, but she pushed back her chair and rose, and at that moment the telephone rang in the hall.

"I'll go," Pamela said quickly, but Jane was before her, her heart racing; her fingers unsteady as she lifted the receiver.

"Hullo?" It seemed an eternity before she heard Dulcie's gay voice.

"Hullo! Oh is that you, Jane? The car's broken down, and so we're having supper at The George while they put it right. I just rang to tell you not to keep any food for us. I expect we shall be late, as it's very foggy. Thank goodness Gavin was here; I can't imagine what I should have done without him. How's the head?"

Jane did not answer the last question; she said instead, "The George? But that's miles away from Knighton."

"Of course it is. But we came round away from the river because Gavin thought the road would be clearer that way, and this is what happened. Would you like to speak to him yourself."

"No thank you."

"All right; we shall be home as soon as possible," and Dulcie rang off.

Jane went back to the drawing-room.

"Well?" Pamela inquired.

"The car has broken down— and they won't be in to supper. They are having something to eat at The George while the car is repaired."

"The George?" Pamela's voice was enigmatical. "But that's miles away."

"I know, but they went that way purposely because they thought it might be clear of fog away from the river."

"Well," Pamela said blankly.

Mr. Brookes glanced at Jane over the top of his newspaper.

"I shouldn't worry my dear," he said mildly.

"No, I shouldn't worry," Pamela said. "Dulcie is quite able to look after herself, and anyway, with Gavin, she'll be quite safe." But there was a little note of sarcasm in her voice.

Something in Jane's heart seemed to cry out voicelessly, "But me! What about me?"

She took up a book and pretended to read, but the printed words danced before her eyes, a meaningless jumble.

From a little corner of Jane's unhappy mind a little memory suddenly projected itself. Of her sister—years ago—bragging that she could make any man fall in love with her if she chose, no matter how unwilling he might be.

And how Pamela had asked in her matter of fact way—

"But supposing he didn't want to fall in love with you—"

"He'd have to," Dulcie had replied coolly.

The book dropped from Jane's hands.

"I think I'll go to bed," she said painfully. "I don't feel kindly.

Jane undressed slowly, her ears straining all the time for the sound of a returning car, but outside the world was very still and dead.

Mary brought the hot water bottle wrapped in a piece of red flannel.

"Bed's the best place when you're not well," she said.

Jane kept her eyes tightly closed because of the sudden tears which burned them.

"Yes, I'll be all right tomorrow," she answered.

Sleep was impossible, and a dozen times she started up imagining that she heard voices. Nine o'clock, ten o'clock . . . . It was nearly eleven when at last she heard the old car come to a protesting standstill at the gate, and Dulcie's airy laugh. Jane turned over then, pressing her face into the pillow, her hands over her ears.

"I don't care," she told herself. "I don't care." But every nerve in her body seemed to be jumping.

Pamela came into the room on tiptoe.

"Jane! Are you awake? They've come home at last." But Jane did not answer, and presently she heard the soft closing of the door.

She threw back the clothes then and sat up, leaning on an elbow, surprised to find how violently she was trembling.

Downstairs she could hear her sister's voice, and now and then Galvin's deeper tones. They were explaining no doubt—a stupid impossible explanation which every one would be expected to believe. Half past eleven now.

Presently there was a sound of footsteps on the stairs and before Jane could feign sleep Dulcie was in the room.

She switched on the light regardless of Jane's headache and looked across at her sister.

"Here we are," she announced unnecessarily. 'We've had a fribhtful time! I thought we should never get home at all. The fog's as thick as pea soup. Gavin had to walk in front of the car most of the way. It's time we got rid of that car—it's such a terrible old boneshaker. I was positively ashamed to be seen in it."

"We shall never get another," Jane said dully. It was the last thing she wanted to say, but Dulcie laughed.

"You could buy another if you chose," she said calmly. "If I had your money it would be the first thing I should do. Why don't you buy one, Jane?"

Jane lay back, closing her eyes.

"I wish you would put the light out," she said.

"Sorry; I forgot your head ached," but she did not turn the light out. "Gavin sends his love and he hopes you are better."

Jane did not answer, but her heart seemed to twist in unbearable pain.

Gavin sends his love! As if she were almost a stranger—she had to bite her lips to keep back the words: "Are you sure he didn't say 'Kind regards'?"

"Well, I'll leave you to sleep," Dulcie said. "I hope you'll be all right in the morning. Gavin is going to stay the night—it would be foolish to try to get back to the Bingham's in this fog, so we telephoned and told them. "She gave a little self-conscious laugh. " I hope you're not cross with us," she submitted.

Us!

"Why should I be cross?" Jane asked in a very still voice. "You couldn't help the car breaking down.

Dulcie hesitated, flushing a little

"Can I get you anything?" she asked.

"No thank you."

"Good night then."

"Good night."

The lights went out at last and the door closed between them, but presently Jane could hear voices downstairs again—subdued voices as if two people were talking confidentially and, although she tried her honest best to shut them out she could still hear them echoing through her aching head like the whisper of conspirators.

In the morning Jane still felt so far from well that she almost yielded to the desire to stay in bed, but she realized with a sigh that even though she might spend the day alone, the room would be full of shadowy figures asking unanswerable questions.

So she got up and dressed as usual and was just dragging a comb through her unruly hair, when Mary came softly tapping at the door.

"Dressed"! she said disappointedly. "And I was just going to bring your breakfast, Miss Jane."

"That's nice of you," Jane answered. "But you know I hate staying in bed, and there's really nothing the matter with me. I had quite a good night," she added untruthfully.

And then, as Mary turned to go, she asked casually if the other members of the family were up.

"Mr. Montford is in the breakfast-room," Mary answered. "He asked me to come up and see how you were."

Jane's pale cheeks flushed a little.

"Tell him I'm coming", she said.

She felt better after that, and with her usual generosity she began to blame herself for her wretchedness of last evening, for, after all, what had happened that she should have made such a tragedy?

Nobody could have helped the fog —or the the car breaking down, and it had surely been just an ordinary courtesy for Gavin to consent to drive with Dulcie when she asked him to do so.

But she felt strangely nervous and reluctant to meet him when at last she slowly descended the stairs.

INSTALMENT 13

"Good morning," Jane said airily.

Gavin turned from the window where he had been standing looking out into the garden, and she fancied there was a faint inquiry in his eyes before he smiled.

"Good morning— how is the head?"

"Much better, thank you." She half moved a hand towards him, and then let it fall, painfully conscious of a barrier between them.

"What a bad time you had last night," she said with an effort. "That silly old car—"

"It wasn't so bad," Gavin answered, and she wondered whether it was her imagination that he seemed relieved to find she was taking the episode so calmly. 'We had food at The George, while the garage people tinkered the car up, and there was a recent fire, and altogether things might have been much worse.

And now suddenly he took her hand.

"I am so sorry you were not well and could not go along, Jane", he said, but his voice was a little stilted, almost as if he were afraid of her, she thought.

"But I'm quite all right this morning," she assured him, and she wondered whether any other engaged couple in the wide world would greet each other so formally and without a kiss. She glanced towards the breakfast table. "Are we the only two to put in an appearance?" she asked.

"So far," he admitted. "I don't suppose Dulcie will be down for hours—she seemed very tired last night."

"Oh," Jane said.

There was a bleak silence which she hurriedly broke. "Dulcie dislikes any discomfort; she invariably retires to bed if anything unpleasant has happened, and stays there until she has recuperated." She had no intention of speaking unkindly, and so it gave her a little jolt when Gavin answered:

"She behaved quite sportingly last night; in fact she joked about it all. I was agreeably surprised."

"Oh" Jane said, and the little tide of bitterness came creeping back over her heart. Couldn't he see or understand that but for his presence Dulcie would have behaved very differently?

Social and Economic Research

Here is the equipment whereby formulas for social and business progress may be developed

WITHOUT knowledge or information at his disposal, a person is greatly handicapped in the promotion or extension of any venture he may undertake. On the other hand, the possibilities of success are definitely increased, if one is well posted on all the facts—past and present—that are associated with the venture and the conditions related to it.

Depending upon persons and circumstances, this venture may be a plan for social betterment or for business enterprise. Perhaps it is the building of a school—the raising of a particular kind of farm product or livestock—the catching and curing of fish—the administration of a health department—the manufacture or export of certain commodities; or it may be connected with mining, lumbering, smelting, building, brickmaking or any one of hundreds of different ventures that commonly interest Canadian citizens.

But whatever it may be—full information about it is available from the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, Ottawa, and this information is accessible to all.

Figures Give You Facts— Show You Future Possibilities

Take the tourist trade for instance. Records compiled by the Bureau show the growth of the trade year by year and approximately how much the tourists spent while in Canada. It is known how many came by car —by train or over ocean routes; also how many visited each province and in what month they arrived.

Then to a person interested in apples, the Bureau can furnish data on what quantity has been consumed in Canada year by year—also what quantities are exported and where to—and their value. Similar data are available for every other product of farm, forest, mine and fishery.

On matters pertaining to the health of Canadian citizens there is a tremendous amount of useful, authentic information covering every province and presenting a valuable array of facts in an orderly manner, correctly co-ordinated and easily understood.

Similarly on hundreds of other subjects related to the social and business life of Canada, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics furnishes abundant information.

As a whole, these statistics are a record of Canada's accomplishments and a barometer of social and business trends. They indicate possibilities of progress for the years to come.

Fifteen Branches Co-operate in This Service

All the facilities of the Bureau of Statistics are maintained for the use and benefit of Canadian citizens. To cover and present all phases of its work, the Bureau issues approximately 500 different publications—weekly, monthly, quarterly and annual. For business men the Canada Year Book is one of the most useful of these publications. It is a well-bound volume of some 1141 pages crammed with tabulated and other information which represents exceptional value at $1.50; procurable from the King's Printer, Ottawa.

A list of all Bureau publications will be well worth checking over to note their contents and to secure those which best serve your interests. The Bureau cordially invites inquiries and promptly attends to all correspondence. Address your letters to Dr. R. H. Coats, Dominion Statistician, Ottawa.

Weddings

BRIDLE—ARMITSTEAD

Christ Church, Brampton, was the scene of a pretty wedding Saturday, when Georgena (Gene) Eleanor, youngest daughter of Mrs. Armitstead, and the late S. W. Armitstead, was united in marriage to Edwin, third son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Bridle.

The bride entering the church on the arm of her brother, Mr. Thomas Armitstead, was gowned in white satin cut on princess lines, with full length veil of imported silk net, held in place with a coronet of orange blossoms and carried a white prayer book, the gift of the groom, with a shower of lily-of-the-valley and sweetheart roses. She also carried a silk handkerchief, brought from France in 1918, a gift from her brother, Mr. Thomas Armitstead, Military Medalist.

The bride's only attendant was her niece Miss Muriel Baragar of Belleville, gowned in pink triple net over taffeta with shoulder length blue veil and carrying a bouquet of blue cornflowers.

Mr. Fred Bridle, brother of the groom, was groomsman.

Rev. Canon Allen officiated and Miss Dorothy Elston played the wedding music.

During the signing of the register, Miss Aileen Brittan sang "I Love You Truly".

The ushers were Mr. William Powell, brother-in-law of the groom, and Mr. B. C. Sills of Belleville, brother-in-law of the bride.

A reception was held at the home of Mr. Thomas Armitstead, Huttonville on the spacious lawn. Mrs. Armitstead, mother of the bride, gowned in violet Swiss embroidered sheer, with corsage of orchids, and Mrs. Bridle, in lavender sheer with corsage of orchids, received with the bride and groom.

After the reception, the happy couple dressed in gray tailored suits to match and white accessories, left for a honeymoon to points east amid showers of confetti and good wishes.

They will reside in Brampton.

Nails for the Asking

By HELEN FOLLETT

BROKEN finger-nails are tremendous trifles that make a woman as mad as a hatter. Jagged eaves catch threads when she is sewing, tangle her hair when she puts her glory crown in order.

Should it happen that you have the kind of claws that seem bent on self destruction, or if they are short and stubby and you would have them long and oval, you can purchase a demountable set at almost any beauty shop. If they haven't them in stock, they will order them for you.

It takes a bit of time and much care to install them. First, the cuticle must be oiled and loosened from the pink shells, because the counterfeit nails must be slipped beneath it. There is shaping to be done, after which the shining coral glow is applied.

Ordinarily one's homegrown talons don't need any covering sheaths. But the dear girls like to play with beauty tricks. When artificial eyelashes were first offered, a good deal of experimenting went on, but in most cases they were considered too bothersome. They are a blessing to movie stars whose eyelid valances aren't as luxuriant as they should be.

Spare finger-nails are kept in place with adhesive, seem able to take a good deal of punishment and still look all right. Only the keenest eye can distinguish them from the natural finger-tip protectors.

On days when you are all hot and flustered and are about to prettify yourself for some exciting social event, get into a bath that is fairly warm, scour well with soap and a heavy brush, then turn on the cold shower. Dry briskly, apply a tonic lotion.

ROSALIND RUSSELL

Her beautiful finger-nails get regular care

Cold water is refreshing, but has no cleansing qualities. In the silly season when the thermometer is rushing upward, not knowing where or when to stop, the skin throws off a large amount of salty fluids that should be laved away night and morning.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Does Hostess or Guest Suggest Retiring?

Who suggests retiring, the hostess or the guest? It's a problem that is apt to perplex us, whether we are one or the other.

The visitor is the one who has this privilege. This obviously makes it easier for the hostess, especially if the visitor has the grace to sense "just the right time."

However, if a hostess sees that her guest is uncertain about having this privilege, she may properly make this suggestion. She can, for instance, make it easy for her guest if she says, "I realize that you have had a long journey today, and you must be tired. So don't hesitate to tell us that you would like to go to bed early." Or, "We're stay-up-laters, but we know that you've had a hard week in the hot city. So we will leave it to you to name the hour you wish to go to bed. The golf game is scheduled for nine, you know!"

If, on the other hand, you think you are being thoughtful in making the early-to-bed suggestion, and this suggestion is vetoed by your hosts, you will have to have the wisdom of Solomon in trying to determine how seriously to take this veto. Your hosts may really wish to stay up longer, or they may just be trying to be polite! If you linger, you may be wrong in your interpretation. If you say "Good night", the chances are you'll be right.

It's a comfort to remember that this problem is more difficult on the first evening of your arrival. After that you'll be more familiar with the habits of the family, and can adjust your suggestion accordingly.

Accept as Compliment

Dear Mrs. Beeckman

A woman I have worked with for the past five years has a son who lives in another city. I have met him only three or four times, just casually.

This boy is getting married soon. I have never met the girl he is marrying. And yet he sends me an invitation to the wedding. He must realize that since the wedding is taking place in the city in which he lives, it is impossible for me to come.

1—Do you consider that it was proper for them to send me an invitation?

2—What am I supposed to do . . send them a gift, or just a card?

A.

1—I think that it was very gracious and friendly for this young man to include your name on the list of people to be invited to his wedding. Apparently he knows that his mother is devoted to you, and that she would wish to have you given the compliment of an invitation. Apparently too he liked you when he met you, even though the meetings were casual.

He wished too to give you the honor of receiving an invitation even though he knew that the chances were that you would find it impossible to attend. It is proper very gracious too, to give this compliment to people, even if we are sure that they cannot attend.

It was not necessary that this young man write you of his engagement, since the bride-elect and the bridegroom-elect write this news only to their relatives and close friends.

2—If the invitation is a formal one to the church ceremony only . . . written, that is, in the third person, and requesting "the honour of your presence" at the church . . . it does not require an answer. But if you also received an invitation to the wedding breakfast or reception afterward, you write a formal reply (that is, in the third person) saying that you regret that you are unable to accept the invitation.

You may also, if you wish, write this young man a note of congratulations, including in your note your best wishes to his bride-to-be.

Whether or not you send a gift to his bride elect depends entirely on your choice. It would be generous and friendly of you to send one, even though a simple and inexpensive something for their new home.

FAIR PROSPECTS for progress and productive launching of new projects are indicated by the predominant planetary aspects. With the energies and ambitions under warm stimuli there should be a gratifying return for sound judgment, hard wor andk diligence, but over-aggressive or impulsive activities may catapult toward the danger line. With discretion and restraint, enduring rewards may be looked for.

Those whose birthday it is may prepare for moderate success in business affairs, with the promise of enduring reward for fidelity, good judgment and diligence. A fortunate time for putting old matters and interests on a stable basis, but not by rash or too strenuous methods. Use restraint even under aggravating circumstances.

A child born on this day will be energetic and impetuous with stability and sound judgment in business, but may be carried away by its enthusiasm or suffer from harsh criticisms of its fellows.

Paul Kelly who is featured in the Foreign Legion story "Adventure in Sahara," now playing at the McCarthy Theatre.

AT THE BELLE

"Grace Allen Murder Case"

With a plot based on a story by the late S. S. Van Dine, Gracie Allen in one of the featured roles, and a large cast of other featured players including Warren William as Philo Vance, Ellen Drew, Kent Taylor and Judith Barrett, S. S. Van Dine's "The Gracie Allen Murder Case" is now on the Belle screen. Designed to amuse and thrill, the picture places plenty of emphasis on Miss Allen's insane comedy without neglecting the thrilling moments to be expected in a Van Dine story.

Since Gracie is a key character in the picture, much of the murderous action centres around her early in the proceedings. She has been taken to his company's picnic by her uncle, and introduced to Kent Tayor. Kent is in love wth Ellen Drew, but they've had a tiff because she won't listen to his proposals of marriage.

A situation like that is fun for Gracie, who immediately invites Kent to have lunch with her—even though she's forgotten the lunch. She and Kent park beneath a rustic bridge to enjoy what food they've been able to borrow and buy.

Meanwhile, there is plenty of dirty work afoot. Benny the "Buzzard" is in the vicinity! He phones Jerome Cowan, night club proprietor, to come pick him up. Judith Barrett, one of his entertainers, overhears the conversation and makes pointed inquiries.

As Gracie and Kent are whiling away the time, a car passes over the bridge. A cigarette drops from it to Gracie's dress burning a hole in it. Kent picks it up and notes that it smells of bitter almond and "Kiss Me" perfume. Gracie decides to keep the cigarette.

That night, in Cowan's club, Gracie finds the "Buzzard" dead. She accuses Kent of the murder because she can identify the cigarette case found near the body as his. Ellen Drew is so upset that she calls in Philo Vance—Warren William—to help her loved one. With Gracie continually in Warren William's hair, misplacing clues or hiding them, or searching for the "mysterious woman", the picture rolls on through thrills and laughter to an interesting conclusion.

No picture with Gracie Allen in it would be complete without one of her songs, and she sings a new hit, "Snug as a Bug in a Rug," by Frank Loesser and Matty Malneck.

"Stolen Life"

The incomparable, inimitable Elizabeth Bergner, after an absence of many months, returns to delight her millions of followers in a drama worthy of her genius, "Stolen Life" which is the companion feature attraction.

The unusual story, adapted by Margaret Kennedy from the best-selling novel of K. Benes, places Miss Bergner in a dual role—an entirely new departure for her.

Sylvina and Martina are identical twins, but their similarities begin and end in their physical resemblances. Spiritually, they are diametric opposites. Sylvina is selfish, flirtatious and cunning. Martina is kind, shy and honest.

Their respective qualities are emphasized with artistic clarity when the twins fall in love with Allan, handsome and famous mountaineer, played by the brilliant English newcomer, Michael Redgrave.

Allen loves Martina, but Sylvina's serpentine cunning wins him away from her sister. Martina is too generous to a cause a rift in the family, especially since the father of the girls is a nearly blind, dying invalid.

AT THE McCARTHY

"The Lady and the Mob"

In her first screen appearance since winning an Academy Award, Fay Bainter's performance in "The Lady and the Mob" is a scintillant illustration of acting at its best. The comedy which is now playing at the McCarthy Theatre is possessed of a unique, hilarious idea; it is filled with ingenious and thoroughly amusing situations, with dialogue which is both witty and wise, with a supporting cast of character actors well-known for their excellent work. And yet, Miss Bainter's performance is such that it dominated the film.

On the other hand, "The Lady" whom Miss Bainter portrays also dominates the action of the film, and that, perhaps, enhances the actress' brilliant work. Miss Bainter is seen as an autocratic dowager, an eccentric Social Registerite determined to have her own way.

When a racket is brought to her attention—the bill for the cleaning of a dress has been upped from its usual $1.75 to $2.00—the dowager virtually declares "no quarter to crime!" and goes on the war path. When the District Attorney and the Mayor both admit their inability to cope with the racketeers, the Social Registerite recruits a "mob" of her own and, in armored car equipped with machine guns and sundry other gang-hunting weapons, embarks upon one of the most exciting and enjoyable crusades ever undertaken for the screen.

Miss Bainter, consummately made-up to appear years older than she really is, offers a characterization whose humorous side rests chiefly in her seeming seriousness. Featured with her in "The Lady and the Mob" is lovely, talented Ida Lupino, who appears as her prospective daughter-in-law. "The Mob" includes such excellent performers as Warren Hymer, Harold Huber, Joseph Sawyer and Tom Dugan. Henry Armetta is excellent as the voluble, unhappy cleaner who starts all the trouble by over-charging Miss Bainter.

"Adventure in Sahara"

An excellent co-feature now playing at the McCarthy Theatre in addition to "The Lady and the Mob" is the romantic adventure story of the French Foreign Legion entitled "Adventure in Sahara" featuring Paul Kelly, C. Henry Gordon, Lorna Gray and Marc Lawrence. It is a picture that is more thrilling than "Beau Geste" and one that each patron is certain to enjoy thoroughly from start to final fade-out. An exceptionally interesting "Screen Snapshots" presenting favorite movie stars at work and play is also presented in addition to the feature presentations at each performance.

"Stolen Life" presents an emotional problem which is very real to every woman who has known unrequited love; and to every man who has loved the wrong woman. Margaret Kennedy has skillfully and sensitively interwoven comedy, tragedy and drama into the scenario. Michael Redgrave, the young ex-schoolmaster who gave up teaching to follow a screen career, is the male lead. Wilfrid Lawson, who played "Doolittle" in "Pygmalion" also has an important part. Others in the cast are Mabel Terry, Lewis and Richard Ainley.

The popular Belle News of the Day will be presented on the same program.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Advised to Clear Up Financial Mystery

Dear Miss Fairfax

My husband is 28 and I'm 22. We're very happily married. Each of us has a job. We've bought a car and are buying our home and furniture.

The thing that worries me is I don't know what firm our home is being bought through, who carries our insurance, or the bank in which our savings are deposited.

In all fairness to me, I think I should be aware of these facts, not only because I help with finances, but in case these responsibilities are some day left to me I would not know which way to turn. I've tried many times to talk things out with my husband, but he becomes furious and declines to tell me anything. Is there some way I could obtain this knowledge?

Excluded

In the many years in which I have been answering letters, in this column, I have had some letters along the same line as yours. Every wife has a right to know the ins and outs of her family's financial affairs, especially so if she is helping with the finances. Sometimes the mystery is due to a silly vanity on the husband's part—the type of man who believes in letting father do it, unquestioningly.

Again, the mystery comes from the fact that the money has been gambled away or lost in some other manne, and the husband is trying to get by until a lucky fluke enables him to square himself. But whatever the reason, it is intolerable to exclude a wife from knowing where she stands.

As you must know the number and street on which the home you're buying is situated, you can go to a real estate office and look up the lot and square in the city plot book. You can also find out the last listed owner of the property.

But in your case, I should consult a lawyer, and be sure I got a good one. As you are employed you will be able to afford this. You might go to the Legal Aid Society and ask them to recommend a lawyer who specializes in property. Don't let the matter drift; act immediately.

Young Lover in Quandary

Dear Miss Fairfax

I have been going with Naomi for nearly a year. For a while she was perfectly willing to marry me. Now she doesn't feel as if she can make up her mind for at least another year. It isn't as though I haven't done all I could for her, because all of our friends, even her own family, say that I have spoiled her by giving her her own way in everything. Just what would you suggest that I do?

B. G.

The sovereign remedy for a spoiled young person of either sex is a little wholesome neglect. Don't confine your attention and your adoring glances to Naomi. Cultivate the friendship of other girls. This device works about seven times out of ten.

She's in Love With Her Teacher

Dear Miss Fairfax

I am now 18 years old and a senior in high school, and for many years I have been in love with one of the teachers. And he is still not married. Do you think it possible I can win his heart?

I have had many moments alone with him and suffered agonies of indecision, as I've always wanted to tell him I love him but couldn't find words to express myself. Time and time again he has driven me home from school, and during our chats I have hinted to him about someone caring for him. He has told me many nice things, and seems to be interested. He is the nucleus of everything in my life.

I don't care to bother with the boys I know, and now my beloved is away on his vacation. Perhaps if I wrote to him I would feel more contented. Would that be advisable? To write to him and explain how I feel and sign my name. Or just write a brief note with a few affectionate words without any signature?

Discontented

Please don't write. So many girls have done just that in cases like yours and regretted it when the "beloved" has not reciprocated.

There's an old saying that love and a cough are hard to conceal. And I wouldn't be at all surprised if this teacher of yours may realize how you feel about him. He may feel the same way about you, but isn't ready to talk about it. And there is no question that an unspoken love oftimes has a pull strong as the tides. Why not trust to that for the time being?

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

DANGER—POISON IVY!

No discussion of the accidents that befall children during the summer holiday would be complete without a word or two about poison ivy.

The offending plant itself is small, short and green, with leaves in clusters of three, joined at the center and spreading out from the central point. The size of the leaves vary but usually are about two inches long with a wide base and rounded outline, gradually tapering to a narrow point. The plant has no flower, but in the fall the leaves turn various colors and are so attractive that unwary people pick them—to their sorrow!

Some fortunate people are immune to this plant, being able to handle it without the slightest reaction; others are so sensitive that if they even come near it they break out in a rash. Some who are sensitive to the plant in their youth develop an immunity as they grow older.

I have seen many cases of this among summer visitors, and it seems to be about two or three days after the individual has been exposed that the reaction is seen. The skin becomes itchy, and a red blush accompanies it. In a few hours, this area is likely to become swollen so that the part affected takes on a puffy appearance. This is followed by the formation of small blisters containing a clear fluid. Those gradually enlarge, rupture and discharge their contents onto the surrounding skin. Occasionally no blisters appear at all, but large areas become raised. This usually represents a more serious type of the malady.

As the disease progresses, the tops of the blisters break off and leave an area of red flesh beneath. Scratching these itchy surfaces often infects them.

On first appearance, the rash is limited to the area that has actually been in contact with the plant. But as the victim scratches, the area spreads to other parts of the body.

Usually a patient with poison ivy infection will feel very miserable because of the irritation that accompanies the lesion. In severe cases there is fever, and a general feeling of ill-health. Children who infect the areas of rash by scratching are apt to feel quite ill for a few days until the system can take care of the infection.

Without treatment most cases of poison ivy will disappear within a few days or a week. But in some instances it hangs on for weeks, even months. Treatment is directed toward keeping the patient as comfortable a possible by reducing irritation.

Baking soda and water, the first solution applied in most cases, often gives the necessary relief. If the case is bad it may be necessary to place the child in a bath of this mixture. Calamine lotion is also used to soothe the irritation if the baking soda fails. Bran bath often help too.

The acute lesion is likely to be treated differently by different doctors, for some obtain results with one lotion, some with another. There is n short cut to a complete cure.

Poison ivy isn't so very common in this country, but as can imagine the trouble we'd have if the five Quints got poisoned with it, we have one of the attendants go around the fences and any place else the weed might grow, just to make sure. I know the Quints well enough to know that if they found a new plant like this, with its nice shiny leaves, they would pick it and bring it to the nurse to me.

Baseball Experts Discover Kink in the Yankee Armor And Pick Reds to Win Series

Yanks Do Not Enjoy the Big Innings as Three Cylinders Are Missing

BAKER PICKS REDS

Manager of Detroit Tigers Says McCarthy's Men Can be Beaten

(By Billy White Associated Press Sports Writer).

Baseball's bookworms, who study the records to see how and why baseball's winds are blowing, came up with a startling discovery during yesterday's lull that may be of more than passing interest along Vine Street in Cincinnati.

They discovered a kink in the Yankee armor—and that's of first rate importance to the Burghers who gathered around Cincinnati's fountain square to discuss baseball these hot nights, because it's pretty generally agreed that Cincinnati's Reds will furnish New York Yankees their opposition in the world series this fall.

Figures have been dragged out to show that the Yankees are not enjoying the big innings that formerly marked their games as they crushed opponents in a powerhouse march to the American League title in recent years.

That seems due, in part, the experts say to the fact that there are three cylinders in the Yankee motor, that are missing too often. Frankie Crosetti, the lead-off man is having trouble staying above the .200 mark and it seems opposition pitchers can also heave a sigh of relief when Tommy Henrich and Babe Dahlgren are up. So the concentrated power of the Yankees is slipping and only twice in the last 200 innings of play have they been able to manage four runs in an inning.

Combine that flaw—if that's what it could be called—in the Yankee attack with the current superheaded performance of the Reds and it begins to look as though the world series will hardly be in the runaway class.

To add weight to the dopesters' contention comes Del Baker, in town with his Detroit Tigers for a three game series. Del says it looks like a wow of a series to him and that "the Yanks can be beaten."

SHANNONVILLE DEFEATS LATTA IN FINAL GAME

Team Will Now Play Cannifton for Title of S. Hastings Loop

SCORE IS 8-5

Hawks Tally Six Times in Fifth Frame to Cinch Pastime

Foxboro, August 1 (Special)—"On to Cannifton" is the jubilant battle cry of the Shannonville "Hawks" today as with their semi-final series with Latta now all past history, they see only three more victories standing between them and their first South Hastings League championship. With the chips down and playing for keeps, the "Hawks" came from behind in their sudden death game against Latta last night to score six big runs in the fifth inning to take the lead, and then with Ken Juby doing yeoman service as relief hurler, they kept the homesters off the score sheet for the last two frames to win the game 8 to 5 and thus go into the finals with Cannifton.

When Shannonville step into Cannifton for the first game of the finals on Wednesday evening they will be establishing a precedent in playoff history. Never before in the history of the league have these two teams met in the final round so with the league's perennial finalists, Latta and Foxboro, off on the sidelines this year, the scene of activity will be transferred to the southern end of the loop. Just how Cannifton and Shannonville will stack up in the "money" series will be something for the fans to guess about. Taking the season's play as a criterion, however, it would seem that Cannifton might have the bulge over the Shannonville nine, but, on the other hand, Cannifton are jinxed right from the start, as never have the team finishing first in the schedule ever gone through to win the championship. Cannifton undoubtedly have the better fielding team and also have four or five heavy hitters, who are liable to put the ball right out of the park without notice, but, against this, Shannonville have two hurlers in Barberstock and Juby, who will take a whole lot of beating. Therefore, with good pitching stacking up against heavy hitters and nifty fielding it ought to be a swell series to watch and may the better team win!

Lots of Debates

Last night's contest over at Latta ought to furnish a debatable topic of conversation for some time to come and undoubtedly the Latta supporters are today discussing the "ifs" and "might have beens" of their team's elimination from the playdowns. Had manager Welsh left Dunning on the mound instead of pulling him in the fifth after the infielders had put him in a hole by booting the ball around, maybe there would have been a different story to tell. After holding the opposition to two scratch singles up to the fifth it does seem tough on a pitcher to be pulled just because the infielders suddenly get the jitters and allow a couple of runs, but that's all in the game and if the Latta management guessed wrong, well, it's just their tough luck.

Scoring one run in the first inning on Jack Gowe's homer and adding two more in the second on a base on balls, a single, a fielder's choice and an infield out, the Latta nine went into an early lead over their Shannonville rivals last night and with the opposition going down in order up to the fourth, seemed to have the situation well in hand. Starting the fourth, however, Juby was safe on the second baseman's error and was safe at second on the next play as all again mussed things up in an attempted forceout. Hudgins had Juby cold at third on an attempted steal but the third sacker let the ball go to left field and Juby tallied on the play. Reid popped to C. Hall and Cook was out second to first, but Houston scored Spencer with a slashing single with Hill striking out to end the frame.

The fireworks started in the next inning as Snider was safe on the third baseman's error to be followed by Barnhardt's single, Snider taking third. Barberstock hit to the pitcher, who tossed home but Hudgins let the throw get away and Snider scored. G. Hall then went in to pitch and was greeted by singles from Juby and Spencer with Barnhardt scoring to put his team one ahead. Reid was hit, filling the bases and Cook flied to centre with Juby scoring after the catch. Houston then drove in Spencer and Reid with another slashing single and after working around to third scored on a wild throw by the third sacker. Latta made things interesting in their half as an error coupled with singles by Parks, Gowe and C. Hall brought their total up to five, but Juby came to Barberstock's relief on the mound to strike out the side. Parks and Marsh hit safely again in the sixth after two were gone but Gowe struck out to end the frame. In the last inning, Dunning singled to be followed by walks to pinch hitters Simms and Platt, but Art Hall was out at first to end the game.

Both teams kicked in with some snappy field work with the Latta lads pulling off a double killing in the sixth inning to cut short a Shannonville rally. Houston went well at the plate for the winners getting two singles, while for the losers Gowe with a homer and a single, and Parks with two singles were the best. The lineups:

Shannonville: Juby 1b and p; Spencer rf; Reid 2b; Cook ss; Houston c; Hill 3b; Snider cf; Barnhardt lf and Barberstock p and 1b.

Latta: Parks 1b; Marsh ss and p; Gowe cf; C. Hall 2b; Callaghan lf and c; Dunning p, lf and ss; Colden and N. Hall 3b; Hudgins c; Sayers and A. Hall rf and G. Hall p.

SHELL 'OILERS' TAKE CORBYS 13-8 TO EVEN SERIES

Sedore - Led Squad Outhit the Losers Getting Their Blows in Pinches

LOOSELY PLAYED

Umpire Maracle Sustains Broken Bone in Ankle After Collision

It's "all even" in the Belleville intermediate "A" play-offs for the O.A.S.A. honors between the Corbys A.C. and the Shell "Oilers" as the latter knotted the current playdowns at the Flats last evening by winning a rather free-hitting and argumentative tussle by a 13 to 8 count, after Corbys had won the first decision last week. Garnering 18 base hits, seven of which were of the extra base nature, off the deliveries of Eddie Schrieder, the "Oilers" centred their attack on a sixth and seventh inning barrage, that netted them eight runs, and saw Johnnie Bawden returned the winning pitcher, after losing the first decision.

The batters held the upper hand last night as both sides pounded the spheriod hard and often, a total of 28 hits being registered by both teams. The series continues with the third game on Wednesday evening. An unfortunate incident marred the game when Umpire Josh Maracle, of Point Anne, sustained a fractured leg during a collision of players and the official near first base in the sixth inning, but Umpire Maracle courageously continued until he was forced to retire and was taken to the Belleville General Hospital in the seventh, Umpire George Clapper being pressed into service from the stands to finish the game.

Never Headed

The "Oilers" took the lead in the initial frame, scoring once and came back to count three more in the second, as Corbys garnered two in that frame. Play was rather even from that point until the sixth when the "Oilers" got to Schrieder for four more runs and duplicated this feat in the fifth. The Corbys made their final bid in the seventh to score five but left three stranded in the eighth.

Bill Whalen, Shell centre fielder, with a triple, double and two singles in five tries led the hitters of the night, as Moon, a teammate counted a triple, double and single. The Oilers" collected seven extra base hits and therein remained the secret of victory. Cole hit for the circuit with one on in the second, as Reid ,Cy Barriage and Cole each counted two hits each. Bawden was somewhat wild, walking five to Schrieder's three. A fast double play by Corbys and three successive fly balls caught by the Oilers" in the eighth inning were the feature defensive plays of the game.

HAMBLETONIAN TO BE RACED ON AUGUST 9

Three - Year - Old Trotting Stake This Year Will Have Value of $40,000

FLEMINGS TO ENTER

Father and Two Sons from Canada Will Have Starters

(By Whitney Martin Associated Press Sports Writer).

New York, Aug. 1 (AP)—The village of Goshen, drowsing in the New York hills, is rousing from midsummer lethargy these days, putting on its best bib and tucker in preparation for that annual occasion when, for one glorious day, it holds the United States harness racing spotlight.

On that day, Aug. 9, the $40,000 Hambletonian classic, inaugurated in 1926, will be held at Good Time track ,and the population of the village will swell from 3,500 to about 40,000 almost overnight.

The race is named after Hambletonian 10, great stallion who was foaled at Sugar Loaf, about six miles from Goshen, and is buried at Chester, about six miles from the place where the race immortalizing his name is run.

Hambletonian 10 was bred by Jonas Seely and sold to William Rysdyd for $125 in 1849. It is estimated that 95 percent of the harness horses racing today are lineal descendants of the 10th of the Hambletonian line.

This year's race will have three Canadian drivers—Vic Fleming of Dundas, Ont., who now lives in Syracuse when not travelling the circuit and his two boys Charlie and Bill.

It is strictly for three-year-olds, and the purse is made up of the stake payments and entry fees. For instance, the stake payment for yearlings is $10. It zooms to $200 as two-year-olds, and $250 for the three-year-olds. The final starting fee is $500.

The race may be either two, three or four heats. If one entry wins two heats, it's all over or if he wins two out of three. However, if a different horse wins each of the three heats, the three will race a deciding heat. Four heats have been necessary on two occasions.

CHIEFS' HURLER SOLD TO PIRATES

Club Gives Bundle of Cash and Four Players for Johnny Gee

Pittsburgh, Aug. 1 (AP)—Keeping one eye on the fast-moving Cincinnati Reds and another on 1940, the Pirates today bet four players and a sizeable bundle of cash that "the biggest man in baseball" would prop up their injury-riddled pitching staff.

President Bill Benswanger and Manager Pie Traynor silently stole away on an off day to annex services of John Gee, 23-year-old southpaw who towers nine inches above the six-foot altitude and tips the scales at 215 pounds.

The giant flinger has been setting the International League ablaze by his brilliant performance with the Syracuse Club. He won 17 games and lost 11 last year in his first full campaign since leaving the University of Michigan. His record for 1939 is much more imposing with 16 victories, four defeats, 90 strikeouts.

Cash in the deal is reported to run well into five figures. The four players kicked in are for delivery next spring and will not be named until then. Gee joins the Bucs Sept. 10, unless Syracuse winds up in the International playoff series.

Cincinnati admirers want to stage a McKechnie day for General Manager Warren C. Giles who brought Bill McKechnie to the Reds.... That's O.K., but we say Bob Quinn of Boston should be cut in on the gate....After all, he's the guy who let Bill go to Redland.

NEWARK BEARS STILL IN RACE FOR THE PENNANT

Only 7½ Games from Top and Playing Smart Baseball

DEFEAT ROYALS

Buffalo Whittles Lead of Jersey City to 2½ Games

By the Associated Press

Just in case anyone's counted Newark Bears out of the race for the International League pennant it might be well to take a long look at the standings of the teams.

True, you'll find the Bears down in fifth place, an unusual spot for them, but don't let that fool you. That international race is tighter than a drum for a change, and, despite their lowly position, the defending champions are only 7 1-2 gamess behind the pace-setting Jersey City Giants.

The way they're going now, the Bears don't look on that margin as too hard to chop down. They scored their fourth win in a row yesterday, a 7-6 triumph over Montreal Royals. It took some heroic relief pitching by Ivy Paul Andrews to pull the Newarkers through, however. Ahead 7-3, mainly because of the home-run clouting of Walt Judnich and Buster Mills early in the game, the Bears almost lost out in the ninth when Norm Branch was walloped for four successive hits.

Andrews quicky cooled down the Royals. He made Maurice Von Robays pop out, and then forced Goodie Rosen to bound into a double play.

Lead Is Whittled

The Giants saw their lead over the second place Buffalo Bisons whittled down to 2 1-2 games when they took a 7-1 trouncing from Rochester Red Wings while the herd was trimming Baltimore 3-2. In the other game, the fourth-place Syracuse Chiefs also took advantage of the chance to move up on the league-leaders by beating Toronto 6-3.

Mike Ryba, the veteran Red Wing hurler, held Jersey City to eight hits while his mates were combing three opposing flingers for 12. Jimmy Asbell paced the Wings' atttack with three out of four.

Bob Kline's seven-hit flinging, and a ninth-inning homer by Henry Helf enabed the Bisons to stop Baltimore while Ted Kleinhans also twirled a seven-hitter in pacing the Chiefs to their win over Toronto.

FIGHTS LAST NIGHT

The Shell "Oilers" knotted the city O.A.S.A. series with their Corbys A.C. rivals with a 13 to 8 win last night, the Corbys gang winning the first nod 3-2 last Friday. Judging from the two separate scores it would seem as though the "Oilers" can out-slug the Corbys, but when it comes to closely-contested games, the veteran Barnett-led clan has the edge. Last night's game was not as interesting to watch as was Friday's tilt, although there was plenty of apple-knocking for those who enjoy seeing the base runners traverse the paths. A total of 28 hits were garnered in by the batters of both squads, the "Oilers" getting 18 safeties to Corbys ten. Johnnie Bawden went right back at the Corbys, after losing the first decision, while Eddie Schrieder was Skipper Barnett's choice for mound duty. Both pitchers were hit hard and often and a timely base blow might have seen a different story, had Cole hit in the eighth, he didn't as Bawden forced him to pop up for an out.

After the dust of battle had settled and the many arguments that crept into the pastime, had subsided—the actual difference between the winner and the loser last night hinges solely on the matter of extra base hits. The Sedore-led squad touched Schrieder for seven extra base hits, four triples and three doubles and every one was productice of earned runs. On the other hand Corbys only found Bawden for three extra base hits, Cole's circuit blow for two runs in the second and doubles by Reid and Miller. As we pointed out no later than last week, a timely double with more than one aboard is oftimes of more value than three subsequent singles under the same situation and last night just about proved this question,.because the "Oilers" were whacking out extra base hits with runners on first and second, which always meant two runs scored in their favour. Of course the series is all even and Corbys have Con Harris, who has already beaten the Shell, to toss in tomorrow, while Sedore may have to gamble with Bawden again, if he doesn't use "Sonny" Green or Stewart.

A unique and very unfortunate incident occurred during last night's game, Umpire Josh Maracle, of Point Anne, sustaining a fractured leg. The bone fractured is only a small one above the ankle but the injury will keep him out of employment for some weeks to come. Maracle was in collision with second baseman Frank Murray, as the latter was running to cover first on a hit ball. The player collided with Umpire Maracle, with the result he turned his ankle, breaking the leg bone. Maracle has been doing a fine chore of officiating in the current O.A.S.A. playdowns in Belleville and his accident is most untimely and even more regretful as the league will lose his services. Good umpires are hard to find, when play-off time rolls around, as the players become irritable and occasionally "pop off" when close decisions are called against them. It is at this point when good coolheaded officials are valuable and Maracle can ge classed in this category. A benefit game is being planned for Umpire Josh Maracle and it is hoped every softball addict in the district will respond to assist in the defraying of his hospital expenses.

The Belleville "Orfuns" do not have a scheduled game in the Bay of Quinte League this week. However, they have two games left, both postponements, one with the Air Force and the other with Picton. Efforts to have the "Flyers" play in Belleville Thursday and the locals go to Picton on Friday are in the making. Incidentally Skipper "Bud" Wilkins says the Friday game at Picton is definitely on and practice has been called for every night this week. "All we've got to do is win two of our next four scheduled games and they can't keep us out of a league play-off berth," reminded Wilkins today, as he continued his search for a shortstop.

Science has finally caught up with dishonest sportsmen and unethical veterinaries who dope race horses. By means of 22,000 experiments the New York Racing commission has classified 74 known drugs that might be used in doping horses. They have gathered so much knowledge about the ill-famed practice that they feel confident few persons will attempt to tamper with the animals on New York tracks. The commission has a complete set of charts to aid in identification of the drugs used in doping of horses.

"Twenty years after"—yes it was just 20 years ago that the Cincinnati Reds won the National League pennant and continued on to win the world series. Today the Dutchmen along the Ohio feel their long wait of two decades is to be rewarded with another National League flag and a crack at the hated Yankees. All the Reds have to do is play .500 ball to snatch the coveted rag, while the Pirates and Cards would have to play better than .666 ball to head the Reds. Barring accidents Skipper Bill McKechnie, who is considered one of the shrewdest managers in the big leagues and who "keeps his fingers crossed," hopes for the best, despite the absence of Ival Goodman, the Reds' hard-hitting outfielder, who is on the injured list.

Sport Spice — The Shannonville Hawks advanced to the finals in the South Hastings League, winning over Latta in the semi-finals; the Hawks now meet the Cannifton "Sluggers" in the league finals.... The Yankees are not for sale—so says President Ed Barrow....Babe Ruth's lifetime home run hitting amounted to 714; Lou Gehrig is second with 494, but Jimmy Foxx only needs 46 more to top Columbia Lou's total......We hear a lot of arguments and squawking relative to umpiring at local softball games at the Flats; perhaps if the mushball moguls wouldn't try to run the game "on the cheap" and pay their officials some worthwhile remuneration they'd get better satisfaction .....After all one gets just what they pay for in this old world of ours.

SOCCER TEAMS BATTLE TO 2-2 DRAW

(By Wally Hilton Canadian Press Staff Writer).

Winnipeg. Aug. 1 (CP)—Youth shaded age in the first of the best-of-three Dominion Football Association soccer final here last night when Montreal Carsteel and Vancouver Radials battled to a 2-2 draw. The second game will be played Wednesday and the third Friday.

The veteran Carsteel team, eastern titlists, wilted badly in the second half and allowed Radials, youthful western champions to bang in two goals to tie the game after leading 2-0 with only 37 minutes to play. Carsteel set a hot pace in the first half and their rushing tactics disorganized the Radial attacks.

Black Evening Dresses With Pink Backs

Coats Divided Crosswise According to New Winter Novelties

Paris, Aug. 1—(AP)—Black evening dresses with pink backs, coats with clown collars of silver fox and swagger coats seamed down the middle with the left half in plain material and the right half in plaid stood out today among novelties in Paris' show of new winter fashions.

Coats also were divided crosswise—with brown sealskin on top and black sealskin on the bottom. A new astrakhan fur shaded from brown to black. Sealskin bandings topped wide box pleats on wool swing coats.

Rippled fur collars in clown style were featured by Alix for afternoon coats. She showed short coats of pleated furs and voluminous plaid swagger coats with large sleeves and matching fur or fabric hoods. Redingotes were wasp-waisted and many had draped cape tops or cape sleeves.

Day dresses fitted skin-tight except for draped fullness concentrated in front or back. Sleeves were long and plain necks either severely high or v-shaped. Dresses repeated coat collars in taupe brown, leaf greens, clover purple, faded-wine reds, grey and black.

Brought Under Guard To Daughter's Bedside

Dr. Smith, Former University Head, Visits Very Ill Daughter

Baton Rouge, La., Aug. —(AP)—Dr. James Monroe Smith, indicted former President of Louisiana State University, was brought under guard today to the bedside of his daughter, who is critically ill.

Smith, held on 40 charges ranging from swindling to forgery, was brought here from the federal jail in New Orleans where he has been kept since he was returned from Brockville, Ont., a month ago.

His daughter, Mrs. Owen Waller Ware, whose husband is charged with assisting Smith when he disappeared from Baton Rouge June 25, developed blood poisoning after birth of a son two weeks ago. Blood transfusions were given her last night.

STARLING PROBLEM BAFFLES

Chatham, Ont., Aug. 1 (CP)—Dr. A. E. Northwood, Medical Health Officer, is ready to admit the starling situation here has him baffled. He had tried every way he knows to get rid of the pests without results. Now he has decided to call a mass meeting of citizens to hear suggestions.

NORTH HASTINGS COMMUNITY HAS ANNUAL PICNIC

On Tuesday, July 25th., 1939, the annual North Hastings Community Picnic was held at Searles' Beach, Oak Lake, with an attendance of seventy-one.

The families represented were:—Hinchliffe, Hazard, Paul, Sprackett, Pound, Wilson, Holden, Orser, Ray, Marisette, Heath, Lounsberry, McMullen, Marshall, Ray, Kemp, Rankin and Hubble.

After dinner had been served a program of sports was carried out under the direction of the Sports Committee.

An interesting feature was the nail-driving contest in which young and old took part. Mrs. Clarence Marshall won the attractive prize for the ladies. Mrs. John Hinchliffe, although not a winner, showed that fine pioneer spirit characteristic of her by successfully driving the nail into the block. There was keen competition among the men in this contest, with Mr. Edgar Ray eventually winning the prize.

Carrying a peanut perched precariously on the blade of a knife for a short distance was an amusing contest. The perseverance of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Ray won them the prize.

Prizes were given to the oldest lady and gentlemen present, who were Mrs. John Hinchliffe, Wallbridge, and Mr. B. F. Hazard, Plainfield. The prize for the youngest baby was presented to Baby Barbara McKenzie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clayton McKenzie, Gilmour.

It was decided that the picnic be held next year at the same place on the last Tuesday in July.

TEST SHELTERS WITH HUMANS

Advice is Given by Prof. Haldane to Settle Discussion

London, Aug. 1 (CP)—J. B. S. Haldane, the scientist who favors human tests for scientific theories, wants to substitute men for goats in determining the safety of steel air raid shelters. He, too, would act the part of guinea pig.

The professor's views are embodied in a report of the air raid precautions coordinating committee.

Haldane, the chairman, has advocated construction of deep bomb-proof refuges as contrasted with the Sir John Anderson plan now in operation under which millions of backyard steel shelters are being supplied.

"Too Optimistic" Says Another

Haldane's committee criticized as "far too optimistic" the government report on how goats in the steel shelters withstood experiments.

"The best way to clear the physiological questions would be to conduct experiments on human beings," said the committee report.

Haldane, 46 years old, once drank hydrochloric acid to determine its effect. At another time he submitted to an artificial induction of diabetes and then underwent an operation without anaesthetic to aid his colleagues.

CONSPIRATORS

By ARTHUR ANDREWS

"If I remember correctly," Mr. Bellamy's voice was as cold as the August sun was hot, "this cross-country jaunt of yours was described as restful, and as comfortable as my home."

He contemplated a dried beef sandwich without enthusiasm, wondering how a man of his age could be persuaded by a cocky Harvard graduate of 23 to leave a cool mountain lodge and go traipsing about the country.

John Bellamy II, who had sold the trip to his father decided this was not the time to discuss the merits of cross country travel.

"Where," he asked, "is the thermos bottle, dad?"

"Where?" echoed that suffering parent. "Your impeccable Jones failed to put it in the hamper."

Jack groaned as he looked around the rather forsaken country through which the well-oiled motor road wound like a black snake.

"It seems to me," Mr. Bellamy was working up quite a heat, "it seems to me that with all the tinkering you do you'd know what was wrong when a car stops. Or," witheringly, "have consented to Jones coming along."

John relapsed into silence.

He wondered what had gone wrong.

Jones had sworn that Daphne Orcott's one-day-a-week cleaning woman had told his—Jones'—sister that Daphne was leaving with Dorothy Carter for California, starting at six o'clock Wednesday morning. Today.

He had worked on his father, stressing the point that that gentleman need the relaxation only leisurely travel could produce—cross-country travel to California, particularly.

The senior Mr. Bellamy had been finally convinced and had even agreed to an early start. Five o'clock to be exact.

This was the lonesomest spot Jack Bellamy could find and here he had stopped.

Ostensibly the car wouldn't go.

Actually Jack planned to park here until Daphne and her girl friend came along.

Daphne was Jack's big moment.

There was no one like her. That's what Jack thought.

John Bellamy just refused to think. Refused to discuss the girl. With all the available debutantes, daughters of his friends and business associates this son of his—his only child—would pick some unknown stenographer as the future Mrs. Bellamy.

He had dwelt on the well known modern belief that absence makes the heart grow fonder—for somebody else—and had asked Jack to consider a six months' vacation from Daphne. They had had quite a session, and because John Bellamy Sr.'s heart wasn't in working order any longer—his son had consented.

Then had come the news.

Jack was certain once his father had met Daphne he would be unable to hold out. So enthused was he with his plan that he completely forgot the girl's habit of always being late.

Six o'clock was the starting hour, but it was well past ten before the girls were under way. And out in the desert Jack listened to his father, stubbornly insisted not to move until Daphne had appeared on the scene.

Mr. Bellamy paused as a shabby little flivver came up and stopped in front of them,

A girl's charming face looked out at them.

Beside her sat another girl, fair and blue-eyed.

They saw only Mr. Bellamy, for suddenly Jack was under the hood examining the engine.

"Haven't any water on board have you?" asked Mr. Bellamy.

"I'm sorry—we have only drinking water, not enough for—"

"Don't want it for the car; dying of thirst," explained Mr. Bellamy.

"The poor thing!" exclaimed the other girl. "I'll get it, Daphne."

At that moment Jack Bellamy's head emerged turle-wise from the car, his expectant eyes seeking the dark-haired girl.

She saw him at the same moment and paled.

Mr. Bellamy drank deeply from the silver cup again and again. It was a shining cup—Daphne's christening cup—and bore her name. The horn-rimmed spectacles of Mr. Bellamy peered closely at the inscription.

"Daphne Martens—Martens—that your name?" he asked sharply.

"Yes," admitted Daphne, regaining her lost color.

"I knew a Martens. Old friend of mine. We used to hunt in Canada together, long ago. What was your father's name?"

"Isaac," she said reluctantly.

Bellamy looked disturbed, and his face softened.

"He was my friend. And he has passed away, my dear?"

"Two years ago, at Los Angeles," she answered.

He nodded.

"I heard that. A brave man, and a thoroughly honest friend; one in a thousand. I am very glad to meet his daughter, My name is Bellamy. John Bellamy."

"Thank you, Mr. Bellamy. My father always kept our picture in his study, the one in which you were landing a monster trout."

"Right! Jack, come here and meet the daughter of an old friend of mine. Miss Martens, this is..."

Daphne's slim form stiffened.

"I have met your son, Mr. Bellamy."

"Jack, you never told me!"

He frowned on Jack, who looked equally stiff and distant.

This was something again.

Daphne had never told him about this friendship. He should have been pleased, but somehow he felt that Daphne had no right to hold out on him.

It didn't seem fair.

The Bellamy stubbornness was asserting itself. After all he had suffered!

"Miss Martens," he addressed his father coldly, "is the young woman I wanted to marry."

"What?" bristled Mr. Bellamy, immediately mindful of the scenes over the undesirable girl Jack had wanted to marry.

"I thought you said 'Martin.' Why didn't you say she was Isaac Marten's child?"

"One of Daphne's pies," irrelevantly broke in Dorothy. as she came forward with a huge flaky apple pie in her hands.

"I'm starved, and it's 20 miles to the next town—who will have a slice of pie?"

She put her things on the running board of the Bellamy car. She flashed a silver knife and passed pieces of delicious pie around on paper plates.

Mr. Bellamy ate, and mutely passed his plate for more.

"Anyone who can make a pie like this .. .. the daughter of my best friend.....Daphne, my dear, go and make it up with Jack!"

Daphne led Jack to the shabby little car that she and Dorothy owned together. She bent and swept a kiss at the open door.

"The dear old lizzy.....it brought us right to you!"

"Why," Jack was still feeling hurt, "why didn't you tell me about your father?"

Daphne sighed. "I really should have. But I intended to keep it for a surprise. And then when your father refused to even see me—why I couldn't then!"

To be together again was enough for the present.

So Jack went to great detail explaining how he had planned the meeting. Daphne, however, did not go into any detail, in fact she said nothing about bribing her one-day-a-week maid to tell Jones' sister about the proposed California trip.

THRIFTIEST FARMER

This farmer came out to see how the hired hands were getting along. We had a jug of water and a jug of oil under the same shock of wheat.

The farmer got thirsty while he was out there and he reached down under the shock of wheat to get a drink; but he would not take his eyes off the hired hands for fear they would miss a lick, I guess. He fumbled around under the shock of wheat and he got hold of the wrong jug. He got the jug of black oil.

Still watching the hired hands, he brought up his arm, pulled the cob out and turned up the jug—glug-glug—and got his mouth full of old black oil; but he would not spit it out—not this fellow—no, sir. He just waited until the binder came around again and he hailed it and got down under it and oiled the whole machine.— Senator Josh Lee in U.S. Congressional Record.

A GALLANT ROMEO

He may be a descendant of the geese that saved Rome. We purchased him, a fine fat young gander, for the Christmas dinner, but he became a great pet with the family, and a lonesome one, there being none of his kind in the farm yard.

There were, however, three ducks—a drake and two ducks—which the next Spring hatched out 13 ducklings. When they were old enough to run Romeo adopted them. The mothers seemed quite willing to cast aside their responsibility, leaving Romeo and his family to their own devices. He never ate until they were fed. He led them to the tenderest grass and clover, also the early lettuce and spinach.

He found exclusive puddles for them, even on the front lawn. If not deep enough he proceeded to pull up grass roots and dance a stately, dignified two-step that caused rills, rivulets and mud holes in any part of the lawn in a short time.

Mrs. F. A. Hayes, Columbia County, Pennsylvania, in the Pennsylvania Farmer.

ALD ARMY RUM

We've found how to start a real argument. Just ask someone what "S.R.D." means.

In case you don't know, "S.R.D." used to be stamped on those big crocks used for the rum rations at the war.

We found so many explanations, and few agree on the meaning. Some one old soldier it was: "Special Rum Distribution", or "Soldiers' Rum Department," or "Service Rations Depot, or a number of others.

Someone in the R.C.R. at London said it stood for "Special Rum Demerara."

Then we got in touch with Major W. J. Home, M.C., who served with gallantry with the R.M.C. in France and is still with the regiment at London. He says there was always speculation about it, but he thinks it stands for "Service Rum Drum".

Billy Home ought to know, but if anyone wants to join the argument, come on in.—W. L. Clark in Windsor Star.

WALL ST

New York, Aug. 1—(AP)— The stock market took on a semblance of recovery today after wilting moderately in the early proceedings.

Without much of a pick-up in activity, initial fractional setbacks were converted into gains of as much as a point or so in a number of cases near the fourth hour. There was an assortment of issues, however, that refused to come out of the rut.

Among stocks, Western Union, Anchor Hocking Glass and Du Pont managed to touch new highs for 1939.

Improved were Chrysler, Youngstown Sheet, Electric Auto-Lite, Air Reduction, U.S. Rubber, Great Northern, North American, Kennecott, Pathe, United Aircraft, American Can, Philip Morris and Union Carbide.

Inclined to lag were U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, U.S. Gypsum, Johns-Manville and Loft.

C.P.R. and McIntyre were marked up a notch in the Canadian group while Lake Shore shaded lower. Dominion 4s were in fair demand in the bond market.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Aug. 1—(CP)— Mining issues weakened moderately on Toronto exchange today and the industrials ruled higher while the Western oils held steady in the early session. By early afternoon some of the higher price golds were in a rising trend along with a group of the penny issues. Turnover was greater than the recent average with 319,000 shares changing hands in the first three hours.

Heavy buying in Kerr-Addison carried the price up to 2.07 in the early afternoon where it was only a cent under the high mark for the year. Other strong golds were East Malartic, Chesterville, Stadacona, Naybob and Francoeur.

Sherritt was the strongest of the base metal group. Utilities, foods and senior oils were the firmest of the industrial groups. Home Oil and Davies weakened narrowly and other western oils held steady to strong.

Little Change in Produce Prices

Toronto, Aug. 1.—A fractional advance by cheese was the only price shift on the Toronto open produce market yesterday, according to the Dominion Department of Agriculture. Both butter and eggs were firm.

A scarcity of eggs, particularly apparent in the A-medium grade, gave the egg market a stronger undertone. With demand improved, dealers reported no trouble in clearing their offerings. Retailers bought A-large eggs at 29c, A-medium at 28c, B-grades at 20c and C's at 17c to 18c.

Butter receipts were light and trading, in consequence, was on the quiet side. Prices were firm, with top-grade butter in best demand. There was no pressure on dealers to sell, and receipts were kept moving easily. No sale of Western butter was reported.

Montreal Eggs Gain.

Montreal, Aug. 1.—Egg prices advanced about 1 cent and potatoes moved up 5 cents on open produce markets here yesterday.

Cheese offerings eased ¼ cent, while butter was steady.

Creamery butter prints to retailers sold for 22½-23 cents a pound and solids for 22-22½ cents. Western butter, delivered in Montreal, was unquoted. Quebec No. 1 pasteurized in wholesale jobbing lots made 21¾ cents. Receipts were 788 boxes.

Ontario white and colored cheese were both quoted at 11¾ cents. Quebec white was quoted at 10⅞ cents and colored at 11 cents. Receipts were 1,525 boxes.

Graded egg shipments in used free cases sold at 28-28½ cents a dozen for A-large, 26-26½ cents for A-medium, 19 cents for B-large, 16 cents for C. Receipts were 324 cases.

HOG QUOTATIONS

Toronto, Aug. 1 (CP)—Bacon hog prices were weak and unsettled at reporting markets today, dropping to still lower levels. Dressedweights were down 25 cents at Barrie and Hamilton, 30 cents at Hull and Peterborough, and 10 cents at Stratford. Liveweights: Hull $8.

Dressed weights: Barrie $11.40; Hamilton $11.25; Hull $10.70; Peterborough $10.75 plus transportation; Stratford $10.50 plus transportation; London $11.

LIVESTOCK

Montreal, Aug. 1 (CP)—Receipts: Cattle 57, calves 393, hogs 1,098, sheep and lambs 366.

Cattle — Medium cows $3.50-$4, common butchers $2.75-$3.25, common bulls $3-$3.25.

Calves—Good veals $7-$7.50, with tops up to $8, medium veals $6.50, common light veals $5, grassers $3.75-$4.

Sheep and lambs—Good ewes and wethers $8.50, sheep $2.50-$3.50, buck lambs were cut $1 per hundred and cull lambs $2 per hundredweight.

Hogs — Bacons fed and watered $9.25, hogs on rail grade $12.30 hot weight; sows $5.25-$6. Selects drew $1 per hog premium with the regular cuts on off grades.

Toronto, Aug. 1 (CP)—Sales were too few on steers and heifers to establish prices at mid-session on the Toronto livestock market today while other sections held steady. No prices were established for hogs but bids were $11 for rail grades. Cattle holdover from Monday was 1,300 head.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Livestock Branch were: Cattle 920, calves 860, hogs 1,230, sheep and lambs 610.

Butcher cows were $3-$4.50 with canners and cutters $2.25-$3. Good bulls brought $4.75-$5 with light bologna bulls $3.50-$4. Few fed calves were $6.75-$8.

Choice veal calves sold at $8.50-$9 with some reaching $9.50. Common vealers were down to $5.50 and grassers $4.50-$5.

Previous close for bacon hogs was $11.50 for rail grades. Members of Packers' Council have ceased buying live hogs on the Toronto market.

Good ewe and wether lambs were $8.75 delivered by rail and $8.50 delivered by truck. Sheep sold at $2-$4 cwt.

WINDSOR CRIMES UNDER PROBE

Man Shot Resisting Bandit Recovering From Wound in Stomach

Windsor, Ont., Aug. 1—(CP) — With Lance Jervelund believed out of danger in hospital, Windsor police today pressed investigation into the series of crimes in the last two months that was climaxed with the near-murder of the 46-year-old service station operator Saturday. Since the first of June Windsor has had six armed robberies and two shootings when attempts to resist the bandits were made.

All members of the detective force and additional special constables have been detailed to work on the recent shooting which occurred when Jervelund attempted to kick a revolver from the hand of two robbers. He received a .38-calibre bullet in the stomach. Alex Clarke, drug store manager, also recovered from a stomach wound suffered when he refused to re-open his store for robbers.

An East Windsor youth was arrested today and held for investigation. Persons held up in a bank, service station, two cigar stores, grocery store and a bus driver will attempt to identify him. Police theory is that four of five men are involved in the recent outbreaks.

DR. MORLEY A. DAY DIES SUDDENLY

Well-Known Dentist Stricken at Home Early This Afternoon

Dr. Morley A. Day, prominent dentist of this city, died suddenly at his residence, 24 Dunbar Street, about one o'clock this Tuesday afternoon. He had arrived home for luncheon and was in the bathroom when he dropped dead. Mrs. Day heard a noise coming from that section of their apartment and upon reaching the bathroom she was unable to open the door as Dr. Day had fallen to the floor in such a position as to block the opening of the door inward. Medical and other assistance was summoned, but death had been instantaneous.

To a host of friends in Belleville and in the surrounding district the announcement of Dr. Day's death will come as a great shock. He was apparently in good health when he left for his office this morning and did not complain of feeling ill when he arrived home for luncheon.

In the death of Morley A. Day, D.D.S., the city of Belleville has lost a good citizen and the dental profession loses a prominent and efficient member. For many years he practised his profession here and enjoyed a large practice. By personal and business friends he will be sincerely missed. To Mrs. Day and the members of the family the sincere sympathy of many citizens will be extended.

The late Morley Ash Day was born 58 years ago in Harrowsmith, Ont., the son of the late Charles M. Day. He received his early education in Belleville where the family moved after his birth, graduating from Belleville High School. Later he attended Albert College graduating from that institution to attend the University of Toronto. He graduated in dentistry from that institution and was a member of the class of 1906.

He was a member of Bridge Street United Church and of Eureka Lodge No. 283, A.F. and A.M. He had resided practically all his life in Belleville.

Surviving are his mother, Mrs. J. A. Hunter, his widow, the former Alice Jane Earl, one daughter, Mrs. B. E. Armstrong, Toronto, four sons, Percy, Earl, Charles, all of Belleville, and Ted of Duparquet, Quebec, and one sister, Mrs. D. M. Periwy, Victoria, B.C., two brothers Ernest and Percy Day of Harrowsmith, and Ross Hunter, a half-brother, of Belleville.

The late Dr. Day was an ardent sports enthusiast, devoting much time to curling, bowling and other forms of athletics. He was an interested follower of baseball and took a keen interest in many other phases of athletic endeavors. Dr. Day was a talented musician.

The funeral notice appears elsewhere in this edition.

Honeymoon Couple Hurt in Accident

Marmora, Aug. 1 (Special)—An accident occurred on No. 7 Highway near Norwood on Saturday night, when a car driven by Ronald Toone of Ottawa, proceeding westerly was sideswiped by a car driven by Charles Armstrong of Peterboro, who was proceeding easterly. Mr. Toone was accompanied by Mrs. Toone, and the couple were on their honeymoon, having been married in Ottawa on Saturday. Mrs. Toone suffered a sprained ankle and a bruised arm. Passengers in the Armstrong car were Miss Mary Walsh of Hastings and her cousin, Marj. Walsh and James Welch of Peterborough. Miss Mary Walsh sustained an abrasion of the forehead and possible concussion while Miss Marj. Walsh had abrasion of the left ankle and sprained right ankle. The other passengers were unhurt.

The injured received medical attention at the office of Dr. Holdcroft, Havelock. Both cars were badly damaged. Provincial Traffic Officer J. Hatch of Marmora, investigated.

HEALTH AND HOT WEATHER.

By McKEOWN'S DRUG STORE

Hot weather always brings problems of health and the so-called "dog days" are especially trying to middle-aged and elderly people

What to do and what to take is the question uppermost in their minds. Perhaps a modified diet, supplemented by fruit juices is the answer; but why not let the doctor determine what is best?

Physicians understand — laymen do not. A doctor's observations are based on the result of scientific study and experience. If your health appears to be impaired by the summer heat he is qualified to advise you and to properly prescribe your diet and such medication as is indicated by your symptoms.

Use no drugs unless your doctor prescribes them and always remember the importance of having your prescriptions filled by a competent pharmacist.

"Dairy Queen" To Be Chosen At Convention

In the first contest of its kind ever held by Canada's dairy industry, a typical Central Ontario "Dairy Queen" is to be chosen by members of the Central Ontario Cheesemakers' Association at the British Empire Cheese Exhibition and Dairy Show to be held in this city in November.

Tentative plans for the holding of this unique event are now being drafted by executive members of the Association and prizes of $30 for the first place winner and $20 for the second "maid" selected have been suggested.

The contest open to all wives or daughters of cheesemakers or cheese factory patrons of the Central Ontario district will be in the nature of an elimination contest and will be conducted during the first stages of an eliminative selection of typical types from snapshots or photographs by the executive committee of the Association. The five or six final selections will be invited to Belleville to attend the annual banquet of the Association in connection with the convention at which first and second prize winners will be publicly selected.

According to tentative plans now arranged, all contestants are asked to submit their photographs or clear snapshots to the Front Street office of J. L. Irwin, Dominion Dairy Grader, and Honorary President of the Central Ontario Cheesemakers' Association. Points will be awarded not alone on beauty or cleverness of dress, but upon what judges believe to be typical points of the Ontario dairymaid.

SECOND QUARTER EARNINGS UP

61 Per Cent Increase of First 180 Large U. S. Corporations Over 1938

New York, Aug. 1 (AP)—Second quarter earnings of the first 180 large United States corporations to report totalled $243,398,000, about 61 per cent greater than the same period a year ago, but one per cent less than in first quarter, a compilation by The Associated Press showed today.

Earnings of 23 steel makers, respite extensive price cuts, increased to $12,206,000, compared with $11,308,000 in the preceding three months and a deficit of $9,445,372 for the same period last year.

Net profits of 14 public utilities, including American Telephone and Telegraph Co., totalled $65,948,000, down eight per cent from the first quarter but 12 per cent greater than a year ago.

Twelve chemical companies earned $32,857,000, against $30,416,000 in the previous period and $18,318,000 in the same quarter last year.

Railway Earnings

Ten railroads operated at a net loss of $2,726,000, compared with a first quarter net profit of $4,878,628. However, the roads showed considerable improvement over the deficit of $6,327,000 in the June quarter a year ago.

Second quarter net income of 10 oil companies totalled $9,089,841, up 63 per cent from the preceding period but 30 percent less than the same quarter last year.

Nine manufacturers of building materials and equipment more than doubled their net profits, earning $6,834,000 compared with $2,976,000 in the first quarter and $3,252,000 a year ago.

Net income of 10 food companies remained relatively stable, totalling $13,462,000 against $12,799,000 in the preceding three months and $12,653,000 in the second quarter last year.

Rumanian Guns Reported Drawn Up To Bombard Tesco

Budapest, Aug. 1—(AP)— The official Hungarian news agency said today that Rumanian artillery was drawn up on the left bank of the Tisza River in position to bombard Tecso, Hungarian village on the opposite bank.

The agency said the action followed the wounding of a Hungarian frontier guard by a Rumanian guardsman at Tecso, in southeastern Hungary, early today.

Two clashes were reported from that section Saturday and Sunday nights.

The Hungarian agency said the clashes came after Rumanian guards fired on Hungarian raftsmen on the river and shots struck a Hungarian customs house.

Last night, the statement continued, a Hungarian guard patrolling a bridge was shot. Sporadic shooting was reported through the night until 7 a.m.

In Bucharest official sources have denied any such border incidents occurred.

He was stricken five days ago at the San Francisco Bohemian Club's resort on the [illegible] river.

TORONTO COUPLE ROBBED OF $200

Police Pick Up Two Suspects on Vagrancy Charges

Toronto, Aug. 1—(CP)— Two masked men with revolvers held up Mr. and Mrs. John Silverberg at their home early today and escaped with $200. Police picked up two suspects on vagrancy charges in connection with the hold-up.

Mrs. Silverberg said the men were more nervous than their victims and one of them didn't even bother to pick up a $10 bill he dropped while rifling a cedar chest.

The men overlooked $2,000 in jewelry belonging to Mrs. Silverberg. It was in a dresser drawer, she said.

Silverberg had a $500 ring on his finger but kept his hand under a bedsheet so the men did not see it.

Silverberg is the owner of Gentle Knight, a horse stabled at Hamilton race track.

The men entered the apartment above Silverberg's stationery and tobacco shop by climbing to the roof of a garage and through a bathroom window.

COMMANDERS MEET ON CRUISER

Italian, German, Spanish Commanders Confer After Manoeuvres

Rome, Aug. 1 (CP)—Official disclosure was made today of a meeting last Sunday of Italian, German and Spanish commanders aboard the Italian cruiser Pola.

Admiral Cavagnari, Italian Naval Under-Secretary, presided. Germany was represented by Admiral Grassman and Spain by Major Regalado. Also present were General Pinna, Second in Command of Italy's Air Force, and Admiral Vladimiro Pini, Commander of the Second Italian Squadron.

A communique revealing that the conference took place after Italian naval and air manœuvres in the central Mediterranean area said:

"From July 24 to 30 there took place an important cycle of manoeuvres in which not only nearly all vessels and submarines of the fleet, with naval airplanes, but also large units of the air force participated.

Recent Manœuvres.

"The monœuvres, which took place in the waters bounded by Sardinia, Sicily, our possessions in the Ægean Sea, the coast of the (Italian) peninsula and that of provinces in North Africa, demonstrated not only the full value of the various naval and aviation units and formations, but also the perfection of the commands and the close coordination established between the navy and the air force in operating on the sea.

"A final meeting was held Sunday on board the Pola, flying the flag of the chief of the naval general staff, Admiral Cavagnari. Participating, in addition to the admirals and commanders of the principal naval units, were the assistant chief of the Italian Air Force general staff, General Pinna, and the commanders of the air forces on each side."

JULY RAINFALL BELOW AVERAGE

Nearly 3 1-5 inches more of rainfall fell throughout the Belleville district during the month of July 1938 than was registered in the corresponding month of 1939, according to statistics given out by officials of the Belleville Filtration Plant today. In July 1938 a total of 3.87 inches of rainfall was registered in Belleville, while for the corresponding month of July 1939 less than an inch of rainfall was in evidence in this district, when only 0.69 inches was officially measured, it was revealed today.

JITTERBUGS TO GO, DANCE MASTERS SAY

New York, Aug. 1 (AP)—An early demise for "jitterbug" dancing was predicted today by leaders at 56th annual convention of the dancing masters of America.

Leroy Thayer of Washington, the president, said most of the 500 delegates believed people are getting tired of the "jumping dances" and "acrobatic steps".

"The consensus is that the old ballroom dances are coming back, but with a faster tempo," he said.

IRISH ARISTOCRAT IN STAFF TALKS

Admiral Plunkett - Ernle - Erle - Drax Comes of Historic Family

London, Aug. 1 (CP)—Into proletarian Moscow Great Britain is sending a member of Ireland's aristocracy with a long string of family names, a Czarist title, and a distinguished career in war and peace to participate in the general staff talks that may lead to a European peace front.

He is Admiral Sir Reginald Aylmer Ranfurly Plunkett—Ernle-Erle-Drax, recently named principal Naval aide-de-camp to the King, second son of the late John William 17th Baron of Dunsany, which claims common ancestry with the noble House of Fingall in Ireland in Sir Christopher Plunkett, Deputy Governor of Ireland in 1432.

Family in Letters and Arms

The family has won distinction in letters as well as in arms. The present and 18th Baron of Dunsany, Edward John Moreton Drax, is the writer more commonly known as Lord Dunsany, member of the Irish Academy of letters and writer of dozens of plays and stories.

The Admiral, who is 59, went to sea in 1896 and became a lieutenant in 1901. He was appointed Commander in 1912. He was aboard the H.M.S. Lion at the Heligoland action, participated in the Battle of Jutland and was awarded the order of St. Stanislas by Czar Nicholas.

His book, "The Modern Officer on the Watch" attracted wide attention to his gifts as a writer on nautical subjects. Sir Reginald was president of the Naval Allied Control Commission at Berlin in 1923-24 and became royal aide-de-camp in 1927, a Vice-Admiral in 1932 and in the same year Commander-in-Chief of the America and West Indies Station. In 1935 he was made Commander-in-chief of the Plymouth Station.

He was in attendance on the King at the sailing of Their Majesties for Canada last May.

First Baron in 15th Century

Christopher, 1st Baron of Dunsany, was created baron by a writ of Henry VI in the 15th century.

Sir Reginald's mother, whose names were Ernle Elizabeth Louisa Maria Grosvenor assumed by royal licence on Dec. 20, 1905, the surnames of Erle and Drax in addition to and after those of Plunkett Ernle, thus united various names that have figured in the long family line of the Dunsanys.

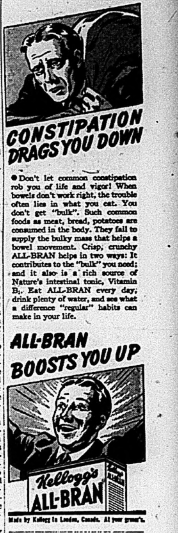
Her son followed her example and by royal licence assumed on Oct. 4, 1916, the additional names and arms of Ernle, Erle and Drax.

Charge Youth Impersonates Member of R. C. M. P.

Fort Erie, Ont., Aug. 1 (CP)—Police Chief A. E. Griffin said today the son of a well-known Fort Erie family would appear Friday in court charged with impersonating a member of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

Griffin, who refused to disclose the name of the youth, said the youth stopped United States tourists at a Dominion highway intersection and "fined" them $2 for failing to come to a complete stop.

The charge was laid after the man stopped a United States tourist familiar with Canadian procedure.



CONSTIPATION DRAGS YOU DOWN

● Don't let common constipation rob you of life and vigor! When bowels don't work right, the trouble often lies in what you eat. You don't get "bulk". Such common foods as meat, bread, potatoes are consumed in the body. They fail to supply the bulky mass that helps a bowel movement. Crisp, crunchy ALL-BRAN helps in two ways: It contributes to the "bulk" you need; and it also is a rich source of Nature's intestinal tonic, Vitamin B_1. Eat ALL-BRAN every day, drink plenty of water, and see what a difference "regular" habits can make in your life.

3 SHOTS FIRED AT FLEEING CAR

Driver Only Accelerated Speed and Disappeared from View

Residents along the lower section of Front Street were awakened from their sleep early this morning by the sharp staccato reports of gun fire. Eager and curious heads were seen cautiously peeking out of apartment windows seeking the cause of the early morning disturbances.

Later it was disclosed that P.C. Taylor had commanded the driver of a passing motor car to stop, but on the contrary, the driver accelerated the speed of his vehicle and sped away, prompting the officer to pull his service revolver and fire three shots into the air in an effort to attract attention or assistance.

Constable Taylor was patrolling his beat at 4.15 a.m. today when he observed an automobile being driven backwards from Campbell to Bridge St. along Front St. The actions of the driver appeared suspicious, prompting the officer to investigate, but when the driver was called upon to stop, he accelerated his speed along East Bridge St. and north on Pinnacle St. with the constable firing shots in the air in an effort to halt his progress.

The licence plate number of the fleeing vehicle is believed by P.C. Taylor to have been 87-N-87. The matter is being further probed by city police today.

Car is Found

Shortly before noon today an automobile bearing Ontario licence plates No. 87 N 97 was found abandoned near the farm of William Heath, Harold, where another motor car was stolen from Mr. Heath's garage.

Late last night a motor car was stolen at Odessa and Provincial Police are of the opinion that the vehicle left at Harold is the car thought to have been stolen at Odessa, but bearing licence plates that were stolen enroute and at Napanee.

When the car thieves saw P.C. Taylor in Belleville early today it is believed they became frightened and backed down Front Street, later speeding northerly on Pinnacle Street and subsequently to Highway No. 14, where they abandoned one car at Harold and stole a second. Provincial Constable W. E. Smith is investigating.

Speaker to Have Authority

The government motion for the parliamentary recess, which will be debated tomorrow, fixed Oct. 3 for reassembling. The Speaker would be empowered to reconvene the House before that date if the government so requested.

Mr. Chamberlain had made no vacation plans and Lord Halifax said he would take trips to his country place in Yorkshire "whenever circumstances permit."

Supply Minister Leslie Burgin expects to be busy with inspection of industrial works until early in October. Sir Kingsley Wood, Air Secretary, and Leslie Hore-Belisha, War Secretary, also said they were "staying in England." Health Minister Walter Elliot will visit Cap D'Antibes, France, but will return Aug. 16.

Tacit Warning to Germany

Many observers viewed the Prime Minister's discussion of the international situation in the House of Commons yesterday as another tacit warning to Germany coupled with a hint that the way to negotiation still lies open.

Mr. Chamberlain's assertion that if the war of "poisonous propaganda" could be halted the world's problems might be solved by peaceful discussion recalled his July 10 speech pledging support to Poland but addings "it may be that in a clearer atmosphere" improvements in the Danzig situation could be discussed.

His reference to the world armament race with the gloomy observation that it was difficult to see a solution unless "by war itself", was regarded as emphasizing Britain's preparedness and intent to fight if need be to fulfil her obligations.

POLISH CUSTOMS ENFORCING BAN

Shipment of Fat Products from Danzig Into Poland

Danzig, Aug. 1—(AP)— Polish customs officials today started enforcement of a ban against shipment of fat products from Danzig into Poland—the latest episode in the "herring and margarine war."

Several weeks ago Polish authorities imposed restrictions on fish shipments from the Free City and, with today's action, there were indications reprisals and counter-reprisals soon would extend to a long list of articles, which are supposed to pass freely over the common border.

The Danzig Senate protested to the Polish Commissioner for Danzig that the decision to exclude Danzig-made margarine violated trade agreements of May 1937. The Senate also revived the old quarrel over Polish customs inspectors serving in Danzig customs stations.

The Danzig Senate charged that the Polish inspectors were in reality "military spies" and that some of them had been involved in "kidnapping of Danzig citizens."

The Polish embargo on margarine imports was effective against only one firm, the Amada-Unida Company.

Vigorous Campaign

Warsaw, Aug. 1—(AP)—A vigorous campaign against foreign espionage and political activity attributed to Germans in Poland appeared to be under way today. Strict watch was kept on German societies, several of which have been ordered to disband.

An undetermined number of Polish Ukrainians at such cities as Lwow and Przenys were said to have been charged with "activities harmful to the Polish state in cooperation with foreign factors."

Those in custody were reported to be members of an illegal organization of Ukrainian Nationalists. Poland's approximate 5,000,000 Ukrainians are her largest minority. The Polish government was believed to have evidence that some of the autonomy-seeking Ukrainians were "in contact with Berlin."

NEVER CAME TO SURFACE

Renfrew, Ont., Aug. 1—(CP)—Sylvester Racoskie, 27, drowned in the Bonnechere River here yesterday.

Calling to two small children, the only witnesses of the accident, to watch how long he stayed under, Racoskie dived from a boom. After half an hour, the frightened youngsters summoned aid. Efforts to revive him were in vain.

MARK NEW ROAD THROUGH B. C.

Commission Member Believes Road Could be Completed in Two Years

Vancouver, Aug. 1—(CP) —A 2,100-mile road connecting Washington State with Alaska through a 'natural trench" in central British Columbia and the Yukon Territory was visualized by Representative Warren G. Magnuson, Chairman of the United States section of the British Columbia-Alaska Highway Commission.

"We believe we have found a good route and a much shorter route than those previously proposed," the 34-year-old Seattle congressman said as he arrived last night by plane after an all-day flight from Whitehorse. Y. T. "This route runs through central British Columbia, touching Stuart Lake, Takla Lake and the headwaters of the Skeena River."

Magnuson said the new route would be shorter than either the coastal route or Rocky Mountain trench route to the east considered by the Canadian and U.S. commissions in point session at Victoria this month.

"A network of roads, some not even mapped, runs through that country and once the Alaska road is started it could be completed probably within two years, if construction begin at different points" he said.

A fall meeting of the Canadian and U.S. commissions is planned for Ottawa. If a solution of financial problems can be reached then, Magnuson said, construction could be started by next July as far as the United States is concerned. That country is ready to build its part of the road "anytime."

NURSE ON STAND FOR FULL DAY

Tells Court Her Friendship With Dr. Allen Purely Platonic

Calgary, Aug. 1 (CP)—Hearing of assault charges against Mrs. Ethel Allen and her daughter, arising from the alleged tarring and feathering of a Calgary nurse, will continue Friday in police court here.

The mother, wife of Dr. J. L. Allen of Calgary, and her socially-prominent daughter, Betty, appeared in court yesterday before Magistrate D. C. Sinclair, who made the adjournment after most of the day had been taken up with the evidence of the 28-year-old nurse involved, Miss Alice Knowles. Bail of $100 each for Mrs. Allen and the daughter was continued.

Her friendship with Dr. Allen, the nurse told the court, was purely platonic and she declared in reply to questions from counsel that there had never been "any immoral relations" involved. She told of one occasion when Mrs. Allen threatened to "finish" any woman associating with her husband.

Miss Knowles told McKinley Cameron, K.C., acting for the Allens, that she had expected her interview with the mother and daughter on the night of July 18 to end in assault.

The nurse had been covered with a black tarry fluid, Dr. I. H. Brodie testified. He said she was sent to hospital, not as a medical case but because she needed cleaning up and it was women's work to do the task.

Miss Knowles uncovered her head to show the magistrate where her hair had been cut off to remove the roofing paint.

Mono Dvorkin, daughter of the landlord of the nurse's suite, said when she saw Miss Knowles running out of her room the night of July 18, the nurse was "all tarred up."

Teen - Aged Youngsters Win Championship

Montreal, Aug. 1—(CP)—A group of 'teen-aged youngsters in the Calgary Rifle Club were announced here today as winners of the Junior Small Bore Rifle championship of Canada.

Members of the team, believed to be one of the youngest ever to win the title are P. J. Robinson, 15, Don Jones, 12, Melvin Beatty, 17, George Wicher, 17, and Alma Nerland, 18.

The Calgary outfit finished with 1,479 points.

College Institute and Vocational School of Brockville, Ont., scored 1,473.

BRITAIN 'NOW READY FOR ANY EMERGENCY'

British Elections Seen in November, Parties Are Ready

Liberal and Labor Parties Will Make Effort to Persuade Government to Bring Parliament Back Before October 3

EUROPEAN SITUATION

Parties Fear Government May Return to Policy of Appeasement — Government Can Go for Year Yet Without Election

By J. F. SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Aug. 2—(CP Cable) — Unless the international situation deteriorates sharply Great Britain is almost sure to have a general election in November.

Parliament will adjourn Friday until Oct. 3 when it is expected it will sit for three weeks before dissolution in preparation for the election.

The Chamberlain government could go for another year before appealing to the people, but Prime Minister Chamberlain favors an election this year unless the international situation interferes.

Election Machinery Ready

The Conservative, Labor and Liberal parties have had their machines ready for months for an election.

Meanwhile both the Labor and Liberal parties will make one more effort to persuade the government to bring parliament back before Oct. 3.

They fear the European situation will get worse the middle of August or in September and want parliament reassembled to review government policies. For one thing they fear the government will return to the policy of appeasement.

The Prime Minister already has assured the House of Commons the government will adopt no new foreign policy without summoning parliament and intends to carry out its plan of adjourning until October.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Aug. 2—(CP)—A fairly deep disturbance is centred near the west coast of Hudson Bay with a trough extending southward across Lake Superior, and another deep low area is centred off the Labrador coast while pressure is high over Quebec, also the Prairie Provinces and Rocky Mountain States. Showers have occurred over Northwestern Ontario and near Lake Erie, also in Eastern Quebec and New Brunswick while in nearly all other parts of the Dominion the weather has been fair with moderate temperature.

Lake Superior—Fresh winds, shifting to west and northwest; cloudy with thundershowers. Thursday—Fresh northwest and west winds; partly cloudy and moderately warm.

Manitoba—Fresh westerly winds; partly cloudy and moderately warm today and Thursday.

Why the Weather!

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Dog-days! It is not a recent notion that the warm, sultry days between July 27 and August 11 are called "dog-days". The idea dates back to classical mythology. The Romans called this hottest part of the year an equivalent of "dog-days", but it was so-called by them as it was associated with that part of the year when Sirius, the dog-star, rose and set with the sun. The Greeks and Babylonians had a similar custom, and was probably copied by the Romans. So "dog-days" refers to a certain behaviour of Sirius, the brightest star of the sky, rather than to the behaviour of our canine friends.

MISS M. MOYSE SAYS PRESTRIDGE INFLICTED WOUND

Makes Statement to Police After Showing Improvement in Cobourg Hospital

SPEAKS OF ADVANCES

Tells Police She Does Not Remember Anything After Shot Was Fired

Cobourg, Ont., Aug. 2—(CP) — Police investigating the death of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Prestridge said today they had been told by Marguerite Moyse that she was shot by her step-father when she resisted his advances.

Prestridge, 40 and his bride of a month, also aged 40, died yesterday after a shooting and fire at their farm home near Grafton, seven miles east of Cobourg. Miss Moyse, daughter of Mrs. Prestridge by a previous marriage, was shot through the forehead and remained in critical condition in hospital today.

Police quoted Miss Moyse, 23, as saying that her mother came into her room while she struggled with her step-father. Then, police were told, there was a shot and Miss Moyse did not remember anything until she recovered consciousness in hospital.

No Light on Mother's Death

She was unable to shed any light about the manner of her mother's death. Mrs. Prestridge's body was found in a bedroom near her daughter's with no outward marks of violence and no bullet wounds in the body. Results of a post-mortem examination last night were not revealed by Coroner Dr. George Peacock.

Provincial Constable Arthur Mennie took the woman's stomach organs to Toronto today for chemical analysis by Prof. Joslyn Rogers, Provincial analyst.

Because of her critical condition no attempt was made to question Miss Moyse at length or to obtain a written statement. An X-ray examination showed she suffered a fractured jaw in the fracas in her room.

2 ARDEN WOMEN HURT IN CRASH

Car Goes Out of Control When Rear Tire Blows Out

Tweed, August 2 (Special)—Mrs. James Alexander and her mother-in-law, Mrs. Sam Alexander, both of Arden, were seriously hurt in a motor car accident on No. 7 Highway about ten o'clock on Tuesday morning. The former was driving the car with her husband, who was only slightly hurt, riding in the rear seat.

A blowout of a rear tire caused by a bolt forced the car out of control and caused it to overturn. The injured women were transferred to the office of Dr. M. B. George of Tweed where they were given medical attention. The extent of their injuries has not been fully determined but it is feared they may be injured internally.

The condition of Mrs. S. Alexander and her daughter-in-law is such that it is not thought wise to remove them to the hospital.

Two Found Dying, Third Critically Injured in Blazing Farm House at Grafton

GERMAN TROOPS TO CELEBRATE WAR ANNIVERSARY

Special Observance of 25th Anniversary in All Garrisons

ARMY HOLIDAY

Berlin, Aug. 2—(AP)—Under orders of Chancellor Hitler the German army today celebrated for the first time an anniversary of the outbreak of the Great War.

Special observances of the 25th anniversary were conducted in all garrisons of greater Germany, and Hitler's order made the day an army holiday.

The controlled Nazi press took occasion to speak at length of the "heroic battle of 1914 to 1918" on the heels of a statement yesterday by Propaganda Minister Paul Goebbels' Der Angriff that Germany's military position had improved vastly in 25 years.

(It was Aug. 1, 1914, that Germany declared war on Russia and ordered mobilization. On Aug. 2 German troops crossed into Luxemburg.)

Hitler's Voelkischer Beobachter cited as a historic coincidence that on Aug. 2, 1934, Paul Von Hindenburg, Republican Germany's last President, died and Hitler combined the offices of Chancellor and President.

Must Convince Italy And Germany of True Temper of People

London, Aug. 2—(CP)—Anthony Eden, former Foreign Secretary, believes that if Germany and Italy can be convinced of the "true temper" of the British people "there will be no war."

In a letter to his constituents as parliament neared its summer recess Mr. Eden said:

"We are in a period of war of nerves and a prolonged testing lies ahead of us. ....there is only one task for British statesmanship today—to convince the rulers of and the peoples of Germany and Italy of the unshakeable firmness of our determination.

"If we can do this, if we can convince others of what we know to be the true temper of the British people, there will be no war."

JAPAN'S NAVY DEPENDS ON SPIRIT OF JAPANESE

Shanghai, Aug. 2 (AP)—Despite an inferiority in tonnage the Japanese Navy is relying on "Japanese spirit" to defeat any navy or combination of navies in the world, a naval spokesmain said today. The spokesman was commenting on Admiral William Leahy's annual report as United States chief of naval operations.

Admiral Leahy said, the United States fleet after reinforcement in accordance with its current program would be able "to defeat the fleet of any single naval power wherever it can be brought to action."

The Japanese spokesman said that "the Japanese navy is convinced it has enough strength not to be defeated by any navy in the world.

Man Who 'Can't Stand Hard Work' One of 20 Seeking Execution Job

Harrisburg, Pa., Aug. 2—(AP)—A score of men, including a 24-year-old fellow with a "bad foot" who "can't stand what you call hard work," seek to succeed ailing Robert G. Elliott as Pennsylvania's official executioner.

Among other applicants for the job of throwing the switch on the State's electric chair are:

A discouraged painter, who offers cut rates.

A Pittsburg electric welder and steel brazer whose last job "required the handling of 2,200 volts of electricity." He sent his photograph.

A would-be "electric cutior" and a 170-pound steel worker and a farmer who wants to be "lexicuter."

The job pays $250 per switch throw.

Heavy 'Battles' In Mock Warfare In N. W. Germany

Muenster, Germany, Aug. 2 (AP) —Defence lines proved unbreakable, an official report said today, in what were described as heavy "battles" in Northwestern German's air manoeuvres.

Authorities said a theoretical war zone of 15,000 square miles was defending successfully yesterday against "invaders" from a "Red" state.

The manoeuvres, which began yesterday and had been described as local, were given greater significance when the official German News Agency disclosed their scope. Their specific aim was to test Germany's anti-aircraft equipment which, the Agency said "attained a high degree of efficiency."

CHIEF CONSTABLE PRAISED

Tillsonburg, Ont., Aug. 2 (CP)—Mayor George Hollier commended Police Chief Halbert on his handling of the influx of transients in Tillsonburg in search of work in the tobacco harvest.

The Town Council, meeting last night, passed a resolution the Council was satisfied there was no problem created here by the arrival of transients seeking work.

TORPEDO BOATS CAPABLE OF FAST TIME TO BE MADE

Trawlers Also Will be Used for Laying and Sweeping Mines

MORE BOMB SHELTERS

London, Aug. 2—(CP)—Geoffrey Shakespeare, financial secretary to the Admiralty, announced in the House of Commons today that Great Britain would add 180 vessels, mostly smaller craft such as trawlers, to the 1939 naval construction program.

The additions, he said, would include 107 trawlers for mine-sweeping and anti-submarine work. Twenty of these would be specially built and the remainder purchased and converted.

The government also plans to construct 56 vessels of the whale packet type, some for service as patrol vessels and others for anti-submarine work.

Other new vessels would include 10 big minesweepers, six boom defence vessels and one cable ship.

A floating dock to accommodate small craft up to 5,000 tons already has been purchased, he announced, adding that further additions will be disclosed later and provisions for meeting the cost will be made in a supplementary budget estimate.

London, Aug. 2—(CP)—With her land, sea and air forces already at a peacetime peak, Great Britain is planning immediate construction of "a number of new smaller type vessels" to strengthen her navy even further, government sources disclosed today.

The new ships would be largely trawlers suitable for laying and sweeping mines and little motor torpedo boats of a kind outside the prescribed naval treaty program.

Chamberlain Promises Parliament Will be Called if New Legislation is Needed to Meet Any 'Unexpected Situation'

By J. F. SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Aug. 2—(CP Cable) — Prime Minister Chamberlain today declared the "country now is ready for an emergency," as he moved that Parliament adjourned Friday for a summer recess until Oct. 3.

The motion contained a provision that the Speaker could recall members of the House at an earlier date if it were desirable in the public interest.

Unless the international situation deteriorates sharply, Britain is almost sure to have a general election in November. It is expected the House will sit for three weeks in October before dissolution in preparation for the election.

Greenwood Amendment

Arthur Greenwood, acting leader of the opposition, introduced an amendment to the adjournment motion, asking that the House be recalled Aug. 21 instead of Oct. 3.

"We have no information at the present time," Mr. Chamberlain declared, "which leads us to suppose that it will be necessary to call the House together at any particular moment."

The Prime Minister added, however, that such action would be taken if the government found that new legislation were needed "to meet an unexpected situation."

Insane Indians Taken Safely on 300-Mile Journey

Cochrane, Ont., Aug. 2 (CP)—A 300-mile trip from Rupert's House on the lower east shore of Hudson Bay to Cochrane with two Cree Indians, one of them violently insane, was the experience that ended Monday night for Constable A. D. Hopkee of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

Hopkee brought George Diamond, 60, and Sandy Joly, 22, from their far-northern homes by canoe, Hudson's Bay Company boat and train. The younger Indian recently had become inscane, atttacking several people, including his mother.

The Indians appeared before Magistrate E. R. Tucker who committed them to a mental asylum. Diamond was charged with incest but the charge was not pressed because of his mental condition.

ONTARIO SEEKS CHEDDAR EXPORTS TO GREAT BRITAIN

London, Aug. 2—(CP Cable) — Hon. P. M. Dewan, Ontario Minister of Agriculture, today told the annual meeting of British Importers with Canadian Trade Commissioners that Ontario is anxious to boost the sales of Canadian cheddar cheese in Great Britain.

Mr. Dewan said the British market for the product was regarded by Canadian producers as one of the most important outlets for Ontario's surplus milk.

The Minister was guest of honor at the meeting at which the Trade Commissioners meet importers and seek to determine requirements of the coming year's advertising campaign to sell Canadian goods to the United Kingdom.

Difficult Minority Problems, Outgrowth of the Great War, Engendered by Germany's Drive For Politico-Economic Growth

By DeWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press Foreign Affairs Writer

New York, Aug. 2—(AP)—Eastern Europe's difficult minority problems—most of them outgrowth of that great war which was calculated to cure all the ills of the little fellows—continue to boil up from the heat of the conflict engendered by the German drive for politico-economic expansion.

Alot of dissatisfied folk are grasping what looks like a favorable opportunity to reassert their claims. In some instances nations are demanding the return of minorities. In others the minorities themselves are trying to go places.

At the moment we have two trouble spots, apart from the Danzig imbroglio that happens to be the pivot on which the current general crisis is turning.

Rumania, Hungary Argue

There is the argument between Rumania and Hungary over Transylvania which Rumania got from its neighbor as war spoils, and which Hungary demands back.

And there is the threat or 5,000,000 Croats to resort to secession unless they are conceded autonomy within the Yugoslav nation.

Clashes have occurred on the Hungarian-Rumanian (Transylvanian) border. The official Hungarian news agency asserts Rumanian artillery has been drawn up in position to bombard the Hungarian village of Tecso, just over the line.

Rumania Afraid

Ever since Germany laid a heavy guard on CzechoSlovakia, Rumania has been afraid she too might get her toes under the Nazi steamroller. Among other things King Carol's government has worried for fear Hungary might win Germany's support for a return of Transylvania.

The Croats have been fighting against big odds for their independence for 800 years. Now, as a part of the kingdom of Yugoslavia, they are demanding the autonomy for which they have been striving since they broke away from Hungary and joined with the Serbs and Slovenes at the end of the Great War to form this important Balkan nation.

Lengthy Protest

The Croats long have protested that they are inadequately represented in the Belgrade government, the Serbs being in majority. A little while ago the Croat leader, Dr. Vladko Matchek, appeared to have won the fight for autonomy, but Croatia hasn't been set up as an autonomous state, as expected.

Now Matchek charges that there is interference by "the Belgrade clique" and that the aspirations of his people are threatened. So he declares they will secede unless autonomy is granted—and secession, he says, means not only revolution but "it will mean more — it will probably mean a world war."

Old-Fashioned Stays Revived In New Winter Frock Styles

By ALICE MAXWELL
Associated Press Foreign Staff

Paris, Aug. 2—(AP)—The corset clamped down on Paris fashions today and tightened up the silhouette from bust to hips to create a "stem torso".

Winter frocks shown in the new collections had bodices adjusted to rigid, old-fashioned stays revived in the new 1939 manner.

Shades of late Victorians were evoked in the bustle-back fashion for day and evening. Day coats were "bustled" with fur bows and bandings. And frocks had short "tails" of pleatings hung from back waistbands.

New corseting for the "stem torso" was introduced by Mainbocher, whose silhouette featured also the tight waist and rounded hips. Tailored drapery was a new note in coats and suits, often taking the form of fine pleatings across the bust and hips.

In addition to marked use of bustle details in furs and fabrics for day wear, many coats showed a front flare in combination with full-length draped front panels of fur.

FRACTURED PELVIS SUSTAINED IN FALL

Falling heavily to the floor of her home on the Bloomfield-Picton Highway, Mrs. Charles Beaufort, suffered a fractured pelvis. Alone at the time, Mrs. Beaufort managed to crawl to a nearby window and shout for help.

She attracted the attention of Mrs. W. Gerow, a neighbor, who summoned medical aid. The injured woman was taken to Prince Edward County Hospital and later transferred to Toronto for special treatment.

TOURS BRITISH ISLES ON A BICYCLE

Following a threemonths trip abroad, during which he cycled upwards of three thousand miles in England, besides visiting several European countries, Arthur Huff, prominent Mount Pleasant agriculturist, and student at the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph, arrived home on Saturday after a highly interesting and informative tour.

Securing a bicycle in Liverpool, the young man toured the British Isles, later leaving on an extended tour of the continent where he visited, Sweden, Denmark, Germany, Holland and Belgium.

He was favorably impressed with conditions abroad, and found it hard to discriminate as to the various receptions received in the different countries. He will resume his studies at O.A.C. in the fall.

NEW STEPS, ENTRANCE FOR COUNTY HOME

Recommendation of new steps and entrance to the Hastings County Home at an approximate cost of one thousand dollars received the approval of the County Council Advisory Committee at a special meeting held the other day.

The new steps and entrance will replace those that have been in continuous use for the past thirty-two years.

The recommendation followed an investigation of the old steps and entrance by the Advisory Board, and a city architect.

"Work on the new replacements will start immediately," Reeve William Linn, of Marmora, chairman of the board stated yesterday.

VALUED TIMEPIECE FOUND IN TORONTO

Valued as a family heirloom and keepsake, a gold watch, the property of Bruce Bottum, Belleville, was recovered in Toronto yesterday, Belleville police revealed today.

The timepiece was stolen from Mr. Bottum's private office in the Foy and Irwin Bottling premises last week, presumably by a transient, who stopped by for a drink of water. A police circular was dispatched throughout the province by the Belleville Police Department with the result that the watch was found in a Toronto secondhand store yesterday.

The watch was a valued keepsake of Mr. Bottum's having been in the family for several generations. The timepiece will be returned to its rightful owner today, Acting Chief Arthur Harman assured at noon.

CITY HALL CLOCK BREAKS LONG SILENCE

Weeks of silence were broken this morning by the familiar ring of the city hall bell, a sound that was welcomed warmly by residents of the city who had become lonesome for the clang of the silenced bell.

Though complete repairs which have been carried on for some weeks past have not as yet been completed the striking mechanism of the bell was put in order early this morning and the first tolling of the hours occurred shortly before dawn.

Work on this latter repair had been hastened yesterday by Alderman Thos. Cushing, chairman of Market and City Properties, due to repeated enquiries lately by citizens regarding the bell.

"I didn't know the people of Belleville missed the bell as much as they did. But since it has been silenced, I've had scores of enquiries regarding it, all of them wanting the clock put back in shape so they could keep their watches on the right time, or wake up at a certain time," stated the Alderman.

LOCAL GRAIN GROWERS SEE NO ADVANTAGE

The federal government's action in pegging the price of winter wheat at 70 cents the bushel delivered in Montreal will return from 52 to 55 cents the bushel to grain growers of this area, it is believed by Mr. Gordon Hancock, who has been engaged in judging field crop competitions in this section.

"The freight charge per bushel is about 12 cents, and five cents or thereabouts a bushel is added for elevator charges which brings the cost of delivery to Montreal up to about 17 cents. Then subtract the 17 cents from 70 cents, and you have 53 cents left. That price is not exactly a satisfactory one to the growers of this section, and you can hardly grow wheat at that price," added Mr. Hancock.

BLACK, TAN HOUND IN CITY POUND

Found wandering at large a valuable hound dog was taken into the custody of the dog pound by Thos. Thorne early today. The canine is a black and tan hound and wore a collar, to which was attached a length of chain, indicating the animal had broken loose from custody. There was no dog collar attached the animal, however. It was found wandering at large near the intersection of Bridge and Front streets early this morning.

DEAD COUPLE KNOWN IN KINGSTON

Kingston, Ont., Aug. 2 (CP)—Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Prestridge, who were found dying in their burning home at Grafton yesterday, were known in Kingston where they spent their honeymoon. The couple visited on July 1, with Mrs. Prestridge's brother-in-law, William Moyse, 12 Redan Street, while they were also here during the visit of King George and Queen Elizabeth on May 21.

Jack Roblin, 83 Years Today, Carries on 'Business as Usual'

Man Who Keeps Belleville's Time and Veteran of Waterfront Is Inventor and Mechanic of Real Gifts

A busy city paused in its stride today to offer best wishes and congratulations to one of its best known residents, Mr. Jack Roblin, 80 South Front Street, who today observed in quiet fashion the 83rd anniversary of his birth.

It was 'business as usual' today for Mr. Roblin, active far beyond his years, as it has been for the past half century during which time he has been so closely connected with city administrative affairs. Long after midnight he had toiled in the upper tower of the city hall, carrying on repairs to the city hall clock in a repair program that has extended for weeks past.

Veteran waterfront resident, the well-known citizen is one of the most competent marine authorities and boat men in Ontario. He recalls the advent of the gasoline engine in Belleville and held the honor of being the first Belleville dealer to dispense that highly inflammable fluid, once regarded by skeptical and apprehensive citizens as the nearest relative to dynamite. The first order of gasoline received in Belleville came in a tightly insulated drum, and was dispensed sparingly by Mr. Roblin to the owners of the first gasoline engine powered boats in the harbor.

Born in Belleville he has passed the greater part of his life here and over the decades gained an enviable reputation for "fixing anything mechanical." An inventor in his own right, Mr. Roblin has adapted many of his creations to his own boats and boats of others, only to see some of the more successful copied and manufactured by larger firms for the trade. "If I had bothered to patent some of them, I would have been a rich man," he recalls.

An encyclopedia of Belleville in its early days, Jack Roblin draws from his keen and gifted sense of humor and retentive memory to regale the questioner with many a colorful incident of this city in its earlier decades. Of the old-time log drives, the whining saw mills on the sawdust flats now Victoria Park, and of the days when noisy lumberjacks clumped the boardwalks of Belleville, he speaks familiarly and knowingly.

Burnished Gold Trophy For Main Event Winner And Designer Praised

Gleaming in burnished gold, atop a shining pedestal of beautiful red cedar, the handsome Belleville-Sargent Trophy, emblematic of the 225 cubic inch hydroplane championship of the Belleville Rotary Yacht Club Regatta, is now attracting the undisguised admiration of members of the club.

Unique in the fact, that it is the only trophy of its kind in Canada, that is a product of the design, material, workmanship and manufacture of the locality in which it will be presented, the beautiful trophy, is a shining testimonial to the ability, resources and generosity of residents of this city and its environs.

Approximately fourteen inches in height, overall, and plated with twenty-four carat gold, the trophy is of cylindrical shape with the main column seven inches high and four inches in diameter. Surmounting the column is a beautiful replica of a speedboat in action. Golden waves curl at the sides of the handsome miniature craft, whose bow points well above the surface of the wave-rippled water. A tiny driver, complete with racing paraphernalia crouches behind a small golden steering wheel.

On Red Cedar Base

The handsome base of red cedar, whose rich colorings of dull red flecked with bronze and dark browns are enhanced with a brilliant finish is a natural product of Massassaga Park. It was taken from the stump of an ancient red cedar tree, and has caused admiring comments to emanate from all who have seen it.

The trophy, which will be won in annual competition, the driver, who wins it three years in succession to become the permanent owner, was given to the Rotary Yacht Club through the medium of Mr. Harold Sanders, and Commodore R. J. E. Graham of the Belle-Sargent Company. Its beautiful plating of 24 carat gold, is a gift of Rotarian Jack McFee.

Designed by Local Artizan

The original design and pattern of the trophy is a brain-child of William Hirst, Albert Street, Belleville, designer and pattern-maker at the Belleville-Sargent Company. Rated as one of the most outstanding craftamen of his profession in Eastern Canada, Mr. Hirst designed the trophy from original sketches of his own. Proof of his designing and drafting ability is seen in the fact, that the first design submitted met with the whole-hearted approval of the donors.

He has had extensive experience in his chosen vocation, many beautiful architectural designs of such modern buildings as those of the Canadian National Exhibition and facades and entrances of metropolitan hotels and other large buildings in Ontario and Quebec being of his making.

The beautiful red-cedar base is also a product of the designing skill of this young artisan. He secured the wood, as has been said before from a cedar stump in Massassaga, and designed the handsome base on which the trophy now stands.

His work in this respect has drawn many favorable comments from outstanding yachtsmen of Canada, representatives of the American Power Boat Association, and that prominent Canadian boat-builder, Thomas Greavette, of Gravenhurst, showing particularly keen interest in the handsome Belleville-Sargent Trophy and its designer.

Beautiful Silver Trophies.

Distinctly beautiful too are the handsome silver trophies that have been donated to the yacht club by various members of the club and other citizens.

Its gleaming columns surmounted by a silver figure of "Victory" with laurel wreath held in outstretched hand, is the beautiful "Gerald Jenkins Trophy" given by the popular owner of the Hotel Quinte for annual competition, in the 135-cubic inch class.

Similar in design, and mounted on a handsome black pedestal is the Charles A. Cameron, K.C., M.P., trophy which will be awarded to the annual winner in the Class B boats. It likewise bears a silver figure of "Victory" surmounted on gleaming silver columns.

Different in design but strikingly handsome in its bowl-shaped body is the Riggs Motor Sales Trophy for annual competition on the second division of the 225 speedsters.

A winged figure atop a silver replica of a softball, a gleaming silver trophy given by the Rotary Yacht Club, will be offered for annual competition in the softball tournament.

Last but by no means least of this striking array of silver and gold is the distinctive cocktail set donated by Rotarian Mackenzie Robertson. This handsome gift will be awarded to the lucky holder of the ticket drawn at the grand ball to be staged in the Hume Arena on the evening of August 7.

Besides these handsome trophies many smaller ones given for minor events are now ready.

The entire display of trophies will be on view in the windows of the White Hardware store, Front street, tomorrow.

PERFECT WEATHER GREETS BANDSMEN

Concert on Victoria Park Enjoyed by Hundreds Tuesday Night

Perfect weather conditions and perfect music proved a stellar attraction in Victoria Park last night when the largest crowd of the season enjoyed the second of the summer series of Tuesday night concerts played by the Belleville Municipal Band, under the baton of Lieut. Fred Jobson.

Appreciation of the splendid abilities of Belleville's young gold medalist musicians as exemplified in the fine performances given by Ralph Clapp, clarinetist, and youthful Ronnie Moorman, cornetist, was again evident last night, as the young artists received prolonged applause after delightful renditions of difficult numbers on their favorite instruments. Encores were gracefully given and generously applauded.

The program was fell selected and brought out to the full the versatility and ability of the musicians. That the trend is toward the popular tunes, the stately melodies of the old-fashioned waltz, and the stirring tempos of the military marches, was evident last night, when the large crowd gave vent to prolonged applause following the playing 'Anchor's Aweigh"; "Nights of Gladness" and "Songs from the Old Folks". "The Darktown Strutters Ball" and other popular melodies also received a generous quota of appreciation.

"The ever-popular "Beer-Barrel Polka" played two weeks ago for the first time in Canada by a brass band, when the local musicians rendered it here, was requested several times by listeners. The score, however, according to Lieut. Jobson, had been loaned to a district band and had not as yet been returned. He promised to play the number on the occasion of their next concert on August 15th.

Coolness of the evening plus a brilliant August moon provided a comfortable, colorful setting for the spectators, who filled seats, cars and even boats to capacity.

REPLACE PLANKING ON STEEL BRIDGE

Work on the first replacement of the wooden planking of the steel bridge that spans the Moira River at Cannifton, since its erection in 1902, started yesterday when county workmen, under the supervision of Road Superintendent W. L. Langlois, ripped up planks and timbers that had started to show signs of wear after thirty-seven years of traffic.

The bridge that connects Highways 14 and 37 has been closed to traffic, although arrangements have been made whereby early morning milk trucks may have right-of-way.

New planking is being bolted to the heavy steel girders that run lengthwise of the bridge, while the girders themselves are being treated to a new coat of aluminum paint.

Five by five timbers will be laid crosswise of the girders, while on top will be laid another flooring of heavy two by ten planking as reinforcement and guard against the continuous wear of heavy truck and automobile traffic.

Laying of the new timbers and planking will start immediately, or as soon as one span of the old flooring is removed, the new bottom will be placed in position.

Police Blotter

Fred Poole, 122 South John St., reported the theft of his bicycle to city police early today. Young Poole had parked his bicycle on Sinclair Street while working in a nearby bakery last night. The bike was gone this morning.

Provincial Police revealed today that an automobile, the property of William Heath, Harold, had been recovered near Norwood late yesterday after being stolen from Mr. Heath's garage some hours previously. The car thieves stole another car in Norwood and continued their journey westward, the authorities were told today. Mr. Heath's car was returned to him today.

Inspector Frank Gardner, of the O.P.P., today revealed a man, whose name was given as John Weggar, was being held in Toronto, on a warrant issued by Provincial Police here. The man is charged with breaking and entering summer cottages in North Hastings. "I believe the name given us by the Toronto police is only an alias, however", added Inspector Gardner today.

12-Year-Old Envy Of All His Chums After Hooking 'Lunge

Tweed, Aug. 2 (Special)—The proudest boy in Tweed and the envy of all his chums is Glenn Connor, twelve-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Connor. Glenn caught a 21-pound muskie on Tuesday morning, while trolling with his father. The big fellow grabbed the bait, a "Pikie" minnow near F. E. Houston's cottage on Stoco Lake, about 6.20 in the morning and put up a hard battle for nearly an hour. With a casting rod and a line three years old, the youngster played the fish like a veteran. Lacking the means of landing the big fellow, help was secured at Tom Breen's fishing resort from Jim Martin who quickly put an end to the combat with a gaff. The lunge measured 45 inches in length and is the largest fish caught in Stoco Lake this season.

Plumber's Help Crashes Thru City Council Chamber Ceiling

Court of Revision Members Flee Thundering Deluge of Plaster, Dust and Lath — Plumber Unhurt but 'Stuck' in Ceiling — Excitement Spreads Through City Hall — 'All's Well That Ends Well' Says Caretaker Sweeping Up Debris from Recently Waxed Floors

A plumber's helper shattered the aplomb and formality and halted temporarily the special sitting of the local Court of Revision in the Council Chamber of the City Hall when he inadvertently stepped through the fragile lath and plaster of the ceiling of the room while at work above, and caused members of the Court to duck hurriedly the unexpected deluge of plaster which thundered down yesterday afternoon.

While Court members scurried for the protecting shelter of one end of the room, disdaining books and papers which scattered about, the worker dangled with feet and legs suspended halfway through the ceiling, while showers of plaster and broken lath tumbled down. Room, tables and even the mayoralty chair were coated with the dust and scattered patches of the plaster.

Clutches At Joist

"Are you hurt?" shouted Chairman of the Court, Sheriff Jack O'Flynn, after the noise and excitement had temporarily subsided.

"Naw, but I'm stuck," came the muffled response of the man whose legs still swayed in mid air.

Clutching desperately at the joist on either side of the four square foot hole through the ceiling, the worker, engaged in placing sections of eavetroughing along the exterior of the upper building, finally with the help of assistants, pulled himself to safety.

Business of the Court was temporarily adjourned.

Dust Is Shaken Off

"It's a wonder someone wasn't hurt badly," commented members of the Court, brushing and slapping their clothing free of the white dust. "It wouldn't have been any fun to get smacked with a piece of that plaster," agreed the chairman.

Other city hall workers, alarmed by the thunder of the falling plaster and the excited shouts of workers above gathered at the door of the chamber, convinced that a section of the hall had toppled in.

"Nobody's hurt," soothed Chairman O'Flynn. "But it's a miracle some one wasn't," echoed other Court members.

"All's well that ends well," declared caretaker Arthur Rawson, busy cleaning up the debris from floors that had been waxed only yesterday.

MISS M. MOYSE MAY RECOVER FROM WOUND

Fire Deaths at Grafton Lack Clues According to Investigating Authorities

ATTACK HINTED

Couple Praised for Rescue Work Carried Out Under Difficulties

Cobourg, Ont., Aug. 2—(CP)—A hospital report that 23-year-old Marguerite Moyse is a "little brighter" led to hope today she would recover from a bullet wound in the head, a wound suffered in a mysterious shooting affray in which her mother and step-father died.

Throughout the night, hospital authorities kept Miss Moyse under observation and as her condition continued to improve strong hope was entertained she would recover and retain her full mental faculties. Whether an operation will be performed to remove the bullet has yet to be decided.

Miss Moyse's nude form was found in a bedroom of her home at nearby Grafton yesterday. In another room lay her mother, Mrs. Thomas Prestridge, near death but without marks of violence upon her. Inside the doorway of the house was Thomas Prestridge, shot in the forehead. Both Mr. and Mrs. Prestridge, married a month ago, died en route to hospital.

Decline to Advance Theory

Police and crown authorities declined to say what theory they are pursuing in the investigation. They had three theories before them: That Prestridge killed his wife, shot his step-daughter and then committed suicide; that Mrs. Prestridge shot her husband and daughter and committed suicide or that a fourth person committed the crimes for $700 believed in the house.

But Provincial Constable A. L. Mennie said last night there was no evidence point to robbery as a possible motive. He added that two truck drivers and a part-time employee on the Prestridge farm who brought Miss Moyse and the Prestridges from the house before it was destroyed by fire had given the police a chance to clear up the tragedy.

Police Quite Thankful

"From the police angle we can be very thankful Avery and the tsuckers got them out in time," said Rennie. "Aside from the fact that their act may have saved the girl's life, it gives us an opportunity of clearing up a tragedy, which might have been indicated only by bullet holes in the skulls of remains found after the fire.

'Baby' of Seventy-Two Years Visits Parents at Bloomfield

Mrs. Stanley Mabee of Williamsport Pa., Daughter of Canada's Oldest Married Couple

BORN AT ODESSA

Picton, Ont., Aug. 2—(CP)—"I am the baby of this family," Mrs. Stanley Mabee, 72, of Williamsport, Pa., said yesterday at the home of Canada's longest married couple, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Addison Mabee, who reside near Bloomfield, Prince Edward County.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Mabee were paying their annual visit to the home of their parents. "I drove the entire 450 miles up from Williamsport," the 75-year-old junior Mabee said. "When I come alone, I consider it only a nice day's drive but my wife insists on taking two days, so we stop at Toronto overnight."

The Stanley Mabees left Canada 49 years ago. They have been sweethearts since early public schools days at Odessa, near Kingston, where they were married 53 years ago, Dec. 22, 1886. They went to Chicago and then to Williamsport.

"We have become more or less Americanized," Mrs. Mabee said, "but when the King and Queen visited Canada, we realized we were still good Canadians."

Asked her opinion of girls wearing shorts on the streets, Mrs. Mabee shrugged her shoulders. "Do they do that up here, too?" she asked. "I think it is disgraceful."

Stanley Mabee was born in Prince Edward County and Mrs. Mabee's birthplace is Odessa. Prior to her marriage she was Hattie Denyes. They have two sons living, Raymond, 49, is head of the Cost Accounting Department of an aviation firm, and Clarence, 38, is chief switchman of a telephone company. Both live in Williamsport and both are interested in aviation, having half interests in a plane. "They fly a lot, but can't coax us to go up," the Mabees remarked. Another son, Harold, died in 1926.

TORPEDO BOATS

The disclosure followed an announcement of the purchase of six vessels to form the nucleus of a merchant reserve fleet and contract arrangements last week for acquisition of 86 trawlers from commercial fishing fleets.

It was said that Geoffrey Shakespeare, Financial Secretary to the Admiralty, hoped to announce during the day the new construction plans.

The Admiralty has been experimenting with small motorboats capable of 60 miles an hour while loaded with two torpedoes and mines.

May Ration Gasoline

Other measures of preparedness in face of the August-September "danger period"—These formally announced yesterday—included:

A comprehensive scheme for rationing oil and gasoline in war time.

Introduction of legislation to create a food ministry and to finance storage and transport of foods.

Government contracts for 2,500,000 bomb shelters to be distributed free to families unable to buy them, with production at a rate of 55,080 a week expected by September.

The government was reported increasingly pessimistic over possibilities of successful conclusion of the Tokyo conference and has been communicating with France, the United States and the Dominions on far eastern policies.

Consultations with the Dominions and other powers recalled rumors Great Britain might follow the United States' lead in abrogation of her trade treaty with Japan.

40 Minutes Required To Complete Execution

Boston, Aug. 2 (AP)—At the hands of a mysterious "Mr. X," who required nearly 40 minutes for his task, two Somerville youths were put to death in the electric chair today for murdering a storekeeper in a $3.50 robbery.

The executioner, hired to replace the ailing veteran Robert G. Elliot, sent Wallace Green, 20, and Walter St. Sauveur, 19, to their deaths for the shooting of William Phillips, a middle-aged Somerville merchant, May 31, 1938. The executioner's name was kept secret at his own request.

Prison authorities said unofficially the time required was long, but doctors explained Green had "an unusually strong heart."

The youths, who had blamed each other for the slaying, were reconciled just before their death by Rev. Ralph Farrell, Catholic prison chaplain.

Rumor Persists Sean Russell Back in Ireland

Belfast, Aug. 2 (CP)—A companion of Sean Russell when the Irish Republican Army leader was detained at Detroit June 5, was questioned today by police, presumably in an effort to learn Russell's whereabouts.

The acquaintance, Joseph McGarrity of Philadelphia, was vacationing in County Tyrone when police located him for questioning. He arrived in Northern Ireland two weeks ago.

Scotland Yard has been investigating a persistent rumor that Russell reached Ireland recently in a freighter. (Ostensibly because he had overstayed his 30-day visa to visit the United States Russell was taken into custody at Detroit on the eve of the arrival of King George and Queen Elizabeth at nearby Windsor, Ont., on Their Majesties' Canadian tour.)

AT THE BELLE

"Some Like It Hot"

Bob Hope and Shirley Ross are re-united for the third time in Paramount's rip-roaring swing comedy, "Some Like It Hot," co-starring Gene Krupa and his orchestra next at the Belle Theatre.

Remember the two hit tunes, "Thanks for the Memory" and "Two Sleepy People" popularized by Bob and Shirley? This time they put over a new tune, "The Lady's In Love With You," written especially for them by Frank Loesser and Burton Lane. Then there's the title tune, "Some Like It Hot" which was written by Gene Krupa, the "king of the hide-beaters" in collaboration with Remo Biondi and Loesser.

From a play by Ben Hecht and Gene Fowler, the team of Lewis R. Foster and Wilkie C. Mahoney have adapted a neat yarn for Shirley and Bob about an enchanting swing songstress and a fast-talking promoter of schemes.

Bernard Nedell, as a hard-boiled agent, turns down Bob's act, which consists of an orchestra and himself as the main attraction. Hope almost yields to despair, when Shirley Ross comes along and gives Bob her ring to finance his own show.

Apparently Bob's ideas of financing are a bit unorthodox with the result that he not only loses the ring to the agent in a crap game but tops that off by losing a hit song which he had written in collaboration with Shirley. And the orchestra which Bob also had been trying to sign up with the agent also goes the way of the ring and the song.

Shirley joins the orchestra when she finds how unreliable Bob has been. Deciding to square himself with her, Bob leaves town and tries all sorts of schemes, taking any job, just so that he can save enough money to buy back Shirley's ring.

"Some Like It Hot" should appeal to all moviegoers because of its music, the romance, its lively story, and its three clever comedians—suave and subtle Bob Hope, molasses-sweet Una Merkel, and the rube of rubes, Rufe Davis.

"Hell's Kitchen"

"Hell's Kitchen" the Warner Bros. drama announced as the companion feature attraction presents the "Dead End Kids" in a brand-new type of roles. The "Angels With Dirty Faces" have all the sympathy on their side in this one, for they are shown as the brutally-treated inmates of a so-called shelter for boys. How they reform the reform school and, incidentally, an ex-gangster as well, forms the novel plot of "Hell's Kitchen."

"Gracie Allen Murder Case"

Romance, excitement and fun abound in the S. S. Van Dine mystery story, "The Gracie Allen Murder Case" now being presented at the Belle with Gracie Allen and Warren William in his famous role of Philo Vance, introducing Kent Taylor and lovely Ellen Drew who are the romantic interest in the story.

The screen's greatest emotional actress, Elisabeth Bergner is featured in her first dual role in "Stolen Life" which is the second feature attraction with handsome Michael Redgrave completing a new love team.

The Belle News of the Day will be presented on the same program.

IN LONDON

Ruth Etting, husky-voiced "blues" singer, and her husband, Myrl Alderman, are shown in London after mysteriously sailing from the U.S. They say that they are in England to "get away from publicity" in connection with the alienation of affections suit brought against the singer by Mr. Alderman's former wife.

CHANCES AGAINST WAR

An American observer says the chances against a general European war this month are more than ten to one and also four or five to one against a war during the present year. That view pleases, for it is a very concrete way of placing the situation and is based upon wide observation. There is another rather thought-provoking side to this whole affair of a world armed to the teeth on earth and from the bottom of the sea in ships to the heights of heaven in planes and that is referred to by the Hamilton Spectator in these words:

"An American newspaper correspondent was recently talking to a young German in Hamburg. During their chat the German casually remarked: 'Germany has not much to lose by a war.' "

"The journalist was startled. 'But,' he protested, 'she has you to lose, and a few millions like you—the best of her youth.' "

" 'Oh, yes,' replied the young German. 'But such a loss is unimportant in the history of a nation.' "

"Here, in a few brief words, the correspondent found a clue to the great enigma of the modern Reich—the complete acceptance by a personally likeable, hospitable, home and family-loving people of the supreme importanc of the state. ' . . . . In the history of the nation," the individual must sink himself into a complete sacrifice to the national ideal, and at any cost."

"That ideal is more puzzling to the world at large than the twists of democracy. To the 'democratic' mind it is incredible. But its existence cannot be questioned. It is the key to the apparent anomaly of a race that presents internal restlessness and hardships on the one hand, and a united front on the other."

"The American correspondent to whom the young German, mentioned above, made his remarkable comment was Harold Callander, of the New York Times. He knows the country well. 'In considering German character,' says Mr. Callender, 'one inevitably, almost automatically, begins with the state, whose place in Germany is more comparable to that of semi-divine Emperor in Japan than to the admittedly very human and fallible political institutions of western Europe and the English-speaking world . . . . It is this exaltation of the state which explains the somewhat startling views of war, aggression, living space, treaties and political morality' which he found revealed in his talks with the man on the street."

" 'It is in the opposed conceptions of the state,' he continues, 'that the dividing line between Germany and the democracies is to be found.' "

That, the Spectator explains, tells why there is lack of German opposition to a form of government which would be repulsive to us. One can see how British character allows for the development of British conceptions of liberty, which are not possible to the German. This explains why the French are particular lovers of fredom and liberty.

EXIT THE GLARE

Requirements of lights on new motorcars show the determination of the Department that the glaring headlights must disappear. They are still a nuisance on the highway and are potent agencies for possible accidents.

That dark spot in night driving just behind the left headlight of the car that is approaching has not been eliminated. It would seem that some device could be invented to shed light on this spot where may lurk danger.

New cars must be equipped with multiple beam headlights, allowing drivers to switch them down. Some cars have had these and some drivers do not use them. Som cars of the older manufacture are not equipped with them.

There are wonders to be done to make driving a pleasure—that is, with practically all the risk of accident from other cars eliminated. Motorists, if they keep their eyes upon the goal of a golden age of motor driving, may easily help to bring that era in. One of the essentials is banishment of the glare.

COST OF LIVING

A slight downward tendency in foods, fuel and motor operating costs caused the Dominion Bureau of Statistics' cost of living index for Canada to recede frrom 83.1 in May to 82.9 in June. Living costs have shown remarkable steadiness in the past ten months, the index remaining within a range of 1.4 per cent throughout that time. The average index of food prices fell from 74.6 to 74.3 between May and June. declines for veal, bacon, eggs, butter, cheese and potatoes exerting more influence than gains for beef, cooked ham, codfish, onions and sugar. A reduction in the coal sub-index from 85.7 to 85.5 and in that for coke from 83. 4to 81.7, resulted in a drop in the fuel index from 84.5 to 84.3. Slightly easier prices for tires and reductions in gasolene charges in one or two important centres, caused the motor operating costs sub-index to decline from 92.9 to 92.5. This resulted in a recession in the sundries index from 94.3 to 94.2. There were no changes of any importance recorded for other budgetary groups.—Dominion Bureau of Statistics.

CONCERNING GHOSTS

(As told by Mary Ann)

Afraid of ghosts!
Why, ghosts are such a shiftless folk,
Most people take them as a joke:
Improvident and absent-minded,
They walk abroad half-clothed, half-blinded,
Butting heedless heads together—
Dressed for fair or evil weather,
Sultry nights or stinging sleet,
Only in a winding sheet!
Paying no heed to swamp or river,
Their bones aclick in perpetual shiver,
They stalk right over—
The same as they'd walk in a field of clover—
Any dizzy precipice
As if it were a space like this!
La me, I've seen them at false dawning,
When the cock sends forth his warning,
Shattering the globe of night
Scatter in the wildest flight—
Forgetting in their panicked fright
The well-known path to their abode,
And helter-skelter down the road
Dash frantically for any grave
Whose occupant was out, to save
Themselves from sheer disintegration
In a terrible sun-lit peregrination.

Afraid of ghosts?
Those futile hosts,
As witless as a month-old filly,
That prowl like lost leaves, willy-nilly—
My dear, how silly!

GREETINGS FROM DALLAS, TEXAS, comes to the Great Family Journal, from our regular correspondent there, who still calls the Hills of Hastings home, and keeps a warm spot of memory sacred to the friendships and pleasant events of other days, over the hills of home. Our Dallas correspondent regrets prolonged absence from the column due to sickness, and will have the sympathy of the entire Sidelight Family, and best wishes for a permanent return to perfect health. Some of the odd and interesting news items noted by our correspondent follow:

x

Dallas man collects paper match box covers, which he is so proud of that he has covered his living room and ceiling with them, claiming the largest collection of the kind in the world, 15,000 covers in all. Besides paper match box covers from the United States twenty-eight foreign countries are represented in this collection, for which an offer of $500 was recently made. The owner has spent ten years on his collection, and one of his most prized trophies is a paper match box cover commemorating the visit of the King and Queen to Canada.

x

Dallas has motor car parking meters. Recently police caught two young men using a hatchet on the municipal meters and abstracting the cash therefrom.

x

To make the United States a safer place for motorists the National Safety Council is holding a nation-wide contest for cities which Dallas hopes to win with a total of traffic fatalities for the year of 24 a reduction of one hundred per cent from the previous year.

x

"Ah has athletical feet," said a negro at Dallas police headquarters. "You mean athlete's foot?" queried the officer in charge. "Yassuh, athletic feet and dey hu'ts. Dat's why I lost my shoes last night. I got kinda tired and ma feets jest had to be rested. So I sits down in the park at Hall and Hugo, takes off ma shoes and drops off to sleep. When I wakes up agin, ma shoes am gone."

x

Unnecessary noise is frowned upon in Dallas, and upon complaint of neighbors police requested a church in South Dallas to recall a loud speaker from the front of the church used for broadcasting the services inside, on the theory that if people would not come to church the message of the church must be carried to them. The idea was good but the neighbors weren't sympathetic.

GEORGE HOLMES

Farwell, Michigan

The Farwell (Michigan) community lost a highly respected citizen when George Holmes passed away at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Egbert Fordyce, of Gilmore, at 2.30 o'clock Wednesday morning, July 5th.

Isaac George Holmes, son of Isaac and Elizabeth Holmes, was born in Madoc, Canada, May 23. 1869, and departed this life July 5, 1939, at the age of seventy years, one month and twelve days.

His father died when he was two years old and the mother with the family of four children moved to Lapeer, where they lived for two years.

In 1873 his mother married Elisha White and to that union were born four children, four of whom are living. Later the family moved to Farwell and wherever Mr. Holmes had lived he has always considered Farwell his old home.

He was united in marriage to Ida Schofield, of Gilmore, July 4, 1892, and to this union three children were born, two of them dying in infancy, Mrs. Lola Fordyce being the only surviving child. His wife, Ida, predeceased him in death.

July 25, 1925, he was married to Mrs. Emma Corneil, of Boyne City, who has been a faithful and loving wife all through his illness.

Mr. Holmes was a member of the Masonic and Oddfellow fraternities, and of the Auld Lang Syne society. He was a congenial neighbor and hard and willing worker and will be greatly missed by all who knew him.

He leaves to mourn their loss the wife, Emma; daughter, Mrs. Lola Fordyce; granddaughter, Mary Helen Fordyce; four step children; two brothers, Frank of Marion, and Emmet of Michigan City, Indiana; and an only aunt, Mrs. Margaret McLeod of Farwell.

Funeral services were held Saturday afternoon at 1.30 from the late home and in the Farwell Methodist church at 2.00 o'clock, with Rev. J. A. Rogers officiating, assisted by Pastor J. S. Penick. He was laid at rest in Gilmore cemetery. — Contributed.

DON'T PRINT THAT!

Today's accolade goes to the presiding dignitary of a Canadian church conference. In an open session one of the delegates, himself a minister, had spoken quite sharply of another denomination, and immediately there were suggestions that the reporters present should not mention the incident. Thereupon the clergyman in the chair spoke words of wisdom. "The only way to stop regrettable things going into the press," he said, "is to stop saying them."

And that makes sense. Every reporter is painfully familiar with the sort of speaker who forgets discretion, realizes when he sits down that some of those facile words wouldn't look so well in print, appeals to the press to save him from the embarrassment he alone has brought upon himself — to correct his error in judgment. Thus many a "good story" dies before it blooms, because reporters and editors, contrary to the screen tradition, really are soft-hearted fellows who dislike putting people to pain and annoyance.

However, as the chairman told the delegates, the only way to be sure such things don't get into the papers is to stop saying them. That places the responsibility squarely where it should be placed. When a reporter is taking notes men and women are talking for publication, and it is time for them to guard their words, to resist the temptation of the biting phrase they would hate to see printed. — Ottawa Journal.

RUG IN COLORS

A hand-woven Axminster carpet, specially made and valued at over 1,000 pounds, has been laid in the court room of the Bank of England. One of the finest ever made at the Royal Wilton carpet factory, it measures 42 feet 7 inches by 27 feet, and the weaving occupied 12 girls for eight months. There are more than 11,000,000 tufts, or knots—646 to the square inch—and it takes 20 men to lift the carpet, which weighs about half a ton.

Of the 150 colors, the prevailing one is Indian red, and in the centre is a green-ground circular medallion on a stone base. There is Adam detail in the carpet, which is designed to harmonize with the architecture of the room. — London Times.

ANTI- BRITISH FEELING RUNS HIGH IN CHINA

"Down with Britain; rebuild China," read some of the posters carried by Chinese residents of Tsingtao during the Japanese-inspired anti-British parade recently. This feeling ran so high that many paraders ran amok, doing considerable damage to the British property in the city. This high feeling among some of the Chinese is adding to the Far East problems of Britain, faced with blockades in other cities. Note the similarity of the caps worn by the Chinese members of the "New People's Society," at RIGHT, and the military caps of Japanese troops.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

Angina Pectoris Patients May Live A Long Time

You may wonder as to just what difference exists between coronary thombosis and angina pectoris.

In coronary thrombosis there is an actual blocking of the vessels supplying the walls of the heart. The blocking may be due to a blood clot, a small piece of tissue from some vegetable-like growths at valves of the heart, or to thickened lining of the blood vessel itself. As this condition may last for hours or days the pain in coronary thrombosis (under breast bone and up in to left breast) may last for hours or days. There is some real damage present.

In angina pectoris there may be some of the same kind of damage present, but often there is no damage or alteration present in the heart itself or nearby vessels but, nevertheless, something is interfering with the blood getting to the heart muscle. As the heart muscle is not getting enough blood (enough nourishment), it cannot do its work and there is a tight, vise-like pain present. By standing still, thus not asking the heart to pump as much blood, the pain usually passes away in a few minutes. This pain is under the breast bone and is exactly the same and caused in the same way as the pain we got as youngsters when we were running or taking exercise, before we got our "second wind". You may remember that we ran more slowly or even walked which gave the lungs a chance to catch up and get rid of the excess of carbonic acid in the blood. Thus, in angina pectoris, if the individual moves forward, the pain becomes worse, which explains why angina patients "stand in their tracks" when the pain occurs.

It was formerly thought that all attacks of angina pectoris were due to effort or exercise but it is now known that excitement, anger, walking into the cold air, a heavy meal, may bring on the attacks.

Sir Thomas Lewis, in his book "Diseases of the Heart", has encouraging words for those afflicted with those attacks following effort. He states that the expectation of life in these does not differ very greatly from those who do not have these attacks.

In other words, in the majority of cases, if these individuals will exercise, eat, and have control of their emotions within reasonable limits, their life will be as long as the average for their age.

The principle of the treatment is that the patient lives within the limit of his pain. The pain is his warning sign or danger signal.

BANKER DIES

Sir Charles Blair Gordon, president of the Bank of Montreal, and one of Canada's leading financiers, died suddenly in a Montreal hospital after a brief illness. Sir

LONDON BEAVER

Don't worry about the British people . . . they never take themselves too seriously . . . can always be depended upon to relieve the tension with a bit of quiet humor. And this is typically British:

London's new game is called "Heil". It is similar to the old game of "Beaver", in which players spotted beards.

A small, dark, toothbrush moustache counts one. A dark forelock over one eye counts half a point. A man wearing both is an Adolf Absolute and counts six.

When spotting a winner the player must exclaim "Heil!"

You can't beat a people like that! There are, we know, those who think the Old Country people "dull" and "stolid" and completely lacking in a sense of humor. The estimate is formed by those who don't know the Old Country and its people at all. Quite the richest and most subtle humor in the world is to be found right in London; and for coining clever phrases the British people are in a class by themselves.—Halifax Herald.

OLDEST HORSE

The oldest horse of which England has any record died at the age of sixty. In this country, so far as we know at the moment, the oldest horse lived to be fifty-two years of age.

A horse which is claimed is forty years old is owned by Summer G. Murray of Wells, Maine. "Dan," as the animal is called, does all the harvesting, haying, wood hauling and many other chores which usually fall to the task of a good farm horse. Mr. Murray fears, however, that the problem of proper feeding for a horse minus the necessary teeth may mean the necessity of humanely disposing of Dan before long. During the 23 years that the horse has been in the Murray family he has had the very best of care.

Our correspondent in Ireland sends us in a clipping the following:

"The oldest donkey in Ireland is dead. It was forty-two year, four months and some days old, and drew hundreds of visitors to Glencolumbkille, Donegal."—Our Dumb Animals, Boston.

TRY IT THE "SALADA" WAY

Infuse 6 heaping teaspoons of Salada Black Tea in a pint of fresh, boiling water. After 6 minutes strain liquid into 2-quart container, while hot, add 1 to 1½ cups of sugar and juice of 2 lemons, strained; stir until sugar is dissolved; fill container with cold water. Do not allow tea to cool before adding cold water or liquid will become cloudy. Serve with chipped ice. The above makes 7 tall glasses.

The Stars Say—

For Thursday, August 3

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

RATHER DRASTIC activities mark this day, according to the lunar transits. It is quite probable that this commotion and excitement may bear rule in private life rather than in business, which may be relegated to the background by insistent stress in intimate or emotional adventures. Sudden deeprooted urges may precipitate surprising denouements in the social, domestic or affectional life. An exciting unforeseen romance might cause a complete about-face in plans and environs, but pleasurably and with benefit.

Those whose birthday it is are assured of a year of much happy excitement and adventure, probably in the social, domestic or affectional life, excluding more sordid interests. Romance, with change and new life interests, may climax longcherished yearings in the land of heart's desire. Grasp these witn poise and calmness.

A child born on this day will be subjected to profound stirrings in its mental and emotional being, which may not be understood by its elders. It may be artistic, romantic, sensitive, poetic and mystically inclined, with much benevolence and compassion.

Fashion Flashes

It looks like ostrich trimmed hats for Autumn. A handsome dinner model is wine velvet, the front covered by two forward-jutting plumes in rose and marine green.

Still time to choose a lovely summer evening frock. Paquin makes a beauty of pink handkerchief linen with diagonal inserts of lace dyed to tone.

Firm favorites of the fashion world are those flower and fruit prints on pure silk. A beauty is a print of fuchsia toned grape clusters with green vine leaves, on a mauve ground. Worn with a fuchsia colored organza blouse, this suit has a gored skirt and a bolero jacket.

Working hard is a boxy red flannel reefer, for it looks as well with slacks as it does over a cotton evening frock.

A shining success is predicted for satin. This gleaming fabric, highlighted for autumn, is already favored for mid-summer fashions. A lovely negligee is pale blue satin with a wide skirt, its snug bodice trimmed with Alencon type lace in pale beige. The lace is inset at the waistline and also outlines the square neckline.

Decidedly not in the luxury class yet decidedly luxury looking is an evening ensemble of chinchilla-dyed coney. The wasp-waist jacket has a flared and rippled peplum and is teamed with a huge muff.

TRANSIENT KILLED

Niagara Falls, Ont., Aug. 2—(CP)—Marcel Pare, 20-year-old French-Canadian transient from Dosquet, Que., was killed last night when he fell under a moving freight train in an attempt to jump aboard. The accident occurred in the Canadian National Railways yards a mile west of here. An inquest will be held.

187 Canadian Women Win Prizes In Robin Hood Contest

MRS. R. R. STIRRETT, SWIFT CURRENT, SASK. TAKES FIRST PRIZE OF $200.00 AND A SILVER CUP

Here is the list of winners as selected by the judges in our Royal Menu Contest. My heartiest congratulations on the splendid menus—many of which I had the privilege of reading before they went to the judges.

May I also convey my personal thanks and the thanks of the judges to all the thousands of Canadian women who entered. My only wish is that there were a thousand more prizes to give.

Your many letters in praise of Robin Hood Flour are treasured. It is this loyal support from countless Canadian women which has made Robin Hood Canada's Fastest Selling Flour.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Should a Visitor Tip a Servant?

Although we hear arguments for and against the propriety of tipping servants after a visit, the fact remains that customarily the departing guest gives tips to the servants.

In a few houses, the hostess requests us not to tip the servants. Then, of course, we abide by her request.

The amount of the tip, as in the case of all other tips, depends on your circumstances and on your generosity. Specifically, in this case it depends too on the type of household, on the service and on the length of your visit.

But there are some more or less definite standards that may be considered as guides. Let's say, for instance, that you have spent a week-end in a one-servant (even a part-time servant) home. If your means are limited, one dollar is a sufficient tip. Or, if you wish, give two dollars. If the maid has done any laundering or pressing or sewing for you or had done errands for you, your tip should be increased in accordance with the amount of service.

In a larger household, you give one or two dollars to each servant with whom you come in contact.

Some people leave their tips in marked envelopes in their bedrooms. I don't like this way of giving a tip.

It is vastly more gracious, I think, to give the tip directly to the servant, with an appreciative word of thanks.

And make a special point of not giving your tip in the presence of the hostess or host or other guests.

Good Manners

Dear Mrs. Beeckman

My father-in-law and mother-in-law recently separated. I feel very sorry for them both. I think a lot of them. I mailed a sympathy card to each of them, and I would like to know if this was proper. I am sending you a copy of the kind of card I sent so that you will be able to give me your honest opinion.

Walter

It would be so much easier for me to say what I would like to say if you had asked me this question before you had sent the cards. For I hesitate to say anything that will make you regretful about what you did, since I understand so completely from the kind-hearted words in your letter that you meant to be kind.

However, since you asked for my honest opinion, here it it. In the first place, I never approve of sending "ready-made" cards for expressions of thanks or sympathy. These expressions are always so particularly personal that the words we send must, just must, be our own words, not words tossed off by someone paid to do a task that we ourselves should do.

I'm sure that you will agree with me that your mother-in-law and father-in-law would have appreciated far more your words, a sentence or two in your handwriting, expressing your feeling about this unfortunate situation.

Don't worry about what you did, for there is such an especially friendly and human quality on your letter that it makes me know that your mother-in-law and father-in-law will know that your heart is in the right place. And that's really the most important thing in life!

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

More About the Case of "Margaret"

That kiss which disrupted two families continues to interest readers of this column.

Margaret and her brother-in-law kissed for the first time at a New Year's Eve party and discovered they meant all the world to each other. Both were married and both had children. They were square enough about the kiss which changed their lives, each telling their respective spouses of the change of affection, and that divorces and remarriage was the solution hoped for.

On their part, the outgrown husband and wife were models of forbearance, and urged the lovers to wait and see if this sudden gust of emotion, which had swept both of them off their feet, wasn't a case of temporary fascination after all.

Readers of this column have written many letters concerning the case of this brother and sister-in-law. Here are a few of them.

"Dear Miss Fairfax

"My wife and I have followed with keen interest the controversy in regard to Margaret, the young wife and mother who made up her mind that she had never really loved until she kissed her brother-in-law at a New Year's Eve party.

"The brother-in-law must have been a thirty-third degree master of the art of kissing, eh what? But granting this, and what was also probably true that they had had several drinks, why should they have come to this absurdly foolish and selfish decision?

"Probably there isn't a happily married couple in the world today who has not had some such passing experience. A kiss—a perfect moment of understanding—and the stability of years seems to waft away like smoke. But common sense works automatically. And no sane man or woman is going to chuck everything in life—home, family, children—and start chasing false love lights—will o' the wisps.

"Margaret was unbaked, silly, undisciplined, and the brother-in-law not any better.

Susceptible-but-sane

Children Are Unhappy in a Loveless Home

"Dear Miss Fairfax

"If Margaret is convinced that it's real love she feels for her brother-in-law, then she will never be happy with her husband, no matter how much she respects him. It is not in human nature to be happy living with one person and loving another, and the unhappiness of parents will be reflected in the children of a loveless home.

"At the same time, if parents were living happily apart and each feels a sense of responsibility for the child's welfare, children will be happier dividing their time between two happy households than living in one where the ghost of unfulfillment and unhappiness stalks. This is offered for the consideration of Margaret and her lover.

One Who Knows."

Difficult for Children of Divorced Parents

"Dear Miss Fairfax

"In discussing the case of Margaret, please let me say that schools and colleges are becoming more and more reluctant to take the children of divorced parents. No less an authority than Dean Gauss of Princeton University, has said they were 'lone wolves and anti-social'. When marriage fails, it's just too bad for the contracting parties. But why hand on the tragedy to the next generation?

"Keep up a home for the children, even if the mother and father are no longer husband and wife.

A Wife."

MELROSE W. I.

A large number of members and visitors were present at the regular meeting of the Melrose Institute held on Thursday last at the home of Mrs. Sam Elliott.

With the president in charge the meeting was opened in the usual way with the Institute Ode followed by prayer.

Items of business were presented and considered. The matter of collecting a "linen chest" was dropped. The secretary was asked to send an invitation to the Quinte Branch asking them to meet with the Melrose ladies at their next meeting, the visiting ladies to provide the program.

A motion carried by which the sum of $5.00 was voted to the Girls' Club.

Several interesting answers were given to the Roll Call, "Who's Who in Canada, and Why."

The guest speaker, Mrs. A. Waddingham, district convener of legislation, was introduced by the president, and gave a well prepared paper on this subject. Many bulletins are available that could be made subjects of study at Institute meetings. It is the business of a lawyer to interpret the law, why not invite one to address a meeting?

It is wise, too, to make ourselves familiar with the growth of responsible government. Women need also to interest themselves in "Women's Property Rights."

Mrs. Tucker, who accompanied Mrs. Waddingham to this meeting, gave an informative paper on "The Making of Wills."

Mrs. Robertson, convener of legislation in the Melrose Institute, gave a paper on "Some Canadian Laws and Why We Should Know Them."

Mrs. Stratton gave a humorous reading. "Blest be the Tie That Binds" was sung with Mrs. H. Shetler as accompanist, after which collection amounting to $2.90 was received. Four fees were paid.

The meeting closed with the National Anthem. Following the singing of "Grace" tables were set and refreshments served by the hostess and lunch conveners of the second line.

A vote of thanks was extended to the visiting speakers and to the hostess who had put forth a special effort to entertain the ladies as she had been so recently indisposed with blood poisoning in her foot.

"I don't believe the future is going to be such a bad place."

MOON ON THE WATER

by Ruby M. Ayres

"I'll see about breakfast," she said vaguely, but when she turned to go he stopped her.

"I'm going to London this morning to sign those papers about the partnership. It will be good to have it all fixed up."

Jane turned eagerly, her face flushing.

"Oh, yes," she said, and then she stopped, checking the words that had risen naturally to her lips: "I'll go with you."

Funny that she felt she ought to wait until she was invited; funny that she felt perfectly sure the invitation would not be given.

"I shall never be able to thank you—for all you've done," Gavin said, and he looked a little embarrassed. "You know—it's not too late even now, Jane, if you feel that—perhaps you would rather not—let things go on. It won't be too late until I have signed the papers and —you see——" He began to flounder. "It's a lot of money for you to give me, and—so if you'd rather—" He stopped helplessly, and Jane said with quick generosity:

"But I'm giving it to myself as well as to you—we're going shares—aren't we?"

"Of course, but——" In the following silence she fancied that she heard again the echo of his words: I think life would be rather a good thing—shared with you."

Did he still think so? Somehow the echo seemed to be fainter and farther away, and because she was so badly in need of reassurance, she went to him and laid both hands on his shoulders.

"You know I want you to go on with it," she said. And then, as he did not speak, "Isn't it what we both want?"

"Of course, but.... there'll be papers for you to sign as well. I'll bring them down; you don't want to go to London on such a nasty morning."

Her hands fell from his shoulders. Just then Mary came in with the toast and coffee, followed by Pamela.

"We won't wait," Pamela said in her brisk, matter-of-fact way. "Dulcie is still fast asleep, and so is father, and as Gavin wants to catch the early train——" She glanced at her sister. "You still don't look up to much," she said bluntly. "I hope you're not thinking of going to London with him?"

"No, I'm not going to London with him," Jane answered.

"Quite right," her sister said. "You'd much better have another day indoors." She took her seat at the head of the table. "Help yourself, Gavin," she said graciously.

She began to pour the coffee, talking the time. "I shall tell Dulcie that she can't treat this house as if it is an hotel, staying in bed and expecting meals to be taken up to her. She's——"

The door opened suddenly and Dulcie appeared.

"Who's taking my name in vain?" she demanded.

She walked calmly into the room and over to the fire. She was wearing a very becoming sort of boudoir gown over her nightdress, and her bare feet were thrust into pink satin slippers.

Gavin, who had risen to his feet, looked at her a little startled, and Pamela said, "Where in the world did you get that get-up? I really think you might dress before you come down, You were fast asleep a moment ago when I looked in at your room."

But Dulcie only laughed and hugged her wrap more closely. "I thought it was really rather fetching," she said carelessly. "And Milly Lawson gave it to me, if you must know." She glanced down at her little feet in their absurd shoes. "Don't you think it's rather fetching, Gavin?" she asked.

Jane sat very still, her hands tightly clasped together in her lap. In a mirror on the opposite wall she could see her own reflection, and the plain serge frock she was wearing; she could see her mop of hair and her pale face—paler now than it had been a moment ago—and then she heard Gavin's awkward laugh before he answered that he was not a judge of a woman's clothes, but that she, "looked all right" to him.

"What very faint praise," Dulcie said as she drew out the chair opposite him and sat down. Pamela filled a cup and handed it to her in silence.

"I suppose you've told them all about our adventure last night," Dulcie said. She was the only one who appeared to be perfectly at her ease. "It really isn't at all bad at The George," she informed them. "There was a ripping log fire, and the food was quite good. We had a bottle of wine, too, just to cheer ourselves up. I was quite sorry when they sent to tell us that the car was ready."

Pamela stared at her. Was she doing this purposely, she wondered? Just to hurt Jane—just to impudently show how little she cared whether Jane was hurt or not?

"I must take you to The George to dinner one night, Jane," Gavin said quickly. "We'll go when the weather improves, and——"

Dulcie stirred three lumps of sugar into her coffee, perhaps purposely allowing the wrap to slip from her throat a little in order to show its slender whiteness.

"I should like to go," Jane said.

It was Pamela who broke the following silence.

"If you mean to catch that train, Gavin——"

He started as if his thoughts had been far away.

"Of course—may I be excused?"

He pushed back his chair and went out into the hall.

"Aren't you going to see him off, Jane?" Dulcie inquired, and without a word in reply Jane rose and followed him.

When she had gone, Pamela looked at her sister.

"What a little cat you are," she said angrily. "I should like to shake you."

Dulcie's big eyes grew round in amazement.

"Why, whatever have I done?" she inquired innocently. She half turned her head to look out of the window. "He's gone," she said. They didn't take very long to say goodbye, did they?"

Jane came back into the room.

"It's very cold," she said.

"You look frozen," Dulcie told her.

Frozen! She felt frozen, Jane thought; she felt as if something had been taken from her which could never be recaptured; the mainspring of her happiness—the tender warmth of complete trust and belief.

Dulcie stretched her slender arms and yawned like a lazy little kitten. "Well, I suppose I must get dressed," she said regretfully. "Josh is coming to take me out to lunch."

"Josh?" Pamela echoed sharply.

"Um." Dulcie smiled, showing her even little teeth. "Josh Hallard—haven't I told you about him? Well, you'll see him yourself directly. I don't suppose you'll like him, but he's got pots of money, and I may marry him some day."

"Did you know about this man?" Pamela inquired when she and Jane were alone.

"She said there was some one—some one with a lot of money. She said he was rich—and about fifty, but that's about all."

INSTALMENT 14.

"The sooner Dulcie marries him and settles down the better I shall be pleased," Pamela said tartly. "She upsets the entire household and every one in it. She ought to be ashamed of herself."

"It's her home as much as ours," Jane said.

"As much as ours! More than ours, you'd imagine, the way she behaves. Why should she stay in bed and be waited on any more than you or I? Why should she calmly annex everything and every one as if——" She stopped and Jane said with an effort:

"She's always been allowed to do it—I suppose that's why." She fumbled in the pocket of her frock. "Have you a cigarette?" she asked.

Pamela pointed across the room.

"There ought to be some over there—unless Dulcie has taken them, but she won't have done that, because when she came in last night she showed me some Gavin had given her—quite expensive cigarettes—I expect she asked for them."

Jane forced a little laugh.

"Aren't we getting rather catty?" she inquired, but Pamela merely answered:

"If you like to be soft about her, you can, but it's not my way. She's absolutely selfish and heartless, and if you're not very careful she'll smash up your life."

Jane's pale face was streaked with a painful flush.

"If you're talking about Gavin—and I suppose you must be," she said with forced calm, "he's not rich enough for Dulcie. Besides—he's mine," she added.

Pamela shrugged her shoulders. "Well, you know your own business, best," she answered. "Only don't say I didn't warn you."

She began to clear the breakfast things, and Jane said:

"I'll do that. I want something to do." She had never wanted occupation so badly in her life before. It seemed the only thing in the world which would keep her sane; she felt like a whirling top which once it is allowed to run down, will collapse in a helpless heap.

Gavin had not kissed her good-bye; she tried not to remember that, or to imagine there was anything unusual about the way in which he had said. "Well, good-bye" —almost as if he were glad to be leaving her.

Gavin had never been demonstrative, and she was forced to admit that neither had he ever said that he was in love with her. Theirs had been—outwardly, at all events—an affectionate friendship based on mutual liking and understanding. Or was there any truth in Pamela's blunt assertion that all the time he had known about the money and that he was just a fortune- hunter?

Jane stopped for a moment in her task of packing up cups and plates.

"What is the matter with me?" she asked herself in despair. "Why do I listen when people say unkind, wicked things?"

Dulcie's sweetly-insistent voice called to her.

"Jane! Are you there, Jane?"

"Yes."

"Well, just iron this jumper for me, there's a pet. I'd do it myself, but you know I'm no good at jobs of that sort, and I shall only scorch it and burn my fingers as well."

Jane went out into the hall to find Dulcie at the top of the stairs, still in the pink wrap.

"Here, catch!" she said, and the silk jumper came floating down into Jane's hands.

"Do it now," Dulcie said calmly, "I'm waiting for it."

Jane walked into the kitchen.

"Why didn't I refuse?" she asked herself. "Why didn't I tell her to do it herself?" But she knew that it was because she had always been in the habit of doing what Dulcie wanted—that they all had.

She carefully pressed out the little frills and the short, puffed sleeves. Was this the jumper Dulcie had worn last night, she wondered. And she suddenly seemed to see the old-fashioned, low-ceilinged dining-room at The George, with its big open fireplace, and her sister and Gavin, perfectly happy in each other's company, quite indifferent to the fog.

And then she thought of that day when she and Gavin had lunched together in the little parlor where the grey parrot had called out "Sweetheart" and she had told Gavin that she believed in comradeship more than she believed in sentiment.

Had he believed her, she wondered, and asked herself whether perhaps it would not have been better for them both if she had been quite honest and admitted how well she loved him.

And then on the heels of that thought came the realization that now it would be almost impossible to tell him, and at once she was remembering a woman with whom she had been friends, and who had been forced to divorce her husband and she had said to Jane when it was all over:

"We shook hands across the lawyer's table, and he said he hoped I would forgive him, and all the time I was wondering why I had never been able to tell him that he was everything in the world to me and always will be. But, of course, I shall never be able to tell him now."

Not in the least a parallel case with her own and Gavin's, and yet in a queer way they seemed alike—for perhaps she, too, had lost her opportunity.

"I'm not the type to say romantic things," she told herself humbly. "If I looked like Dulcie it would be different."

The little jumper was finished and she carried it up to her sister's room.

"Oh, thanks," Dulcie said carelessly. She was seated at the dressing-table making up her eyebrows. "The light is so bad in this room," she complained. Jane watched her silently. Through the mirror she could see herself reflected behind Dulcie's shoulder.

"Nobody would ever think we were sisters," she thought.

"I wonder what you will think of Josh?" Dulcie said with a note of amusement. "He's quite different from any men you know—much smarter, and more a man of the world."

"I wonder why he has been a bachelor all this time," Jane said, for fifty seemed to be rather a great age.

"He hasn't," her sister answered airily. "He married when he was quite young but he divorced her."

"And don't you—mind?" Jane asked, aghast.

Dulcie swung around on the low stool.

"Would you mind if Gavin had been divorced?" she asked briefly, then she laughed, "And anyway, I'm not in love with Josh."

"Does he know that?" Jane asked blanky.

"Of course he knows, but he doesn't care—we agree that it's much better just to be good friends. Sentiment is all very well, but a sensible marriage without it has a far better chance of succeeding—at least, I think so."

Almost her own words to Gavin! Jane shivered.

"And supposing you fall in love with some one—afterwards?" she said presently.

Dulcie shrugged herself into the freshly-pressed jumper.

"Well, if I do, I do—but I should never allow my heart to govern my head."

Tigers Break Consecutive Win Streak of Red Ruffing Over Team Since Season '37

Greenberg Hits Homer and Double to Pace Attack by Detroit

DERRINGER BEATEN

Fifteen Triples, Baseball's Rarest Hit, Clouted in Games Tuesday

(By Judson Bailey Associated Press Sports Writer).

Reputations may be priceless but three of baseball's foremost pitchers will tell you today that this is just idle prattle in the Major League arenas.

It's disrespectful enough that the world champion New York Yankees and the National League leading Cincinnati Reds should be sullied on the same day. Yet this not only happened yesterday with their respective pitching technicians, Red Ruffing and Paul Derringer, in the control booths but the same short-circuit cut down young Bob Feller.

Ruffing had not been beaten by Detroit Tigers since June, 1937, and had won 13 consecutive games from the Bengals but Del Baker's surly Tiger troupe routed him 5-2 in their series opener at New York.

Greenberg in Hitting Mood

Big Hank Greenberg took personal charge of the rebuttal, hitting his 20th homer of the season with two on in the first and later getting his 33rd double. The fact the Yankees got a dozen hits off two Detroit pitchers to the seven Ruffing allowed never overcame this early margin.

New York Giants, who may look desperate in their league standings, preserved one claim of distinction by edging out the Reds 5-4 in 10 innings and remaining the only team which holds a margin over the Reds for the season. They have won eight of their 14 games with Cincinnati.

Derringer went the route for the Reds even though he blew a three run lead in the sixth, when the Giants bunched six hits for four runs. Harry Danning tripled with two on to spark this rally and then singled the winning run across in the 10th.

Feller Loses

Feller's nemesis was young Bobby Doerr, who hit two home runs, the second with the bases loaded, to pace Boston Red Sox to a 7-5 triumph over Cleveland Indians.

The first of August also popped up with a couple of other features. For one thing Philip K. Wrigley, owner of Chicago Cubs, chose to see his hirelings perform—an unusual pastime for him. Dizzy Dean's $185,000 throwing arm took this occasion to go on the blink again and Manager Gabby Hartnett pushed Larry French into action. The veteran lefthander, who had complained to Wrigley the day before that he wasn't getting enough work, thereupon pitched to a 6-2 victory over the Phillies.

15 Triples Hit

For another there was an outburst of 15 triples—baseball's rarest hit—in seven of the day's eight games including five in the St. Louis Cardinals test with Boston Bees. Johnny Mize hit two with men on base and the Martins, Stu and Pep, each contributed one as St. Louis won 4-3.

Dixie Walker hit two for the Dodgers, driving in two runs, as Brooklyn beat Pittsburgh Pirates 5-3.

In the American League Tony Guiliani, Washington catcher, hit a three-bagger with the bases loaded in the fifth to lead the Senators to a 7-5 victory over St. Louis Browns.

Chicago White Sox downed Philadelphia Athletics 4-1 on the effective nine-hit hurling of Jack Knott and a helpful two-run homer by Larry Rosenthal.

'GREY EAGLE' TAKEN AS BEST OUTFIELDER BY ED BARROW

New York, Aug. 2 (AP)—Between issuing flat denials that New York Yankees are for sale, President Ed Barrow is getting a lot of quiet amusement out of a loose statement by Tris Speaker that he could name 15 better outfieders than Joe DiMaggio.

When he made this extravagant assertion the old "Grey Eagle" meant that baseball since it began had produced 15 more brilliant flyhawks than DiMag, men who could go further to make a catch and then throw the ball in with deadlier accuracy. He wasn't talking about batting apparently.

"That's a foolish statement for old Spoke to make," chuckled the Yankees' veteran head. "I've been watching them come and go longer than he has, and as a matter of fact he can name just one o.t... fielding outfielder than DiMaggio is today. That was Speaker, himself.

"I won't take it away from Spoke. He was a marvel, the best there ever will be. But I'm afraid he's unconsciously comparing DiMaggio to himself. What other outfielder does he think was better than Joe? He couldn't mean Ty Cobb. He never was more than a hitter.

"No, if I was in a tight spot, where maybe a world series depended upon having a man in centrefield who could make any kind of a catch, my first choice would be Speaker and my second choice DiMaggio."

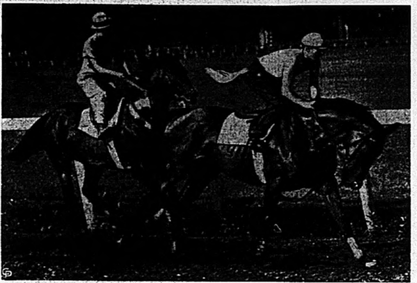
INFORMAL MOMENTS IN LIVES OF NOTABLE EQUINES



The photographer had to get up early in the morning to take this picture at Saratoga, oldest of New York's racing tracks. Trotting around the tracks in an informal manner by dawn's early light are Johnstown, LEFT, and his stable mate Fighting Fox, two of the turf's best at the moment. The latter, an in-and-outer last year and the first part of this, has been impressive in his last few races, while Johnstown, momentarily hailed as "one of the greatest horses of all time" is still recognized as one of the best in the game today, probably the best of the three-year-olds although on that score, of course, there would be loud protests from supporters of Challedon, who defeated "Big John" in the Preakness and the Arlington Classic.

"OH BOY! AM I IN SHAPE!"

Just to get rid of a little of his exuberance at the thought of meeting Joe Louis again, Bob Pastor, jumps over the railing in front of his dressing room, to swing into the start of his training session at Saratoga, N.Y. Bicycle Bob gets a crack at the world's heavyweight crown in Detroit next month in a 20-round bout with the champion, with whom he once went 10 rounds, mostly backwards.

BALL PLAYER WINS SPRINT

Leo (Pee Wee) McQuaid, flashy third baseman of the Picton intermediate baseball team, added further laurels to his prowess recently, when he won the 100 yard dash at the field day held in connection with the Queen's University summer school, at which McQuaid has been a student for the past four weeks. McQuaid's time was 10 and 4-5 seconds. McQuaid finished third in the 220 yard dash, after a faulty start.

TORONTO LEAFS DEFEAT CHIEFS IN FEATURE GAME

Johnny Gee, Recently Purchased by Pirates Loses Fifth of Season

BEARS SPLIT

Second Game With Royals Goes Fourteen Frames Before Montreal Wins

(By The Associated Press)

Pittsburgh papers please cpoy: Johnny Gee, purchased Monday by the Pirates, tossed away a ball game last night with a wild pitch as Toronto took a 4-0 victory over Syracuse in an International League feature game.

The Pirates outbid several other clubs for Gee, "the biggest man in baseball" and maybe all the hullabaloo made him nervous because he lost his fifth of the season. He had pitched his way out of two bad spots earlier, but the third time was no charm. He hit old Henie Manush in the back, when Bob Elliott sacrificed, Gee threw wild to first and Manush scored the winning run.

Through the defeat the Chiefs missed a chance to go into second place and ended up in fourth, a few points behind Rochester Red Wings, who were idle.

Orioles Back

Baltimore Orioles bounced back into the win column by taking a 10-8 decision from Buffalo Bisons for their third victory of the series. A five run outburst in the fourth put the Orioles out in front and although outhit 15-13 they were never headed. Harry Matuzak started in the box for Baltimore and was the winning pitcher. Ed Linke who relived him in the eighth ran into some trouble when Ollie Carnegie homered in the ninth with one but came through in fine style to end the game. The loss put the Herd three full games behind the league leading Jersey City Giants.

A Long Contest

In one of the longest games played this season, Newark Bears downed Montreal Royals 7-6 in the second game of a twin-bill after losing the opener 11-4. The marathon went 14 innings before a sacrifice fly by Hal Wagner, with the bases loaded, scored Walt Judnicn with the winning run. Mark Beddingfield, last of Newark's five pitchers, received credit for the victory by retiring the side in the 14th after relieving Ivy Paul Andrews, who pitched four scoreless frames.

Lee Rogers went the distance for the Royals in the first game and allowed only eight hits. Joe Beggs was the losing pitcher.

Jimmy Ward, who was recently given his outright release by the Montreal Canadiens after 12 years service in the National Hockey League, still believes he has a few more years left for hockey's "big tent." However, Ward is satisfied he is only an "ex" when it comes to forward work, so will try to catch on as a defenceman with some other club, possibly the New York Americans. Ward played 11 seasons with the now-defunct Montreal Maroons he told me I could play Canadiens. "Why, when Eddie Gerard was alive and coaching the Maroons he tild me I could play defence anytime I wanted to. Eddie assured me it was a natural position for me," Ward revealed this week and he added his legs were still sound and his weight was about 195 pounds. Ward was once a teammate on the Maroons with "Red" Dutton, coach of the Americans and no doubt Dutton will at least give his old crony a chance to display his rear-guard efforts next fall.

Jack Lough, who keeps a more strict eye on Oshawa hockey circles than Sherlock Holmes kept on the keyholes, agreed with us recently, that if Oshawa hockey interests hoped to have their puck-chasing status relegated to the senior "B" ranks, the Motor City moguls should sponsor two clubs in a group that might include Peterboro, the Air Force and Belleville. Besides those members of last year's Oshawa senior team, there was a good intermediate "A" club to draw from besides Consella and two other over-age members of the Dominion champion Oshawa juniors, who would be playing hockey in Oshawa another season. Surely the Motor City puck moguls do not think for a holy minute that Belleville or the Air Force will incorporate one senior club into their group from Oshawa. It just doesn't make sense. While on the subject of hockey we might add that Milton "Dutch" Spiedelberg, former Waterloo junior, was in Belleville over the week end seeking employment and to play with "Toots" Holway's juniors next season. Spiedelberg is a husky 18-year-old youth, who plays defence at 185 pounds. If employment can be procured "Dutch" may yet land with Belleville.

This morning a grader was employed to cut the roughened spots off the Coleman Flats diamond and thereby decrease the chances of players risking their limbs while at play. The City Softball Executive met yesterday with City Engineer Charlie Mott, who advised the mushball heads the best procedure would be to procure a grader for the work, after two large loads of earth had been dumped into the multiple holes around the infield. The diamond will be rolled this afternoon and we hope it will present a much better appearance for tonight's game. Temporary players' benches were placed at either end of the lFats bleachers and for the remainder of the City O.A.S.A. playdowns the competing clubs will be instructed to remain on the players' benches and not loitering in front of the patrons, while seated in the stands. Strict orders have been afforded the league umpires to enforce the playing rules, insofar as the players' benches are concerned, players not actively interested in the play will have to remain on the bench as only the captain and team manager may approach an official in protest of a decision.

Henry Helf, catcher for the Cleveland Indians, recently caught a baseball thrown off Cleveland's Terminal Tower, 708 feet up, to break the altitude record established 30 years ago, when Gabby Street caught a ball thrown from the top of Washington monument, 550 feet high.

The first national billiard championship match was played at Detroit, Mich., on April 12, 1859, when John Seereiter of that city and Michael Phelan of New York city were matched for a stake of $15,000 and the championship of America. Phelan won and returned to New York where he reigned as champion until 1863.

Both Major League leaders took defeats yesterday, the Yankees losing 5-2 to Detroit. Not since June 1937 had the Tigers beaten the durable Charley (Red) Ruffing, who had tamed the Tigers and made them look like kittens 13 consecutive times. Yesterday, however, the Tigers made the best of seven hits to win, the Yankees collecting an even dozen base hits, but they were only productive of two runs as two Detroit hurlers scattered their hits well. "Twinkle-Toes" Selkirk hit his 18th home run for one of the Yankees runs. While all of this was going on the Cincinnati Reds' winning streak was halted by the lowly Giants as the Rhinelanders lost 5-4 at home. Paul Derringer, dean of the Reds hurling staff, absorbed his fifth defeat of the season, as against 14 triumphs. Harry Danning singled home Jurges in the 10th to win.

Sport Spice — "Hammerin' Hank" Armstrong will defend his lightweight title against Lou Ambers on Aug. 22nd. providing, however, Ambers wins when they meet on Nov. 1st in a welterweight go....The Cincinnati Reds have played before over a million patrons already this season.... Lou Nova, who meets Tony Galento in September, will move east for training purposes this week... "Army" Armstrong, former Belleville boy and well known hockey referee, successfully defended his tennis singles title at Oshawa yesterday....Two Picton-owned harness horses, Lastic Gratton and Widower Gratton, will start in the Canadian Pacing Derby at New Hamburg tomorrow .... Another J. H. Dean has appeared on the baseball horizon besides Jerome Herman, the dizzy one—the new one is James Henry Dean and he's pitching in the Florida State League

MICHIGAN GOES AFTER "SNAIL DRIVERS"

Lansing, Mich., Aug. 2 (CP)—A system of express highway with minimum speed regulations has been proposed as a means of coping with Michigan's "snail drivers". Asserting such drivers are "nearly as dangerous as speedsters," Highway Commissioner Murray Van Wagoner will seek legal opinion as to the right to impose such restrictions on heavily travelled roads. A 30-mile-per-hour bottom has been suggested.

"Drivers annoyed at being held up behind slow motorists become impatient and decide to 'run the gauntlet' and that's when accidents happen," the Commissioner said.

Atlanta, Ga., Aug. 2 (AP)—When W. H. Wilson took time off from his lunch stand to attend a railroad auction of unclaimed baggage he took a fancy to a trunk, got it on a $4 bid, contents unseen. In the trunk Wilson found bonds and securities he said were valued at "over $1,000."

POTATO BUGS KILLED BY INTENSE HEAT

Kingston, Ont., Aug. 2 (CP)—While heat and dry weather of the past week had caused considerable damage to crops in the district, there is one consolation in the matter.

Harold Simpson, market gardener of Cataraqui, three miles west of here, said today that the heat was so intense it killed all the potato bugs on his farm.

"After going thoroughly through my potato fields," said Mr. Simpson "I find that the heat was so great all the potato bugs were killed."

"Science invites investigation, welcomes criticism and rejoices at new truths to supersede or supplant the old."

HOUSE DEFEATS ROOSEVELT'S BILL

Defeat Would Deprive Industry of Progress Says President

Washington, Aug. 2 (AP)—The sudden death of President Roosevelt's Lending Bill at the hands of Insurgents in the House of Representatives sent the United States' Congress pell mell into an adjournment rush today, with confused administration forces trying to stave off a final thrust at the Wage-Hour Law.

As a week-end wind-up of the seven months' session appeared certain, Representative Sam Rayburn of Texas, the Democratic floor leader, said he expected "insistence from some quarters" for a House vote on Wage-Hour amendments. The Administration is fighting most of these proposed changes.

While Roosevelt critics hailed the House's refusal to debate the Senate-approved lending measure yesterday as one of the biggest New Deal defeats since the collapse of the Supreme Court Bill, the President told reporters that industry, the unemployed and the taxpayer would be damaged by the action.

MOCK INVASION STAGED BY ITALY

"Attacks" by "Red Forces" Repulsed After Initial Success

Milan, Italy, Aug. 2 (AP)—A mock invasion of Italy's northwestern frontier from the direction of France today set large scale Italian military manoeuvres in motion.

The "attack" by "Red" forces was repulsed after initial success, but "enemy" aviation penetrated anti-aircraft defences, causing considerable theoretical damage behind the lines.

While the army of the Po was moving into position for a counterattack tomorrow, "enemy" planes "bombed and destroyed" two bridges over the Ticino River.

The Engineer Corps, working throughout the night, replaced them with pontoon bridges at Pavia and Bereguardo, enabling the defending army to continue its march toward the frontier.

Premier Mussolini, in a two-hour flight by bombing plane over the manoeuvre area saw his motorized columns moving westward.

5000 PILGRIMS TO VISIT SHRINE

Tercentenary of Historic Fort Ste Marie's Founding to be Marked

Midland, Ont., Aug. 2—(CP)—Chronicles of human torture and heroism without parallel in modern history will be recalled here this week end when 5,000 pilgrims from many parts of Canada and the United States gather at the Martyrs' Shrine to mark the tercentenary of historic Fort Ste. Marie's founding.

Opened and dedicated in 1926 by Cardinal O'Connell of Boston, the modern shrine is a dignified building overlooking the ruins of the old fort, headquarters 300 years ago of five courageous Jesuit Priests, North America's first entries in the Book of Saints, who died by fire and tomahawk defending their outpost mission fortress from hostile tribes of Iroquois Indians.

Enrico Cardinal Gasparri, Prince of the Roman Catholic Church, will celebrate solemn benediction at the shrine Sunday. Archbishop J. C. McGuigan of Toronto and Bishop Dennis O'Connor of Peterborough will assist. A number of Papal Knights of St. Gregory are expected to attend the Cardinal in full uniform.

Story of Hardship, Devotion

The story of the old fort is one of hardship and torture, bravery and devotion. Commissioned by Samuel De Champlain, founder of New France, to bring civilization and the cross among the Hurons, a small band of priests and laymen penetrated uncharted forests in 1639 to found Fort Ste. Marie near present-day Midland on the site of the Huronian empire's ancient capital.

Most of the pioneers were to meet martyrdom before a decade was out. Some survived until 1649 only to die then among the charred remains of 10 years' work rather than abandon fight. In that year the settlement, only permanent fort between Albany and the Pacific was ravaged and burned by invading Iroquois hordes.

Martyrdom of Father Daniel

First to die before the triumphant warriors was Father Anthony Daniel. The Iroquois surprised him during mass in a small outpost mission. Urging all to flee who could, Father Daniel faced the invaders alone. He was shot down, hacked to pieces and burned in his own flaming church.

Fathers Charles Garnier, John De Brebeuf, Gabriel Lalemant and Noel Chabanel met similar fates in their efforts to Christianize the Hurons who were weakened by disease and easy victims for the stalwart Iroquois.

Historical Importance

From virgin bushland the Jesuits had hewn many acres of profitable farm land which provided food during winter for as many as 6,000 Hurons, camped near the fort for protection. Organizing and sustaining the Hurons' morale, the priests were historically important in delaying the Iroquois onslaught through Ontario and giving New France a last chance to muster resources to meet the menace.

British Women Missionaries Forced to Disrobe

Peiping, Aug. 2 (AP)—Two British women missionaries who arrived at Peiping today reported they were forced to strip in the presence of a man while being detained by Japanese soldiers at Kaifeng.

The women came from Sian, capital of Shensi Province in China's northwest, with a man missionary. They said they were held at Kaifeng for two days and questioned four hours on July 24 and two hours July 25.

The man in whose presence they were forced to strip, they said, was either a Japanese or a Korean.

At Peiping, directors of the anti-British campaign opened a new drive by adopting tactics which have driven a number of Britons out of inland cities. Servants in British households were told to quit or face "final action".

Warning letters were known to have been delivered to 516 individual servants, some of whom left their jobs in panic. The letters signed by the "Anti-British Picket Corps", said the common obligation of all Asiatics was to liquidate all relations with Britons.

Toronto Motorist Has Arm Fractured

Harvey Shales, 47 of Toronto, sustained a fractured arm and spinal injuries when the automobile he was riding in was in collision with another motor car four miles west of Belleville on Highway No. 2 early last evening. Shales was taken to the Belleville General Hospital in Martin's ambulance, where the fracture was reduced by Dr. R. A. Flynn.

Shales was proceeding westerly, when his car was in head-on collision with an east bound vehicle, said by police to have been driven by a young man named Kyle of this city. Shales' car turned completely over twice, before coming to rest on its side in the centre of the highway. Two hitch-hikers, whose names were not revealed by Traffic Officer Caldwell, escaped uninjured as they crawled from the Shales overturned vehicle.

Police later questioned young Kyle at the police station and then liberated him.

RESCUED FROM DROWNING

Peterborough, Ont., Aug. 2—(CP)—Bert Blum, 17, lacrosse player, was rescued from drowning in the Otonabee River here last night by Orville McIlwaine and Frank McIntosh.

Blum was apparently overheated from playing lacrosse when he went swimming and got into difficulties. His rescuers hauled him to an abutment of the Canadian Pacific Railway bridge and then took him ashore in a boat.

91st Birthday Not So Happy

Nonagenarian Cannot Drive Car Any More After 24 Years

Ottawa, Aug. 2 (CP)—Robert Young celebrated his 91st birthday today but he wasn't entirely happy. The Ontario Highways Department don't let him drive his automobile anymore.

"They think I'm too old to drive," said the former blacksmith. "Why, I'm just as good a driver as I ever was." Young said he has been driving an automobile for the last 24 years without an accident.

According to James T. Erskine, issuer of licences here, Young failed to pass a driver's test. Issuers recently were instructed to use their discretion in issuing licences to persons more than 65 years of age.

If an applicant appeared to be unfit, a report was sent to Toronto. A driving test followed and if the applicant failed to pass every phase of the test, the permit was denied. Young received word he had failed to pass the test.

MASS FLIGHTS

Amid these evidences of aviation progress in one generation, the air corps announced its second world record this week. A "flying fortress" yesterday left Wright Field at Dayton, O., and streaked 625 miles at 259.398 miles an hour carrying a load of 11,023 pounds. Earlier, a similar plane reached an altitude of 8,200 feet with a pay load of 15 1-2 tons.

Vast Changes

The record-breaking craft, being developed in the $300,000,000 air corps expansion program, bear little resemblance to the first American military airplane which a war department board accepted formally from Wilbur and Orville Wright 30 years ago.

Today's demonstration centred on Wright Field. Performance trials of standard army combat airplanes and flights by tactical squadrons.

On the west coast the civilian population collaborated with the air corps in putting into operation an "aircraft warning net" to signal the approach of enemy bombers. Officers laid out a net of civilian observation stations about eight miles apart from the Mexican to the Canadian border.

GERMAN TROOPS

Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung, under the caption, "Holiday of the armed forces," said that "as long as Germans live they will remember their heroic sons of the Great War days and hold the memory of their deeds in highest esteem."

Grand Admiral Erich Raeder issued a statement to the German navy recalling the "heroic" defensive fight of the German nation against a world of enemies."

DWELLING IS BURNED

Woodstock, Ont., Aug. 2 (CP)—The one and one half storey frame home of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Millard, near Braemar Village, was destroyed today. The fire was believed to have started from an oil stove in the kitchen. Neighbors helped save most of the furniture. No estimate of the loss was available.

DUNNING TAKES LONG REST TO RECOVER HEALTH

Finance Minister Will Not Resign Due to Bad Heart Condition

WILL GO ABROAD

Ottawa, Aug. 2—(CP)—Finance Minister Dunning will take a long rest to recover from a heart condition which has bothered him during the last two sessions of parliament. Revenue Minister Ilsley, it was announced last night by Prime Minister Mackenzie King, will assume the additional duties of acting Finance Minister in Mr. Dunning's absence.

Following yesterday's cabinet meeting, the Prime Minister said Mr. Dunning had offered his resignation, but that it was not accepted. "I told Mr. Dunning I was sure the people of Canada would want him to remain in the government, so that when he is restored to health he may return to continue to serve the country as he has served so well in the past," said Mr. Mackenzie King.

Expect Complete Recovery

The Finance Minister's physicians have advised him that he may expect a complete recovery if he separates himself entirely from all official duties for a long period of rest. He will go to England shortly, visiting, among other places, the section of Leicestershire where he was born on July 31, 1885.

Mr. Mackenzie King said he had no idea how long Mr. Dunning would be away, as it depended entirely upon the speed of his recovery. He said the Finance Minister had offered his resignation because he believed it the proper thing to do in view of his enforced absence from the capital.

Much Concerned

"Mr. Dunning was very much concerned about the necessity of his being away from his duties for such a long period," said the Prime Minister. "I pointed out to him that ministers on different occasions in the past had been forced to take long vacations because of ill health, and that the people had been glad to approve because of the valuable services such ministers had rendered.

"I told him I would not accept his resignation, but that he should take as long as necessary to restore his health and send him back to his duties with the old zest.

No Responsibility

"There were several matters I would like to have had him take up abroad, but he felt he must be completely removed from all sense of responsibility, and I agreed with him. His physicians have said he must be relieved of all duties direct or indirect in order that his recovery may be complete."

Since Mr. Dunning's health began to fail near the close of the 1938 session, it has been generally conceded he would not run for reelection to parliament. He has been prominently mentioned as a leading candidate for several high government positions now vacant as well as for the principalship of McGill University, vacated through recent resignation of Lewis Douglas.

LOSES LIFE IN FIRE

Ottawa, Aug. 2—(CP)—One man lost his life when fire heavily damaged the Laura Homas Beauty Shop on Sparks Street here last night. Charles Ross, caretaker who lived above the shop, emerged from the heavy smoke and collapsed on the street. Rushed to hospital, he died a short time later of asphyxiation.

The fire broke out in the basement about an hour after the close of the business day, and a dozen firetrucks responded to the two alarms. Smoke was heavy, and majority of the damage was caused by smoke and water.

'THE DIFFERENCE' IS ADOLF HITLER

Goebbels' Paper Compares Position of Germany in 1914 With That of 1939

Berlin, Aug. 1—(AP)—Propaganda Minister Goebbels' newspaper, De Angriff, declared today that Germany military and strategic position had improved vastly in the 25 years since the beginning of the Great War.

The difference, it said, may be expressed in two words—Adolf Hitler.

(Germany and Russia went to war August 1, 1914.)

The headline of the page-long article was "1914: Kaiser Wilhelm —1939 Adolf Hitler." The article said history repeated itself, but with essential variations. It enumerated three differences between European situation then and now.

It said of 1914:

"1—The Western Powers had the advantage of greater armies and better strategic positions in Europe.

"2—Imperial Russia sought escape from internal difficulties in a foreign war.

"3—The Colonial problem complicated the European situation to the disadvantage of Germany."

But of 1939 it said—

"1—The Axis powers possess greater military and industrial strength than the western powers.

"2—Russia today finds herself in the situation of a man who has had a stroke and now fears great physical exertion.

"3—The colonial problem complicates the European situation, but this time to the disadvantage of England."

CONSTRUCTION UP IN MONTH JULY

Increase in Contract Awards Show 3.6 Per Cent for 7 Months

Toronto, Aug. 1— (CP) — July building contract awards throughout Canada, as compiled by MacLean Building Reports Limited, totalled $22,129,700, a gain of 4.5 per cent over the total for the same month of 1938.

Contract awards for the first seven months of this year totalled $105,575,600 an increase of 3.6 per cent over the total for the corresponding period of last year. Contract awards in Ontario during July were $7,232,700.

Guelph, Ont., Aug. 1—(CP)—A building boomlet is underway here, building permit figures showed today. Permits issued during July for buildings were valued at $46,846 bringing the total so far this year to $134,913. Last year at the same time, permits issued were to the value of $94,835 and in July 1938 permits totalled $14,095.

55 Are Wounded In Prohibition Clash

Bombay, Aug. 1 (AP)—Fifty-five persons, including 27 policemen, were injured today in rioting that followed a demonstration against enforcement of Bombay's new Prohibition Law.

Six persons in a crowd which attacked the police were wounded by bullets. Most of the others were hurt by flying stones. A Moslem procession protesting Prohibition was stoned by Hindu onlookers.

Since midnight the 8,500 bars and liquor shops of Bombay and its suburbs have been closed to natives and liquor for Britons and other Europeans is rationed.

A Moslem procession protesting prohibition was stoned by Hindu onlookers. Police opened fire, wounding five persons, two of them seriously. Ten others were hurt by flying stones.

Until midnight brought the dry law into effect and enforcement agents padlocked liquor establishments, many natives drank copiously of their last legal liquor.

Europeans crowded clubs to drink in the new law which allows each foreigner seven units of liquor a month. A unit is one bottle of whiskey, three bottles of wine or nine of beer.

BACHELOR HAVEN

Unless matters change, there are 60,000 men, who, according to viewpoint are doomed or let off with a life of celibacy in Australia.

Sixty thousand is, according to the latest figures, the excess of males over females. Incidentally, the Commonwealth's population has recently made a spurt. In nine months, the gain has been 40,488, and the seven million mark will be reached at this rate next year which is much sooner than was expected.

All the Australian states and terirtories now have a surplus of males except Victoria and South Australia. In Victoria there are 22,000 excess females; in South Australia 17. — Australian Press Bureau.

WALL STREET

New York, Aug. 2.—(AP)—Recovery forces stepped to the fore in today's stock market boosting leading issues fractions to a point or better.

The list stumbled at the start but toward mid-day a flurry of buying in the Utilities touched off a modest rally. Near the fourth hour prices were at about their best.

Among Stocks American Can, Burlington Mills, Celanese and Brooklyn Union Gas touched new highs for 1939.

Others ahead were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, Bendix, Western Union, Public Service of New Jersey, Consolidated Edison, Anaconda, Phelps Dodge, Brooklyn Manhattan Transit and U.S. Rubber.

Canadian shares seemed reluctant to join the advance and small losses were chalked up for Dome and McIntyre Porcupine. Distillers, however, edged forward while most others were unchanged.

PUZZLED HOW SAW BLADES TAKEN INTO JAIL

Hamilton, Aug. 2.— (CP)—How three hacksaw blades used by John Chylinsky 22-year-old prisoner, to saw through bars in one of the outer windows of Barton Street jail, were taken into the institution puzzled officials today.

J. Wilkie Lawrason, Wentworth County Sheriff, said today the blades were found in a downstairs corridor hidden beneath materials, lending support to the theory the escape had been well-planned.

It was also learned that Chylinsky had not gone to the mess hall for supper prior to the escape, informing keepers that he was ill.

Eggs Scarce on Produce Markets

Toronto, Aug. 2.—Top grade eggs and cheese firmed slightly on the Toronto open produce market yesterday, according to the Dominion Department of Agriculture. Butter prices were steady.

The egg market was strengthened by a lack of supplies. Light receipts cleared readily under a fairly good demand, and prices showed a tendency to go higher throughout the day. In the graded section, A-large eggs sold to wholesalers at 27c to 28c, and A-medium at 25c to 26c. Other prices were firm.

Trading was quiet and draggy on the butter market, with buyers showing very little interest in offerings. Light receipts moved slowly, and while buyers seemed in no rush to bid for offerings, there was no apparent pressure on sellers to get rid of their butter. No sales of western butter were reported.

Exports of Canadian butter from Montreal and Vancouver during the week ending July 29 totalled 11,578 packages, the department reported. Cheese exported via Montreal and Quebec in the week amounted to 30,644 boxes.

Montreal, Aug. 2 (CP)—Potatoes, eggs and butter were steady to up a shade on open produce markets here yesterday, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported. Quebec white and colored cheese gave up ⅛ cent, but Ontario white and colored held firm.

Creamery butter prints to retailers sold for 22¾ to 23 cents a pound and solids for 22¼ to 22½. Western butter delivered in Montreal was unquoted. Quebec No. 1 pasteurized in wholesale jobbing lots made 21⅝. Receipts, 1,349 boxes.

Ontario white and colored cheese were both quoted at 11⅛. Quebec white was quoted at 10¾ and colored at 10⅞. Receipts, 6,841 boxes.

Graded eggs shipments in used free cases sold at 28 to 29 cents a dozen for A-large, 26 to 27 for A-medium, 19 for B-large, 15 for C. Receipts, 1,394 cases.

LIVESTOCK

Toronto, Aug. 2 (CP)—Cattle trade continued dull on the Toronto livestock market today. Prices in all sections were generally unchanged with no prices established for hogs. Cattle holdover from Tuesday was about 600 head.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Livestock Branch were: Cattle 350, calves 530, hogs 800, sheep and lambs 420.

Common to medium butcher steers and heifers sold at $4.50-$6. A few good butchers brought $6.25. Cows ranged from $3-$4.50. Bolognas bulls were $3.50-$4.25, with a few good butcher bulls at $4.75.

Calves made a general top of $9 with a few at $9.50. Common were downward at $5.50 with grassers at $4.50-$4.75.

Previous close on hogs was $11 for rail grades.

Good ewe and wether lambs brought $8.75 for rail delivered and $8 for truck delivered. Bucks were $7.50-$7.75 and culls mostly $7. The few sheep offered sold at $2-$3.50 cwt.

Montreal, Aug. 2 (CP)—Cattle and calves were steady and hogs were lower in early dealings on Montreal livestock markets today, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported.

Receipts—Cattle 35, calves 18, hogs 771.

The cattle offered were mostly steers and there were not enough to make a market.

Veals ranged from $5-$7.50 and grassers were $3.75-$4. Heavy calves were hard to sell.

There were no fresh sales of hogs made. Two carloads were delivered on former contracts.

LONE GUNMAN STAGES HOLDUP

Undetermined Amount of Money Taken From Bank at Bala, Ontario

Bala, Ont., Aug. 2—(CP)—A lone gunman entered the Dominion Bank of Canada here today and escaped with an undetermined amount of cash.

A description of an old car used in the hold-up was flashed to Provincial Police at Port Carling, 12 miles north-east of here. Provincial officers from Port Carling were being rushed here to aid Bala's lone policeman, George Clement, in the investigation.

Bank officials began an immediate check-up to determine how much money was taken.

Bala is a summer resort 150 miles north of Toronto.

DUCK SHOT IN COLOMBIA

Kingsville, Ont., Aug. 2 (CP)—Jack Miner, Kingsville, naturalist, received word today from Dr. Geo. Salazar that he had shot a duck at Barranquilla, Colombia, with Miner's name and address on a band on the duck's leg. The duck was banded here in October, 1938.

Miner has banded thousands of birds to study their migration routes but this, he said, was the first reported from South America.

QUEEN'S COUSIN TO WED

London, Aug. 2—(CP Cable)—Engagement was announced today of Susannah Bowes-Lyon, cousin of the Queen, and Peter Hugh Dudley Ryder, son of Hon. A. D. Ryder.

Miss Bowes-Lyon was bridesmaid yesterday for her sister, Caroline Ann Bowes-Lyon, who was married to Ross Llewellyn, son of General E. H. Llewellyn.

YOUNG CANADA EXHIBITS ART

53 Painters Represented by 63 Pictures in World's Fair Exhibition

By TED FARAH
Canadian Press Staff Writer

New York, Aug. 2—(CP) — A new exhibition of contemporary Canadian art went on view at the World's Fair today, revealing the more liberal painters of the Dominion as a generally cheerful group with a lively interest in nature and people, and not much concern about committing social comment on canvas.

The third exhibition in the gallery of the Canadian pavilion in Mr. Grover Whalen's wonderland is representative of the younger artists from coast to coast who enrolled under the banner of the original "group of seven," and became known as The Canadian Group of Painters.

Cross-Section of Current Art

The 65 pictures by 53 painters, an honest cross-section of current art in Canada, stand in contrast to the large exhibition of American contemporary art nearby, which has many pictures expressing protest against social conditions and commenting satirically on existing institutions.

Furthermore, for the "world of tomorrow" where nudity is a raging topic of controversy—especially in the amusement sector—the Canadian show offers not one undraped figure.

Landscapes and rural scenes, boldly colored with strong dramatic and rhythmic qualities, dominate the Canadian show. Only one surrealist picture is offered. It is by Pegi Nichol, a native of Listowel, Ont. The picture defies description in a short space.

Few Pictures Abstract

Few of the pictures tend toward abstraction. One that does markedly is titled "Hockey". Frits Brandtner, a native of Danzig who came to Canada in 1928 is the artist, and he shows two rather martian hockey players in action, producing an effect that is posterish but interesting.

One of the most dramatic pictures in the show is the "Lake Superior Village" of Charles F. Comfort, a product of the winning school of art. This large canvas shows a few frame houses silhouetted grimly on the barren shore of the lake. It won a prize at The Great Lakes Exhibition.

A. Y. Jackson, one of the original "group of seven" is represented with "Northern Landscape" and "Radium Mine," which he painted during September and October of last year when he was a visitor in the Great Bear Lake area. The landscape shows a small Musket Lake surrounded by gnarled, stunted spruce. In the background is Great Bear Lake. The coloring is bold, in characteristic Jackson style.

Louis Muhlstock, Montreal, contributes a fine portrait, titled "The Rabbi." Roger Viau, another Montrealer, shows a still life, "La Chaise Rouge."

Representative of the West are James W. G. MacDonald, with his sombre study of "The Black Tusk", at Garibaldi Park, B.C.; and Philip Surrey, native of Calgary, with his "Sunday Afternoon." Miller Britain and John Weldon Humphrey, both of Saint John, N.B., have portraits in the show.

The current exhibition will remain in the gallery at the fair until Sept. 15. It is the third to go on view at the Canadian pavilion. First was that of the Royal Canadian Academy of Arts and it was followed by a joint exhibition of the Canadian Society of Painters in Water Color and the Sculptors' Society of Canada.

Stop-logs Replaced By Concrete Fill

Sturdy stop-logs that have withstood the whims and caprices of the Moira River, in spring freshet and flood, and summer idleness for the past ten years, in the Holgate Dam near the mill at Cannifton have been removed and will be replaced by a concrete fill.

Water-levels of the river north of the dam have been lowered between six and eight feet in order to facilitate the work. Laborers barefooted, and in bathing suits, are working just below a temporary dam of heavy planking, that has been erected behind the site of the stop-logs.

A sturdy box-like affair is at present being built on the dam bottom, through which fish will be able to make their way up-river after the new concrete addition has been completed. Pouring of concrete is expected to start within a day or so.

A plank runway has been constucted from the mill to the top of that part of the dam near the site of operations. Ten feet below workmen are removing debris and rock from the old site of the stop-logs, wheeling it away in wheelbarrows in about six inches of water. Immediately behind them the waters of the Moira lap gently at the planking of the temporary plank dam which has been built to approximately head-level.

GAS PRICES LOWERED

Victoria, Aug. 2—(CP)—An order of the Provincial Government reducing the price of gasoline was being studied by British Columbia oil dealers today.

Effective Aug. 7 the wholesale price of gasoline will be reduced three cents a gallon and there will be a fixed price spread between wholesale and retail prices.

GAMBLING SHIPS AT SEA RAIDED

500 Patrons of One Ship Marooned for Hours by Defiance of Owner

Santa Monica, Calif., Aug. 2. — (AP)—The long arm of the law reached out to sea today to close three gambling ships, but some 500 patrons of a fourth were marooned for hours while its defiant owner trained water hose on a boatload of officers, halting efforts to board.

Customers from the latter were taken, as they reached shore in water taxis to Santa Monica police station. Officers wrote down their names, but did not book or fingerprint them.

Officers boarded three of the vessels, three miles offshore, arrested more than a score of men, seized some $30,000 in stakes and in one instance indulged in some furniture smashing.

The raiding parties first boarded the Texas, off nearby Ocean Park, arrested four men for investigation, destroyed two gambling tables and tossed them overboard.

Twelve men each were arrested on the Showboat and Tango.

But it was a different story when the State Fish and Game boat Bonita pulled up beside the Rex, largest and most elaborate of the ships.

Tony Cornero, its owner, leaned over the rail and shouted that he was operating within provisions of a decision by the State Court of Appeals. He refused to accept service of a formal complaint. While Cornero looked on, members of the crew turned water hose on the boat and officers ducked for cover. Finally, the patrol boat pulled out of range.

Cornero announced he would not permit patrons to leave as long as officers remained ready to rush aboard. The Rex's entranceway was barricaded and the deadlock began. It continued through the evening until the officers decided to stand by.

HAVELOCK EVENS SERIES AT TWEED

Score is 8-7 and Teams Playing for Title of Trent Valley Loop

Tweed, Aug. 2 (Special)—Havelock evened the series with Tweed at one game each in their series to determine the Trent Valley softball winner, defeating them on Monday night by a score of 8 to 7. The highlight of the game was the weird exhibition of coaching by the Tweed coach at third base. He was directly responsible for the loss of three runs by his team.

Brunton on the mound for Havelock was easily the best man in the game. His lightning fast ball which he found rather hard to control at times, had the batters swinging late. Ten strikeout victims were accredited to him. Lajoie and Davidson whiffed three times each and Wagar twice. At the plate Brunton proved a very dangerous man, getting three hits, all for extra bases, a double, a triple and a homer. He scored two runs himself and batted in three others.

Tweed Hurler In Trouble

Davidson, who pitched for Tweed was in trouble with his lack of control in every inning except the seventh. He issued seven passes and struck out seven. In the seventh inning he struck out the side on eleven pitched balls. His change of pace had the batsmen swinging too soon.

C. Kennedy, playing at centre for Havelock provided the fielding feature in the fifth inning when he speared Jimmie Sinclair's hard drive high over his head. The bases were loaded at the time with two down.

Kennedy, Hunter and McCutcheon secured two hits apiece for Havelock, Orr, Courneyea, Tummon and Sinclair were the leading bats men for Tweed.

Tweed—Burroughs, 2b; Meraw, 3b; Orr, c; Wagar, ss; Courneyea, cf; Tummon, 1b; Davidson p; Sinclair rf; Lajoie lf.

Havelock—Voyer, 2b; Matheson, 1b; Jones, ss; Brunton, p; Kennedy, cf; Hunter, rf; Puffer, c; Peterson, 3b; McCutcheon, lf.

Umpires—W. Leal, Tweed, at the plate; Hagerman, Havelock, on bases.

4 IRISHMEN SENT OUT OF ENGLAND

London, Aug. 2.—(CP) — Four Irishmen arrested yesterday by order of the home office were trundled off to Eire today under guard of detectives. A man held in Cannon Row police station and a young woman detained in Rochester Row Station were to be conducted out of the country tonight.

Five sticks of gelignite were discovered in Glasgow last night near a dock used by steamships from Dublin. It was believed the explosives had been abandoned hastily by Irish Terrorists.

Three men who appeared in Leeds Police Court today on charges of possessing 20 pounds of gelignite refused to make a statement. They were James Morgan, 30, William Sheridan, 25, and John Patrick Jones, 32.

We Do Not Follow The Band-Waggon

When we established our price of 14 8/10c (plus tax) for FIRST GRADE "BLUE STAR", others followed with their third grade gasolines at the same price.

Here Is the Proof

Growing competition with the standard grades was the subject of warm discussion at the meeting which heard and accepted a suggestion from the companies that a third grade gasoline be put on sale by standard dealers to offset what was termed "the menace of increasing lower priced gas sales."

Extract from a report of the meeting of the Retail Gasoline and Automobile Dealers Association, Toronto Daily Star, June 9th.

DON'T BE CONFUSED BY SIMILARITY IN PRICE

Why use third grade gasoline when you can get GOOD RICH FIRST GRADE "BLUE STAR" at the same price?

"BLUE STAR" is rated in the same group with other high grade gasolines, so it isn't necessary to pay 17½c or 19½c a gallon (plus 8c tax). First grade "BLUE STAR" sells at 14 8/10c (plus tax.) Why pay more?

Test a tankful. Prove it for yourself. And don't forget the saving, up to 5c a gallon.

FIRST GRADE
"Blue Star" 14 8/10 c PLUS TAX

SECOND GRADE
NEW Major 11 8/10 c PLUS TAX

ESCAPES CELLS, IS CAPTURED

Police Officer Mystified as He Finds Cell Room Door and Cell Door Locked

Dundas, Ont., Aug. 2 (CP)—Charles Sturrock, who escaped from the police cells at the town hall last night, was captured after a chase by Constable Clifford Walker.

Sturrock had been arrested earlier by Chief Constable Earl Jack on a charge of vagrancy. Shortly after midnight, Walker was making out reports in the police office, when he heard the front door of the town hall open.

Investigating he saw Sturrock disappearing around the corner toward Hatt Street. He chased him and Sturrock stopped when he saw he was being overhauled.

Back at the town hall the officer was mystified to find the front door into the cell room locked and also the door on the iron cage where Sturrock had been a prisoner.

It is thought Sturrock picked the lock to open it and then locked it again. The officer then decided to take him to Hamilton, where he was locked in the police cells there.

Kingston Delegation Details Plans For Sewage Plant

Toronto, Aug. 2.—(CP)— Members of the Ontario Municipal Board today heard a Kingston delegation detail city plans for a $957,000 water purification and sewage disposal plant. Board officials at the end of the meeting said no application for approval had been made and the conference was to determine procedure to be followed in gaining the Board's approval.

"It was purely a private meeting with the Board and no application for the Board's approval was made," a Board spokesman said.

Dr. A. E. Berry, director of Sanitary engineering, met the same delegation last month and gave favorable consideration to preliminary plans for the plant. He said today he did not expect to meet the delegation today.

OBITUARY

LATE REV. W. D. CRAIG
(Shannonville)

Dignitaries and Ministers of the Bay of Quinte Conference of the United Church of Canada paid last reverent tribute to a fellow minister today when the last earthly rites were given the late Rev. W. D. Craig, B.A., minister of the Shannonville circuit, who succumbed suddenly at his home in the nearby village on Monday.

Members of the congregations of Shannonville, Salem, Melrose and Lonsdale churches, to whom the late minister was a beloved friend, filled the Shannonville United Church to capacity to pay last tribute to one they held dearly.

A solemn hush fell over the crowded auditorium as the cortege slowly wended its way to the front of the church, following a brief service at the late residence of the deceased conducted by the Rev. J. E. Beckel, Stirling, Secretary of the Conference and of the Belleville Presbytery, assisted by the Rev. R. R. Hinchey, Brooks, Alberta.

Mr. Beckel also officiated at the church service and was assisted by outstanding ministers of the Conference and district.

While sorrowing joint congregations sat in reverent silence, the Rev. A. L. Blanchard, Bloomfield, Past President of the Presbytery read the Scripture lesson.

"He rests from his labors and his works do follow him," was the text of the splendid address given by the Rev. R. T. Richards, Napanee, Past President of the Bay of Quinte Conference. The Rev. Enos Farnsworth, Belleville, also gave a brief dissertation while the Rev. Dr. James Semple, Belleville, chairman of the Conference Settlement Board led in prayer. Ministers of the district eighteen in number, attended in a body.

Attending in a full body, the choir of the church sang sweetly, offering appropriate music. A duet was sung by two members of the choir.

Following the service at the church, the body of the late Mr. Craig, was taken to Merivale, Ont., where interment was made.

Pallbearers, elders of the four churches of the circuit included Messrs. Ross Shetler, William King, James Sills, Eugene Badgeley, Arthur English and Harold McCullough.

Beautiful floral tributes paid colorful testimony to the high regard and esteem in which the late Mr. Craig was held not only in his own immediate district but in the far-flung sectors of the Conference.

HOG QUOTATIONS

Toronto, Aug. 2 (CP)—Continued downward trend was noted at bacon hog reporting markets today. At Peterborough dressed-weights dropped 25 cents and at London 50 cents.

Liveweights: Hull $8.

Dressedweights: Hull $10.70; Hamilton $11.25; Peterborough $10.25 plus transportation; Stratford $10.00 plus transportation; London $10.50 plus transportation.

ILL FROM MONOXIDE FUMES

Brantford, Ont., Aug. 2 (CP)—Frank Swance, Burford Hardware Merchant, was still unconscious today after being admitted to hospital here when overcome by carbon monoxide gas in his garage late last night.

Tom Rachar, a clerk at Swance's store, found him slumped over the front fender of his car. It was believed he started the engine in order to check some repairs he made and forgot to open the garage doors.

MISS M. MOYSE

Dr. David Pratt, Toronto brain specialist, was called to aid in treating the girl. He decided against an immediate operation to remove the bullet which lodged in the right back portion of the brain after causing lacerations and driving several small pieces of bone into the brain tissue.

Bullet Escaped Vital Parts

Physicians said there was a large powder burn on her right forehead as if the muzzle of the gun had been held close to her head. They added it was a "miracle" the bullet avoided the middle of the brain where the vital centres are located.

Bodies of the Prestridges, married a month to the day of the shooting, were released for burial Thursday after the post-morten examination.

Besides the stomach organs, Mennie took to Toronto a bullet from Prestridge's body and a pillow and a carpet which will be examined for bloodstains.

PREMIER MOVES

"I think parliament has dealt with all that is felt to be necessary at the present moment and the House can be assured that the country now is ready for an emergency."

Declaring that parliament should not take such a long recess in a "crisis perhaps graver than any we have known," Mr. Greenwood contended that:

'A Great Personage'

"It only needs one of the great personages in Europe suffering from a bad liver to learn that six German subjects had been shot in Danzig for the world to be at war in 24 hours."

Winston Churchill joined an opposition attack on the adjournment motion, declaring that "the situation in Europe is graver than at this time last year."

The wartime cabinet member, frequent critic of the government, said Germany had a great number of men under arms and that "all along the Polish border there are masses of troops and every preparation is being made for a speedy advance."

MAN IS HELD FOR NAPANEE POLICE

Held on a charge of theft, Hector Turpin, of Eastview, Ont., was arrested by Provincial Police in Belleville today and will be turned over to Provincial Constable Fred Barrett, Napanee, this afternoon. Turpin is alleged by police to have picked another man's pockets in a hotel near Napanee, last night, and stole $5.00. The charge of theft was preferred by Constable Barrett.

Windsor, Ont., Aug. 2 (CP)—With admission to hospital of a poliomyelitis victim from Sandwich East number of cases in the Windsor area today is six. The latest victim like three previous sufferers, showed signs of paralysis.

FURTHER PROTEST TO JAPAN

London, Aug. 2 (CP)—Prime Minister Chamberlain announced today that Sir Robert Craigie, Ambassador to Japan, had been instructed to make a "further vigorous protest" against the continuation of anti-British agitation in North China.

PRINCESS FOLLOWS PARENTS' FOOTSTEPS

Not to be outdone by her royal parents, Princess Margaret Rose is pictured here as she planted a tree during her visit to the Dartmouth naval college with the King and Queen. The royal family has now left for a vacation in Scotland at Balmoral Castle.

Mentioned As Lord Tweedsmuir's Successor

According to reports from England, the Duke of Devonshire's name has been prominently mentioned as a successor to Lord Tweedsmuir as governor-general of Canada. The Duke's father held the post from 1916-21. Lord Tweedsmuir assumed office in 1935, and it has been customary for governors-general to serve a five-year term of office.

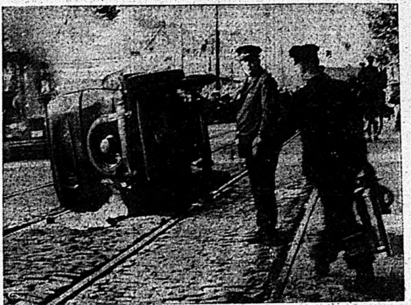
WINDSORS STROLL IN CANNES

The Duke and Duchess of Windsor, both appearing well, are pictured as they walked along the promenade here in Cannes, France. They are spending the summer in this resort. The Duke recently complained to authorities that many of the curious persisted in watching him and the Duchess as they went swimming in their pool near the Mediterranean only to receive the reply that nothing could be done. As a result the Duke had a canvas screen stretched along the shore in front of the swimming pool.

CANADIAN ACTOR ARRIVES IN HOLLYWOOD WITH BRIDE

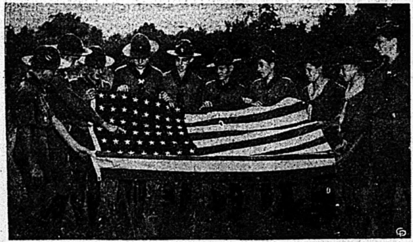
Raymond Massey angular-jawed Canadian actor, is shown here as he arrived in Hollywood with his bride of a fortnight to portray the role of Abraham Lincoln on the screen. Mary Howard, actress, who will play opposite Mr. Massey in the film, LEFT, greeted the actor and his bride upon their arrival in the film capital.

PICKETS BURN CAR DURING CLEVELAND RIOTS



This automobile, owned by a non-striker, was overturned and set on fire by pickets of the C.I.O. at the Fisher Body plant in Cleveland, when more than 2,000 strikers and non-strikers staged a riot. Police were forced to use tear gas and high pressure hose to stop the riot in which 45 persons were injured.

AMERICAN SCOUTS TO BE GUESTS AT CANADIAN SCOUT CAMP



Ten New York City Boy Scouts are en route to Camp Tamaracouta, Canadian Scout camp near Montreal, to spend two weeks as "exchange" campers. With them they took the American flag, with which they are shown, to be presented to their Canadian hosts.

Virginia Field, Douglas Fairbanks Jr., Basil Rathbone and Barbara O'Neil head the cast of Universal's exciting and romantic story "The Sun Never Sets," starting next at the Capitol Theatre.

GENERAL PURGED

Latest victim of Soviet/Russia's newest purge is General Gregor Stern, who has been relieved of his post as commander of the First Special Red Banner army in the Far East. General Stern was but one of 79 men, high in Soviet life, who have recently been stripped of their decorations and honors.

GETS OTTAWA POST

Dr. George D.W. Cameron, of the Connaught Laboratories, has been appointed chief of the Laboratory of Hygiene, Department of Pensions and National Health, according to a report from Ottawa.

LOTS OF PITCHER

'Biggest man in baseball' is a tag that's been carried around for quite a while by John A. Gee, above, pitcher with Syracuse Chiefs in the International League, who takes his altitudinous self to the major leagues at the end of the season after being purchased recently by Pittsburgh Pirates. Long John has attained a height of six feet nine and weighs over 200 pounds, in addition to which he has compiled an impressive record in the minors.

Beefing In One Column

"Why you thieving, no-good, porch-climbing....!!....!!" That, and a few other things, would seem to be the gist of the remarks Joe Cronin, manager of Boston Red Sox, is making to American League Umpire Quinn, after the latter had called a balk on the opposing pitcher and then changed his mind. Don't hit him, Joe!

FIREMAN CRUSHED TO DEATH

Buffalo, N.Y., Aug. 2 (AP)—Fireman George Mullarkey was crushed to death by a falling wall early today while fighting a fire which damaged a two-storey garage and storage house in Buffalo's Riverside section.

Britain Perfects Detector Device To Locate Subs

Under Ordinary Conditions Apparatus Can Hunt Out Enemy Subs and Then British Subs Can Fight Them

ANNOUNCED IN HOUSE

Lord Stanhope Tells House of Lords, Great Britain Has Consistently Pressed for Abolition of Armaments in Answer to Question

London, Aug. 3—(CP) — Great Britain today had concrete assurance that the Admiralty is prepared to cope with any new attempt to wage unrestricted submarine warfare.

Speaking in the House of Lords last night, Earl Stanhope, First Lord of the Admiralty, declared that secret detector apparatus had been perfected and "under ordinary conditions we can hunt out and fight submarines and can make certain of finding them." He expressed the opinion that no other power has "this apparatus or anything like it."

Lord Stanhope was replying to Lord Mottistone, Liberal, who asked the government to invite France the United States and Italy, signers with Britain of the 1921 Washington treaty—to make a statement on the abolition of submarines and pledge themselves not to use submarines against merchant ships. Lord Mottistone—who is General Jack Seely and commanded the Canadian cavalry in the Great War —added that these powers should also be sounded as to whether they would advocate total abolition of the submarine as a weapon in warfare.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Aug. 3—(CP)—A disturbance of moderate intensity is centred over Hudson Bay with a trough extending southward across the Lower Lake Region to the Mississippi Valley, while pressure is high over the western portions of Canada and the United States and off the Atlantic coast. The weather has been fair and moderately warm in the Prairie Provinces while thundershowers have occurred in many parts of Ontario and in northern districts of Quebec, but in the Maritime Provinces it has been generally fair with moderate temperature.

Lake Superior: Fresh west and northwest winds; partly cloudy; rather cool tonight. Friday—Moderate westerly winds; fair and warm.

Manitoba: Westerly winds; fair and warm today and Friday.

Saskatchewan and Alberta: Moderate variable winds; fair and warm today and Friday.

Why the Weather!

By Major A. H. Thiessen

Hot waves! Many countries have their spells of hot weather usually brought about by winds which have received special names, as, the "sirocco", a warm southerly or south-easterly wind of Italy, or the 'leveche', a hot, dry, southwest wind of Spain. Hot waves in this country may be brought about by (1) a high barometer area off the southeast coast of the United States, causing a continuous flow northward of warm air; (2) a stagnant condition of the air pressure system when the day's heating is not compensated by the night's cooling, and the heat just piles up; and (3) by descending air, warming as it lowers, occurring when a high pressure system stagnates for several days.

MILITARY MISSION TO MOSCOW IS ARRANGED

German Proposal on Danzig Problem Rumored Received in London

RECESS VOTE CARRIES

London Aug. 3 (CP)—Attacks on the government's insistence that parliament recess as usual during August and September, months which many observers believe may bring international tension, shifted today to the House of Lords during Foreign Affairs debate.

In a protest against the recess, Lord Davies, Liberal, said members of all parties shared the feeling that the government might make far-reaching decisions before Oct. 3, when parliament is scheduled to reassemble. He asked that the two Houses be consulted before such steps are taken.

A storm was raised in the House of Commons yesterday on the government's adjournment motion. Between 30 and 40 Conservatives refused to vote after Prime Minister Chamberlain made the question one of confidence in his government. He won by 250 to 132.

Delays Are Charged

Lord Davies said there were suspicions as to the government's real intentions in negotiating with Moscow for an Anglo-French-Soviet mutual assistance pact and charged that delays in reaching such an agreement were the result of British "dilatory tactics."

Meanwhile Mr. Chamberlain went ahead with plans for the military mission to Moscow.

With General Charles Huntziger, commander of French troops in the near east, in London as probable liaison officer, British and French general staffs arranged consultations on plans for their talks with Soviet military men.

It was expected the British and French missions would leave this weekend for Moscow, comparing notes en route. Each mission probably will include about 20 advisory experts on military and naval matters.

GUARDSMEN WITH TANKS WATCH IN STRIKE ZONE

Sixth Man Gashed in Clash of Strike Friends and 'Back to Work' Forces

MARTIAL LAW RULES

Green Mountain Dam, Colo., Aug. 3—(AP)—Colorado national guardsmen equipped with machine guns and two tanks were called in today to restore order in the Green Mountain Dam strike zone, scene of the two gun battles last night in which five men were shot and injured.

The sixth man was gashed on the head in one of the clashes between armed and deputized "back to work" forces and sympathizers with the strike called July 12 by five craft unions at the $4,000,000 reclamation bureau project.

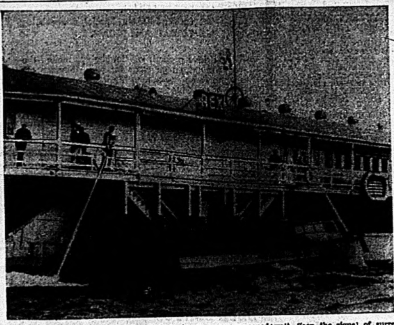
Truck Driver Killed as He Swerves To Avoid Bicyclist, Also Killed

Cornwall, Ont. Aug. 3—(AP)—Whether an inquest will be held into the deaths of Harold Wells, Morrisburg truck driver, and 13-year-old Wallace Pescod of Cornwall, killed in a highway accident last night, will be decided today when Coroner C. A. Stewart will consult with Crown Attorney J. G. Harkness.

Wells was killed when he swerved the big transport truck he was driving towards Montreal in a vain attempt to miss the Cornwall boy who rode suddenly onto the highway from a side lane.

The transport, heavily loaded with barrels of glucose, struck the cyclist a glancing blow and crossed the road, where the soft shoulder threw it out of control. An instant before the cab of the big truck was folded up by impact with a sturdy tree, Wells attempted to leap from the door. His skull was fractured. And the steering post pierced his body. Rescuers worked with hacksaws for two hours before his body could be removed from the wreckage.

Wallace Pescod was thrown to the pavement by the impact and died from a fractured skull in hospital an hour later.



A force of 250 law enforcement officers were beaten off by the use of firehose when they attempted to board the gambling ship Rex, anchored off Los Angeles. The six hundred patrons were marooned aboard the ship during the struggle for its possession. After being beaten off the law officers retired to a safe distance and sat down to wait. Soon the signal of surrender was flashed from the Rex. Members of the Rex's crew are shown here playing firehose on one of the police boats. —Phonephoto

Police Association Favors Centralized Police System

Chief Draper of Toronto States it Would Give Greater Efficiency

CRIME INCREASING

Ottawa, Aug. 3—(CP)—A centralized police system will be suggested to Prime Minister Mackenzie King by a delegation from the Police Association of Ontario, now in convention here.

Policing in Canada should be reorganized on a unified basis similar to that in England, Chief Constable D. C. Draper of Toronto told the convention yesterday in submitting the proposal. In England and Wales the various municipal and county police forces are all under control of the Home office, he pointed out. Providing greater efficiency and cohesion in police work.

"Our system of policing and our processes of law enforcement are faulty and in some respects out of date as compared with the modern aspects of organized crime," Toronto's Chief said. Efficient policing, he held, was really cheaper than keeping up numerous penal institutions, "which, I am sorry to say, cannot be expected to make the desired reforms."

Picton Boy Injured, Sits Down on Knife In Sack of Potatoes

Kingston, Ont., Aug. 3—(CP) — Lloyd Kleinsteuber got quite a surprise yesterday when he sat down on a bag of potatoes in the market square to relax.

He didn't relax long. A large knife was protruding from the sack, and Lloyd, a Picton lad, was given first aid at a nearby police station. He had the wound closed by a couple of stitches at hospital.

Found Dead in Shack

Simcoe, Ont., Aug. 3—(CP)—William John Powell, 72, year old farmer, was found dead in the small house where he lived alone, at Powell's Corners near Lynedoch. He apparently suffered a heart attack. He was found by Leon Powell a relative who lived nearby on the same farm.

Chief Coroner Dr. E. Zumpstein, Delhi, decided an inquest was not necessary.

WORK-SEEKING MEN AND WOMEN ASKED TO LEAVE

Ordered to Leave "On the Hoof, the Way They Came in" by Reeve Wilbur

FEAR DISORDERS

Delhi, Ont., Aug. 3—(CP)—More than 3,000 work-seeking men and women, who for the past week have taxed the resources of this centre of Western Ontario's rich tobacco belt, were ordered out of the town today by authorities who fear disorders and a possible outbreak of disease.

They were ordered to leave "on the hoof, the way they came in," by Reeve Albert Wilbur who said that if the three police officers in Delhi cannot cope with the situation he will ask to have additional Provincial Police Constables brought in. The Reeve charged that the existing situation is "terrible."

TWO ARE HELD FOR BANK HOLDUP

Police Refuse to Divulge the Name of One Taken in Custody

Bala, Ont., Aug. 3 (CP)—Police today held two men in custody as they investigated the hold-up and robbery of the Bala branch of the Royal Bank of Canada yesterday.

Edward Davis of Montreal was arrested soon after two gunmen escaped with $1,900 and a second man was taken into custody late last night. He was charged with vagrancy and police declined to disclose his name.

It was learned the second man had been held earlier but was released when Lloyd Porter, manager of the Bank, failed to identify him. Though almost penniless at that time, police said that when arrested the man had $100 in his possession. Davis carried about $1,200 when taken into custody.

Driver Rescued Through Hole in Roof of Truck Cab

Montreal, Aug. 3—(CP)—Nat Gilliland of Cornwall, Ont., was cut and bruised slightly yesterday when trapped in his truck after it crashed into a post and sideswiped several trees on the lakeshore road at nearby Calois.

Calois residents freed the truck-driver from the crumpled cabin by tearing a hole in the roof with crowbars. Gilliland, on his way to Cornwall when he lost control of the heavy truck, was treated on the scene by a physician.

MARJORIE MOYSE GIVEN CHANCE FOR RECOVERY

Delicate Brain Operation to Remove a Bullet Performed by Toronto Specialist

FOUND UNCONSCIOUS

Cobourg, Ont., Aug. 3—(CP) — Doctors gave Marjorie Moyse a chance for recovery today following a delicate brain operation last aftated by a bullet wound suffered specialist. The operation was necessitated bya bullet wound suffered in a shooting affray Tuesday in which the 23-year old woman's mother and step-father died.

Working through the bullet hole at the back of the women's head, allegedly inflicted by her step-father, the doctor removed 15 pieces of bullet and 12 pieces of bone from the brain tissue. Doctors say the chief danger is the possible development of pneumonia or meningitis. She is reported to be still in a "very serious condition."

Following the operation Miss Moyse appeared cheerful and conversed with physicians and relatives who were allowed to see her. Attendants said nothing was mentioned about the deaths of her mother and step-father.

Found unconscious in her burning home near Grafton, the woman told police before the operation she was shot when she resisted the advances of her step-father Thomas Prestridge, who died soon after being removed from the burning farmhouse.

Mrs. Prestridge died with her husband. As her body showed no signs of violence her vital stomach organs were taken to Toronto for analysis. Mr. Prestridge is believed to have died from a bullet-wound.

Funeral Today

Funeral services were held today for Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Prestridge. The bride and groom of a month were buried side by side in the Cobourg Union Cemetery.

Chief Coroner Dr. D. Rundle said no inquest will be held into the shooting of Prestridge until Miss Moyse's condition changes more definitely and Prof. Joslyn Rogers of Toronto completes his examination of Mrs. Prestridge's stomach.

FRAUD IS CHARGED

Ottawa, Aug. 3—(CP)—At the request of Brockville police, three men were arrested here last night and sent to Brockville to face charges of false pretences in connection with the sale of advertising space in a booklet.

Those arrested by local police were: Hepburn Chapman, 37; James R. Graham, [illegible]; and John Riley, 33, all of Ottawa. A fourth man was released for lack of positive identification.

Officers said Brockville citizens had complained to police there about activities of advertising salesmen, and the arrests followed descriptions telegraphed from Brockville.

FINANCE MINISTER NOT A CANDIDATE AT NEXT ELECTION

Hon. C. A. Dunning Writes Letter to P.E.I. Constituents on His Action

GOING TO EUROPE

Has No Plans for Future Expecting Task to Get Well

Ottawa, Aug. 3—(CP)—Finance Minister Dunning announced today he would not be a candidate in the next general election and said he had so advised his constituents in Queen's County, Prince Edward Island.

Mr. Dunning, who leaves shortly on a journey to Europe for his health, placed his resignation in the hands of Prime Minister Mackenzie King early this week, effective at the latter's convenience. Mr. Mackenzie King announced he had refused to accept the resignation.

No Plans For Future

Assured by physicians that he may expect complete recovery if he removes himself completely from official responsibilities and takes a long rest, Mr. Dunning, in a prepared statement, said: "I have no plans for the future except to de-

Would Have Sheriff Committed for Contempt

Vancouver, Aug. 3 (CP)—An application for committal for contempt of court of a sheriff for failing to execute a writ of eviction against Doukhobors in Southeastern British Columbia, and a defence claim that the eviction would result in bloodshed, will mark proceedings in Supreme Court here Monday.

In the meantime in the Doukhobor communities discussion is proceeding as to how community members may regain ownership of their mortgaged lands.

Between 3,000 and 4,000 Doukhobors are affected.

The Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada has made the application for contempt committal of Sheriff M. E. Harper of Nelson.

The property concerned, some 15,000 acres of Christian community of Universal Brotherhood holdings in the vicinity of Nelson, Grand Forks and Brilliant is under a $2,000,000 mortgage from the Sun Life Company. The mortgage was foreclosed earlier this year.

British Gov't Has 'Good Reasons' For Assurance

Growing Strength of British Nation is Indicated — Britain is Leader of Peace Front — Comradeship of Nations Centres About Great Britain

REASONS FOR OPTIMISM

Prime Minister Chamberlain Will Take Fishing Holiday in Scotland After Parliament Adjourns on Friday

Oban, Scotland, Aug. 3.—(CP)—Sir Thomas Inskip, Dominions Secretary, said in a speech today that war is unlikely and that the British Government has "very good reasons" for making such a statement.

His statement was made a few minutes after it was disclosed in London that Prime Minister Chamberlain was leaving tomorrow for a two weeks' vacation.

Mr. Chamberlain declared in the House of Commons yesterday that he could see nothing at present which might make it necessary for parliament to break its two months' recess which begins tomorrow.

Growing British Strength

Speaking at a fete at the home of Major Duncan MacCullum, prospective Conservative candidate for parliament, Sir Thomas said:

"You have witnessed and watched the growing strength of the nation. Scarcely a week passes without some new addition being made to improve our capacity to resist the dictators if it becomes necessary.

"Great Britain is the leader of the peace front, and it is around Great Britain that the strength of the comradeship of nations has been built."

These factors, he said, are reasons "why war is not likely".

Prime Minister to Take Vacation.

London, Aug. 3 (CP)—Prime Minister Chamberlain will go to Scotland for some fishing soon after parliament adjourns Friday.

He expected today to be away from from Whitehall for three weeks but it is dependent upon the general foreign situation.

London, Aug. 3 (CP)—Lord Snell, Labor leader, injected mirth into a House of Lords' Foreign Affairs debate today with these characterizations of Prime Minister Chamberlain and Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax:

Hitler 'Unqualified Horror', Mussolini 'More Endearing Than Hitler', Says Wells

Man of Letters Says World is Bored With Man Who Will 'End in Diseased-Soaked Ruins of a Slum'— Declares Catastrophe Well on Its Way While Education Seems Unable to Get Started — Soviet Russia 'Still Seems to be Ahead Rest of World in Practical Realization of complete Democratic Ideas — Chamberlain Called Essentially Ignorant, Narrow - Minded, Timid, Cunning and Vain'

London, Aug. 3—(CP)—H. G. Wells, gloomily surveying civilization in a new book published today, surmises that "the universe is bored with man" and that humanity, "which began in a cave, will end in the disease-soaked ruins of a slum."

The man of letters who popularized science and made history a best seller bases his pessimism on a conclusion that:

"New powers, inventions, contrivances and methods are not the unqualified enrichment of normal life that we had expected....they are proving dangerous and devastating in our eager but unprepared hands."

In a 330-page volume called "The Fate of Homo Sapiens" Wells makes these points:

1. Science and invention have altered the material environment of humanity;

2. The disruptive, driving force of bored and unemployed young men which must find an outlet probably will shatter human life altogether under the new conditions;

3. The present mental organization of our species is insufficient to control the existing situation.

Somewhat glumly the writer concludes, however, that the salvage of mankind is "still just possible" by a "wilful and strenuous adaptation by re-education of our species now—forthwith" to fit it for a kind of universal democracy. This education would be along a more international and more widely understanding scale than ever yet has been conceived.

Wells added that "today catastrophe is well on its way....but education seems still unable to get started."

He dealt in this fashion with European leaders:

Hitler—An "unqualified horror."

Mussolini—"Vain, rhetorical and immediately energetic....often, as school boys say, a bit of an ass—which is much more endearing" (than Hitler).

Chamberlain—"Essentially ignorant, narrow-minded, subconsciously timid, cunning and inordinately vain."

Stalin—Not to 'overwhelming intelligence," but "honest, strong and human."

He called Japan's rulers "Nazis without a Hitler" and asserted that Soviet Russia "still seems to be ahead of the rest of the world in its practical realization of the complete democratic idea."

NEWS ODDITIES AND BRIEFS

CANADA BACKS BRITAIN

San Francisco, Aug. 3 (AP)—Premier T. D. Pattullo of British Columbia said yesterday Canada would back Britain "to the last man and to the last pound of currency" if Great Britain went to war.

"I would have hesitated to have made such a statement two years ago," Mr. Pattullo said in an interview. "Now I say it with emphasis."

1,300 Airplanes to Prove Britain is Prepared

Biggest Air Manoeuvres in History Staged Next Week

London, Aug. 3 (CP)—Great Britain will stage next week the biggest Air Force manoeuvres in its history to show the force of Prime Minister Chamberlain's announcement that the nation "is ready for an emergency."

Royal Air Force planes numbering 1,300 will participate in the manoeuvres which will last from Monday morning to Thursday evening. The largest number of craft engaged in manoeuvres previously was in 1938 when 900 took part. The chief aim is to prove the efficiency of land and air defence against aerial attack.

The manoeuvres will be held in the area south and east of a line drawn between Withernsea, Macclesfield and Droitwich in Worcestershire, to Salisbury and Bournemouth, near Southampton.

About 500 of the 800 craft in the "defence" force will be fighting planes. Fifty Scout planes will participate.

The land forces will comprise units which have specialized in scouting operations, barroon barrage units, Auxiliary Air Force and Contingents Observation Corps.

The bombing "raids" will be scattered over the defence area in order to give the land forces the most varied possible opportunities to obtain practical experience. The attacking forces will include 500 bombing planes.

AIR FORCE BAND TO COMPETE AT TORONTO

Under the leadership of Flight Sergeant Tommy Cooper, The Royal Canadian Air Force band from the Trenton base will again take part in the band competition to be held at the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto, on August 31st.

Last year the 25-piece band entered in Class B competition and made an excellent showing. This year the band will be entered in the Class A. competition which calls for a 36 piece band. Regular practices are now being carried on for the event.

DARKENED SPEED BOAT SCARES OTHER CRAFT

An unlighted speed boat rocketted through the darkness over the choppy waters of the outer harbor last evening narrowly missing other small craft and leaving a dangerous wash in its wake. Small sailboats and canoes yawed and tipped under the swell while considerable water was shipped by some from the heavy waves. Protests against the use of faster boats in the bay without lights after darkness has been lodged with Harbormaster Jos. Waddell.

THRESHING HALTED AS RAIN PATTERS DOWN

Farmers of the district halted threshing operations in wet fields this morning, but the respite from work was a welcome one, and few murmurs against the stoppage of work were heard. As yet, in spite of the week-end rains, not sufficient moisture has been received to take care of the later season crops, and the thirsty land has absorbed the rain like a blotter, according to officials. Pastures have lately shown wonderful growth, and milk production is again headed toward normal. About two days' steady rain would put everything in shape', it was stated.

POULTRY HOUSE ROOF RENEWED NEXT WEEK

In line with other extensive repairs and alterations to buildings on the fair grounds authorized by the Agricultural Society, the placement of a new roof on the poultry house will be commenced next week, it is reported. Other repair work on this building will make it one of the best show places in the central district this year.

A heavy entry list of fowl for this season's fair is already evident, it is reported by W. J. Holley, first vice-president, who has for many years worked toward the constant improvement and betterment of this exhibit. Many new out of town entries are expected, and a fine class of fowl will be shown.

"This year the old, dependable Barred Rocks, White Leghorns and other bred-to-lay varieties have become more popular among breeders. A few years ago Hampshire Reds and the fancier breeds were all the rage. But these have died out and the older and better known breeds are making a better stand, though the show, as it has in the past, will exhibit just about all the breeds there are", stated Mr. Holley.

26-POUND TROUT CAUGHT IN ALGONQUIN

Cool lakes of Algonquin Park to which many of the district have journeyed this season for their vacation are upholding their reputation for big fish. This week Ralph Weese, local taxidermist, is in receipt of a 26-pound lake trout caught in Lake Opeongo by Jack Macklin, formerly connected with a motor sales company in this city now resident of Niagara district.

COUNTS STEPS ON BET IN CITY HALL FLIGHT

The stout, well dressed gentleman, apparently a stranger in town, carefully mounted the stairs of the city hall this morning, and from the start, after peering down to see that all was in readiness, commenced the slow descent of the steps, one by one.

'One-two-three-four- five . . ." he carefully counted each step as completed.

A second stranger stood at the foot of the stairs, nodding his head as each count was recorded.

Twenty-one . . .twenty-two . . twenty-three . . .twenty-four."

"Twenty-four steps, right. There are twenty-four steps in the main section of the city hall stars.

"Right", agreed the man who had watched.

"We were just wondering, and had a little bet on the side, regarding the number of steps there were in those stairs", explained one of the strangers to the hovering reporter.

Precipitation Here Higher Than Average

During 1938 more rain but less snow fell on Trenton than Belleville, according to the annual statistics report of the Ontario Department of Agriculture. Trenton and Belleville were the only two recording stations reporting the weather for the whole year in Hastings County.

In Belleville 23.67 inches of rain fell in 119 days. In Trenton the number of inches amounted to 23.79 in only 88 days.

The snowfall showed Trenton had the heaviest amount, as 54.8 inches fell in 26 days, while 57.9 fell in Belleville in 51 days. The average for the Province was 25.61 inches of rain in 92 days, and 67.6 inches of snow in 41 days.

RECORD PINE TREE GROWN IN COUNTY

A pine tree ranking in size with the largest ever produced in this county during the busy days of commercial lumbering has been purchased by G. W. Arnott, ex-Reeve of Frankford from Max Holden, Sidney Township.

Measuring 30 inches in diameter and 70 feet in length, lacking but a few inches, the solid timber yielded three 16-foot logs one 12-foot log; two 10-foot and an eight and a six foot log.

34th BATTERY LEAVES FOR CAMP THIS WEEK

Crack artillery unit of this district, the 34th Field Battery, Royal Canadian Artillery leave for Petawawa this week where they will undergo eight days competitive drills in an effort to retain the trophies won last year, and if possible add to their already imposing array of prizes.

Thirty-five members all ranks will comprise the unit which will be under the command of Captain Ralph Bird, acting O.C. of the battery during Major J. H. McLeod's absence.

ERRATIC BIKE RIDERS WARNED BY BOARD

Speeding and erratic bicycle drivers on Victoria Park have come under the ban of members of the City Parks Board and warning has been issued by the Board that prosecutions may result following further complaints on the part of citizens and mothers of small children. Several narrow escapes have lately been reported due to the carelessness of the riders who have used the roads and paths on the parks speedways.

PRICES STEADY ON CITY MARKET

Raspberries Plentiful With No Marked Change in Price

Despite a threat of rain, a fairly good offering of market produce was available today. Prices were steady with little or no change from early-week quotations.

Home-grown tomatoes in ever-increasing quantities were apparent with berry-box lots down to ten cents the box and eleven quart baskets selling at seventy cents.

Raspbeddies were plentiful but marked no change in price. Reds were offered at ten cents the box and blues at three for twenty-five cents with a slight reduction for crate-lots.

Sweet corn was quoted at fifteen cents the dozen for good quality ears, while potatoes were firm at thirty and thirty-five cents the peck according to size and quality. Beets, onions, carrots and other new vegetables fresh from the farms and gardens of the district sold in bunch lots at five cents each.

A few eggs were offered at twenty-five cents the dozen for extra quality stock but chickens were scarce with a few late broilers offered at seventy-five cents the pair.

Whitefish and trout were available at seventeen and twenty cents the pound respectively.

Fame of Belleville's Cats Has Reached All Parts of World

The fame of Belleville's now famous cats and their guard duties during last year's British Empire Cheese Exhibition has apparently reached all parts of the world.

A cartoon clipped from the Rochdale Lake, England, daily carries a picture of a handsome black cat standing guard over a large cheese.

The cartoon is captioned "Cat Guards", while below is the inscription, "specially trained cats have been put on guard of a cheese exhibition in Belleville, Ontario, to protect the exhibits from rats and mice."

The cartoon was received in a letter from a friend of Mrs. Carl Lundberg, 149 West Bridge Street.

Youths in Possession of Stolen Candy

Three local youths of teen-age were apprehended by Constables Evans and Taylor as they emerged from the gangway leading into the rear of Pauley's Drug Store on Front Street last evening and later found to be in possession of candies and other minor articles, allegedly stolen from Pauley's Drug Store.

P. C. Evans observed the trio of youths sneak down the alleyway shortly after 10.00 p.m. The officer signalled P. C. Taylor and together they cautiously followed the youths to later arrest them as they were emerging from the gangway.

According to statements given out by Acting Chief Arthur Harman today one of the lads is said to have admitted entering Pauley's Drug Store through a side door and stealing the candy and other articles, while George Pauley, the proprietor, was engaged waiting upon a customer. When the lad joined his companions in the alleyway the officers made their arrest.

The lads will appear in a subsequent Juvenile Court, police stated this morning, after releasing them into the custody of their parents.

PANTS THIEF MAKES HIS HAUL

Passes Window, Sees Trousers and New Braces and Attaches Himself to Them

A member of the light-fingered fraternity, who specializes in the deft but sure removal of gentlemen's trousers, when hung in convenient places while not in use, is at large in the city.

At least so one gentleman discovered the other day much to his own chagrin and his wife's surprise.

It appears that the gentleman in question, who works in a place, where the heat is one of the major problems, removes the covering of his lower appendages when arriving at work and dons a pair of overalls.

He hung his 'walking' trousers on a nail in the wall near a window, and promptly forgot about them. When the day's toil was o'er, he removed the cool, overalls and clad in that raiment known to the trade as a 'union suit' strolled to where he had hung his trousers that morning.

But no pants greeted him. They had disappeared, and none of the gentleman's colleagues knew anything about the mystery.

Seventy cents in coin of the realm, that lay in one of the pockets also went the way of the trousers. It appears that a wandering transient, strolling past the window, perhaps noticed the trousers hanging conveniently in sight, and feeling gingerly of the south side of his own garments, no doubt frayed by continual wear and tear, decided to appropriate the pants. A handkerchief identified by the pantless one as his own, lay in some bushes nearby.

However, the luckless one was forced to go home clad in his overalls, but the explanation offered friend wife will never be known. The true facts of the case are published above, and even the threat of the family rolling pin has not as yet forced the trouserless gent to change his story.

Pig Born With Trunk Like Elephant's Attached to Forehead

Freak Animal Born on Tyendinaga Farm Lives But Short Time — Body Is Normal

A freak of nature arrived on the farm of Mr. C. L. Goodman, 6th Concession, Tyendinaga, Wednesday one little pig of a litter of six, had a perfect body of a pig but just one ear and a piece of loose skin where the other ear should be, the nose came to a point with no nostril, large eyes which were joined together and a trunk with an opening at the end resembling an elephant's trunk started at the forehead and came down over the nose and mouth —the pig was white with no hair on the body but two claws from each foot. It lived only a short time. The rest of the litter are normal pigs.

Police Blotter

Highway bandits broke and entered Fitzgerald's service station at Milltown and stole a quantity of gasoline some time last night, Provincial Police were advised today.

Sergeant H. C. Thompson, O.P.P., investigated and was of the opinion that a series of circumstances surrounded the breakin. "A 1935 Buick sedan, the property of Mr. Welter, Maynooth, was stolen last night and later it was found wrecked near Westbrook, west of Kingston. We are of the opinion that the persons to have stolen Mr. Welter's car were also responsible for the break-in and theft of gasoline at Milltown", intimated Sergeant Thompson as he added two men were seen fleeing the wrecked motor car at Westbrook.

Arrested at Kingston on a charge of the theft of a motor car, Lloyd Rennick, Baillieboro, was found in possession of a stolen car yesterday, Provincial Police revealed today. The car was stolen fom Baillieboro. Renpick will be returned to Peterboro for trial today.

City police were informed last night that a sign, erected upon Devault's grocery store West Bridge St., had been torn down. P. C. Wright investigated and later ascertained the name of the party responsible. Charges of the wilful destruction of property are pending police revealed today.

BAILEY FAMILY HOLDS REUNION

Family Next Year Will Gather at Crowe Lake Near Marmora

Stirling, Ont., Aug. 3 (Special) — Fifty guests representing Belleville, Marmora, Stirling, Toronto and Kirkland Lake were present for the Bailey annual family picnic held on July 27th at Crescent Beach Park, Oak Lake. The President of the organization, Mrs. W. J. Pack of Marmora presided over the business part of the gathering which took place directly after dinner. It was decided that the picnic for 1940 would be held at Glen Allan Park, Crowe Lake. Miss Evelyn Bailey Secretary-treasurer presented a complete report and a summary of the deaths that had taken place since the picnic of 1938 was given by the president and included late James Bailey, Belleville; Clare J. Archer and Mrs. Geo. Belshaw. A letter expressing regret in not being able to attend the function was sent by Mrs. S. Dack, Toronto and read to the gathering.

Prizes Awarded

The prize for the oldest member present went to Mrs. B. Lough of Marmora and the youngest member present was Keith Clancy son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Clancy. The most recent married couple present was Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Bailey of Kirkland Lake, who also won the prize for coming the greatest distance. The largest family present was that of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Heath and the youngest grandmother was Mrs. M. Beckett. Mrs. B. Lough won the prize for having the largest number of grandchildren. Mr. Allen Bailey was awarded a prize for having a birthday closest to the day of the picnic. Among the special events of entertainment were a clothespin race won by Mr. Geo. Belshaw, drinking contest and other events of interest. The day was spent in bathing, playing ball and pitching horseshoes.

MILITARY MISSION

Government circles continued hopeful for an agreement soon on a definition of "indirect aggression" which still stands in the way of a British-French-Russian mutual assistance pact. They took a hopeful view of a long talk yesterday by the conferees at Moscow.

'Watch-Dog' Session Proposed

After House of Commons debate yesterday Mr. Chamberlain won a vote of confidence, 250 to 132. "Anti-appeasement" members—including a group of Conservatives—had sought to have the House reassemble Aug. 21 for a one-day "watch dog" session. Mr. Chamberlain insisted the recess, beginning tomorrow, should last until Oct. 3 and made the issue a test of confidence.

Typical of reaction in circles opposed to any recess was an editorial in the Daily Mirror (Independent) asking why "so many members of parliament of all parties" are "amazed at the levity and arrogance that dismisses them till Oct. 3."

The newspaper then answered its own query:

"Because it was precisely at this time a year ago that Hitler began his campaign against Czecho-Slovakia—now extinct....

Dictators Like 'Holidays'

"Because it is perfectly well known that dictators prefer our holiday seasons....for one of their lightning thrusts."

The mirror asserted that "in a fortnight's time Germans will again have 2,000,000 men under arms......in plain words, a new blackmail offensive is planned and nearly ready."

On the other hand the Daily Mail (Ind.) said:

"The most encouraging message of the nation in many a day is the statement by the Prime Minister that the 'country is now ready for an emergency.' It is a complete answer to the demands of the Socialists and Liberals for an earlier reassembly of parliament. To keep parliament in a practically perpetual session, as the Socialists urge, would be a concession of victory to Britain's ill-wishers in the war of nerves."

Rumor of German Proposal

In parliamentary circles rumors said a German proposal had been received in London for discussion of the Danzig problem and possibly to evolve a new international agreement affecting eastern Europe. It was even rumored that a note had been sent to London by Germany suggesting a meeting of representatives of France, Italy, Poland and Germany to discuss Danzig, with Britain participating as an observer.

Although British official quarters denied any such note had been received, some in parliamentary circles pointed out that recent Berlin dispatches indicated Foreign Minister Joachim Ribbentrop would be willing to cooperate in efforts to stabilize the eastern European situation if Danzig were returned to the Reich.

"What are you thinking, dear?"

"That I'll mow you down if you don't get me a Sweet Cap!"

SWEET CAPORAL CIGARETTES

Swing in Industry To East Says Chadlies

Morrisburg, Ont., Aug. 3—(CP) — In industrial development, "the swing is away from Niagara to Eastern Ontario', George H. Challies, Conservative Member of the Legislature for Dundas-Grenville, told a public meeting here last night.

Mr. Challies traced the industrial growth of the Niagara Peninsula to development of hydro-electric power at Niagara Falls, and said that in Eastern Ontario there had been an increase lately in the supply of power from the Gatineau.

The meeting was called for a discussion of means to further industrial development of Morrisburg.

WINNER FAILS TO ANSWER NAME

Freeman Gardner of this district is shy fifty dollars today by virtue of his non-appearance at the Capitol Theatre last night, where his name was drawn in the first "Foto-Nite", held here.

Four amateur acts entertained a capacity house while rules of the "Foto Nite" shows were explained by P. Barnes, originator of the project.

The fifty dollars posted by the theatre management for the purchase of the photograph of the lucky winner, will be included in next week's prize to which will be added fifteen dollars.

RAIDERS CAN'T DESTROY GREAT CITIES SAYS GENERAL WEISS

Paris, Aug. 3 —(AP) — General Pierre T. Weiss, who holds a keypost in France's Air Ministry, considers it unlikely that wartime air raiders would be able to wipe out great cities.

"The idea that cities like Paris and London might be wiped out from the air," General Weiss said, "is built on false impressions. A great deal of damage could be done, but it would not reach anything like such disastrous proportions."

General Weiss said it would take wave on wave of undisturbed aerial operations over a considerable period of time to come any where near wiping out a great city.

The Stars Say—

For Friday, August 4

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

A MEMORABLE DAY, with much of outstanding significance in the social, business and romantic life is forecast from the interesting chain of planetary configurations. There may be much turmoil and turbulence in affairs, but this may be incident to social, domestic or other private functions, with the possibility of courtship, marriage or other highly romantic experience. Extravagance or excessive indulgence may exact penalties, even to the point of perilous litigation. Be moderate.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year of much excitement and liveliness, with probable high adventure and enjoyment in the social or romantic affairs. Marriage, courtship or other festive occasion may urge to extravagance or indulgence.

A child born on this day may have a remarkable makeup, both in its business, social and intellectual capacity. It will be original, profound, and exceedingly active and energetic.

80,000 SCIENTISTS IN 'FIFTH LINE' DEFENCE

London, Aug. 3—(CP)— Britain's fifth line of defence—80,000 strong—stands ready to man laboratory work benches and offer technical advice in case of emergency.

Since last January scientists and technicians, men and women, have been enrolling quietly in the latest voluntary defence organization, a reserve the public scarcely will notice even in the event of war.

Authorities regard the first line defence the armed forces, the second supply services, the third civilian defence groups, the fourth agriculture and the fifth technical reserves.

SENATOR AND MRS. GRAHAM .

Brockville, Ont., Aug. 3—(CP) — Senator George P. Graham and Mrs. Graham yesterday celebrated their 57th wedding anniversary in their usual way—by playing a round of golf at a local club.

Mrs. Graham, as usual, won the match.

AT THE McCARTHY

"The Johnson Family"

In addition to a splendid screen program, The Johnson Family, six talented vaudeville artists, are now appearing on the stage of the McCarthy Theatre. The Johnson Family present a variety show of musical and comedy entertainment that appeals to young and old, and Belleville and vicinity folk will find it one of the finest presentations ever offered on any vaudeville stage that they have ever been privileged to see. Each member plays two or more musical instruments and the entire stage performance in the manner that these vaudeville performers present their entire show, will be the talk of Belleville. George O'Brien, presenting new screen adventures in his latest outdoor story, "Border G-Man," also Leon Errol in a comedy hit entitled "Ring Madness" and a Walt Disney technicolor Mickey Mouse Cartoon are shown in addition to the stage show.

AT THE BELLE

"Some Like It Hot"

With Bob Hope and Shirley Ross dispensing comedy and nonsticky sentiment, and Gene Krupa, "king of the hide-beaters," making his motion picture starring debut, "Some Like It Hot," Paramount's clever offering to the gods of swing and comedy is now on the Belle screen.

The narrative of the picture is as streamlined and up-to-the-minute as swing itself. The lantern-jawed comedian is cast as a spell-binder, a fellow who makes his way in the world by out-talking everybody. He talks himself into a difficult situation when he tries to promote a top spot for his act and Krupa's torrid drum-beating.

Then he meets Miss Ross and she is so sorry for him that she comes across with her diamond for hocking purposes. Bob's supposed to go ahead and put on his own act with the money, but somehow he can't make the numbered cubes act natural. He loses everything—including lovely Shirley—and then starts to vindicate himself. He does—only to find that things are in a worse muddle than ever.

When it comes to swingy new tunes, this picture has them. They are "Some Like It Hot" and "The Lady's In Love With You." Krupa and his boys really get into the groove on the former, and Bob and Shirley live up to their reputations when they sing the latter.

Also featured in the cast of "Some Like It Hot" are Una Merkel and Rufe Davis. Direction was by George Archainbaud, of "Thanks for the Memory" fame.

"Dead End Kids"

The story is also unusual in that it includes as a foil for the boisterous youngsters an adult character who is in effect just such a kid grown much older, much wiser and much tougher. This character is played by Stanley Fields. The other leading roles are taken by Margaret Lindsay, Ronald Reagan, Grant Mitchell and Frankie Burke, the erstwhile Cagney impersonator being in this instance added to the "Dead End" gang.

In a series of absorbing sequences which range from the luridly melodramatic to the hilariously humorous, the picture tells of the regeneration of the thuggish racketeer played by Fields as a result of the sympathy aroused in him by the tough but essentially good inmates of a shelter home for boys.

The boys, the leaders among who are depicted by the "Dead Enders," are just such kids as Fields realizes he was himself as a youngster. They are half-starved and brutally treated and eventually they revolt against their intolerable lot.

Field's original interest in the shelter home has been that of a racketeer who has just come across something from which he can make some money but it hasn't taken long for the boys to arouse in him a rough but genuine paternal interest. And he proves this effectively when he voluntarily surrenders himself for a prison term just so that he can help in defending and exonerating the boys from the consequences of their revolt.

"For Your Convenience," a novel and entertaining film in Technicolor, will be presented on the same program.

REGATTA RUMBLINGS

It won't be long now.

Only a few days stand between one of the finest regattas ever held in Eastern Ontario and an anticipatory public.

In a beautiful natural amphitheatre below beautiful Massassaga Park, scene of many a historic picnic, the finest speedboats on the North American continent will vie for supremacy on Monday. Entries are still coming in and present indications point to one of the best attended meets in years.

Vice-Commodore Lloyd Hicks and his gallant crew laid out the course the other day, buoys are already in position, some of the boats are already here and everything is practically ready.

Outstanding in the fast craft that will be here on Monday is the Canadian Gold Cup contender "Miss Canada 111" owned and driven by Hargid Wilson, Ingersoll.... The trim squat flier has done well over one hundred miles in test runs and her owner will race her against the greatest international speedboats in competition in the famous Gold Cup Races in Detroit this year....

While "Miss Canada 111" is not of sufficient horse power to compete in the Harmsworth Trophy races, Wilson says "if we cop that Gold Cup this year, we will be in there with another boat next year, and give that Harmsworth mug a taste of Canadian hospitality for a change."

"Miss Canada 111" is a flat-bottomed boat with a middle fin for smooth balance. In the water she looks like a round-bottomed boat because of a peculiar bottom paint job which provides an optical illusion when she races....

Once this speedboat racing gets into the blood you won't get it out.. A wire received from Jackie "Pops" Cooper, Missourian world's title holder over a measured miles for 225 cubic inchers, states that the silver-haired grandpappy of the waterlanes is bringing an outboard job with him in addition to his famous "Tops 111".... He says he is going out there among the young fellows and if that rear-action kicker of his does not throw spray in the faces of the saucy young cockerels who drive outboards, then he'll do a fan-dance down Front Street that will make Sally Rand look like an amateur....

Four softball squads, Shell-Oil, and Corbys of Belleville, Mountain View of Prince Edward and the Wallbridge team of Sidney will strive for the beautiful Rotary Club silver trophy in the mushball round robin on Monday....However we would respectively suggest to genial Joe Shortt, chairman of the sports committee, that the Belleville teams be drawn against each other in the first round, and so give one of the district squads a chance at the trophy..Not that the district teams are not as good as the city-slickers—but just in case....

Doc Jimmy Boyd of Hamilton, who when he is not yanking out appendixes, is jerking on the throttle of his crack 225 cubic-inch speedster, wired his entry yesterday .... Doc added that he is bringing two extra boats and will race all three.

Personal Loans

When financial problems arise through sickness, unforeseen emergencies and similar causes, a personal loan with the bank often presents an immediate and sensible solution. Such a loan, well within the borrower's ability to repay, may also be used on occasion to consolidate a number of small bothersome debts, to the borrower's greater peace of mind.

Your local manager welcomes enquiries from responsible men and women, able to repay out of income — in convenient monthly instalments if necessary — and will be glad to explain the terms and conditions under which these loans are made.

THIS PAST QUARTER OF A CENTURY

A quarter of a century ago the world was at war. Twenty-five years ago tomorrow Britain entered the conflict against Germany on the German invasion of Belgian neutrality. Four and more years of war took a toll of millions of men, set at work new ideas which are still bearing fruit, shook up the nations, upset thrones and empires and released millions upon millions of warriors to enter civil jobs again, while a large population of youth who had not yet reached the age of arms was waiting for work.

Into the quarter of a century was poured a wealth of blood and ideals never so shed on any war's battlefields in all time, there went pain and suffering, mourning and grief that slowly gives way to sorrow. There were disappointments. In short there is set loose what observers call a creation of man's mistakes and errors which has threatened civilization's existence.

The end is not yet. Statesmen are carrying heavy burdens as they try to steer the overweighted and overcrowded and heavy ship of complete world rearmament into port without wreckage. Can they do it? It is man's hope that they may succeed and by this means alone save civilization.

Twenty-five years ago nations knew not what war meant, as they know today. Dare the dictators launch war? If they dare not, will they be able to keep the world in a state of unrest for years to come with threats of broken peace? It might be that many in time would come to look upon such a condition as the latter as worse than even war, though war is to be shunned by every means possible. How long can the race of arms against arms go on without someone yielding or snapping or breaking down under the strain with possible international conflict at the end?

It has been a hard quarter of a century for those of every age, the old, whose latter years have been subject to unrest, to the middle-aged who have not seen the fruition of their hopes, to the younger who have come upon the world scene and discovered little or no place for themselves.

It has been a testing time. The wonder is that there have been men great enough to handle affairs so that there has not been a world explosion. It is a tribute to the people of the nations that they have held their heads though they have been bearing untold burdens. They have been slow to blame those whom they might think responsible.

No one dare predict definitely what is ahead. Such elemental forces are organized that there is danger enough. There is this to be said so far a vast explosion has been avoided. If this could go on with gradual general reduction in armaments, hopes would be bright. But many feel that human motives behind present conditions must be changed, that the stress must be laid on other things than what the totalitarian nations have stressed. There seemingly is a desire for peace among people generally, but the organized forces of nations are still dynamite in their threat.

Has the present rearmament stage brought near a stalemate which will ultimately cause the collapse of armaments? Who knows?

At the dawn of another quarter of a century, the world still hopes and can hope. It had vast armies on its hands in 1914 but they were a mere half of those of today

There is a hope that the might and weight of these forces will start to bend the nations towards co-operation and towards international friendship. Today more and more the economic cloud is appearing over the horizons of dictator states. Trade is a powerful agency and may be the ultimate test of the power of the democracies against the regimented states which have forced the peace loving nations to rearm.

There is this also to be said—the world has known war and dreads a future war. That may be the source of safety.

The world wants security.

DO NOT FORGET THE BEACHES

Quinte Beaches are now showing what can be accomplished. It is the height of the holiday season, which shows what is yet needed to bring the beaches project to its fulfilment.

In the days of construction, the call for material from excavations and other filling material is heard. To provide this to the beach is one way of helping the project, so that whereas hundreds visit the beaches daily now, the time will come when the daily attendance may run into thousands ,when the project is more fully realized.

Co-operation at this time will speed up the work of making the beach and park scheme what it ought to be and will leave it in the autumn far advanced over present conditions.

IN THE FACE OF NATION-WIDE UNEMPLOYMENT and the reported overcrowding of professions, it seems strange that so few of the youth of today in Canada are taking up agriculture as a profession. With the land as the basic industry of the world since time began the ancient and honorable profession of farming with its many modern embellishments would seem to merit a stronger call for the youth than the bright lights, hall bedrooms, and limitations of the cities.

x

With this in mind it is a pleasure to learn that youth is turning its attention more and more to the profession of farming in its many and scientific phases, especially in the United States. There the government encourages the youth of the land to a close study of the profession of agriculture. This was well illustrated by the annual conventions held in Chicago by what is known as the 4-H Clubs, the 4-H meaning Head, Heart, Hands and Health.

x

An interesting story of the work of the 4-H Clubs appears in the July 29th issue of Liberty magazine from the pen of Edward Doherty. The Seventeenth National 4-H Club Congress was held in Chicago last November in connection with the International Livestock Exposition, and was attended by 3,000 boys and girls champions of their districts. and they brought with them livestock they had raised as well as samples of field crops.

x

After a week of judging and entertainment the young farmers left with blue ribbons and prizes valued at over one hundred thousand dollars.

x

One 18-year-old boy living on a 160-acre Oklahoma farm was credited with completing 54 varied agriculture projects from which he made a profit of $1998.

x

Katherine Sire, 18, lives on a 1500-acre farm in Montana. Her specialty is clothing, food preparation and preservation, room improvement and handicraft. Her work was valued at $2,252.55.

x

Irene Brown, 14 years old of Aledo, Illinois, was the outstanding sensation of the Congress, her steer, Mercer II, Aberdeen Angus, being chosen grand champion of the livestock show. Irene bought the steer January 1, 1938 for $60, 550 pounds. Fed on corn and oats and clover hay, Mercer II became prize beef and won blue ribbons at the local fairs, culminating his triumphs at Chicago where he won the high bid of $3.35 per pound for the 1,130 pounds of him, bringing Irene the handsome sum of $3,785.50 for her work, in addition to $800 in prizes.

There were many other notable prizewinners for outstanding achievements on the farm, proving that no profession could be more fascinating or worth while—proving above all else that it pays to interest the youth brought up on the farms in the grandest of all professions.

x

Each member of a 4-H Club takes the pledge: "I PLEDGE MY HEAD TO CLEARER THINKING, MY HEART TO GREATER LOYALTY, MY HANDS TO LARGER SERVICE, AND MY HEALTH TO BETTER LIVING . . . . FOR MY CLUB, MY COMMUNITY, AND MY COUNTRY."

x

Canada has made a start toward the general direction of interesting youth in the profession of better farming, and it would seem that we can study with profit the various organizations in the United States, such as 4-H Clubs with the idea of making the farm profession one of the most interesting of all professions for the Canadian youth.

x

The 4-H Clubs were started thirty years ago, and over 7,000,000 men and women have been trained in them. It is interesting to know that more than 280,000 head of livestock is owned by 4-H members. It is estimated that this year $250,000,000 worth of crops and cattle will be produced. An all-time record in canning was achieved by the girls of the 4-H Clubs last year with 8,200,000 jars of food. Membership this year will, it is estimated, reach 1,500,000.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

Treatment of Obstinate Cases of Athletes' Foot

I had the opportunity some years ago of visiting the orthopedic clinic of the Massachusetts General Hospital, Boston, and was interested to find that about 80 per cent of the patients each morning came because of their feet. Prolonged standing the use of ill-fitting shoes, infection of teeth and tonsils causing inflammation of the joints of the feet, were among the conditions found in this group of patients.

Today, another condition not needing orthopedic attention, has become very common and many "cures" for it, are seen on the pages of our newspapers and magazines. I am referring to ringworm of the feet or athletes' foot. And it is actually because of an increased desire for cleanliness that this ailment has spread so rapidly.

We read in The Bulletin, Lake Carrier's Association, the following:

"With the increasing large number of shower baths being installed on the vessels there obviously has been an increase in the number of cases of athletes' foot contracted. The suggestions for the treatment among these lake sailors is Whitfield's ointment (named after the famous British skin specialist) and potassium permanganate tablets."

"Dissolve one five-grain potassium permanganate tablet in a gallon of hot water. Soak the feet for thirty minutes in this solution. With a piece of gauze gently remove all the loose skin. Wipe the skin dry and then apply Whitfield's ointment to the affected parts. The application of Whitefield's ointment should not be too thick."

In the meantime preventive measures as recommended by Dr. Udo Wilde, University of Michigan, include (a) use of paper slippers which keep feet off the floor, and (b) after the bath thoroughly dry the body, especially feet, groin and armpits.

Remember, the above treatment—soaking in potassium permanganate solution and application of Whitfield's ointment—is for the skins of hardy lake sailors. It might easily be too severe for many skins. It would be wise, therefore, to first use milder solutions and ointments. If the results are disappointing, then the use of Whitfield's ointment, perhaps every second day, might bring the desired results safely. Whitfield's ointment is a non-proprietary ointment which can be put up by any druggist.

GRAFTON GIRL IN CRITICAL CONDITION FOLLOWING ATTACK

Following an attack which she charges was made upon her by Tom Prestridge, her stepfather, Marguerite Moyse, 23 LEFT, lies in the Cobourg General hospital with a bullet lodged in her brain after being fired at her from extremely close range. The attack took place in the Prestridge home and when police arrived they found her assailant dead with a bullet wound in his temple, and his bride of a month, Miss Moyse's mother, also dead, but whether from poison, shock or force is not known. Officials were attracted to the house by smoke from a fire, apparently purposely set, that consumed the building. During the struggle with Prestridge in her room, in which she also suffered a broken jaw, Miss Moyse said her mother entered the room. The victim, now in a critical condition, is seen here in an informal picture taken with Eric Nyles, a friend.

COUPLE MARRY TO GO TO FAIR

Fort Erie, Ont., Aug. 3 (CP)—Some people will do anything to get to the New York world's fair. A man and woman in London, Ont., planned to visit the fair chaperoned by a Hamilton, Ont., married couple. The Hamilton residents at the last minute couldn't go. So the Londoners, rather than give up their visit to the fair, married and went there. They told immigration officials here all about it.

Mrs. A. W. Lent and daughter, Elaine, have returned to Port Hope, after visiting relatives in this city.

E. E. Bonter and R. H. Ketcheson, are in Toronto on business.

Mrs. G. Dafoe, 14 Burton Street, entertained at a surprise party on Tuesday for her mother, Mrs. Mary E. Tompkins, in honor of her birthday. The guests played cards and had a very enjoyable evening, after which lunch was served.

Miss Anne Putnam daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Putnam, who has been the guest of Mr. and Mrs. S. O. Hughes, Deseronto, fell and broke her arm in front of the Hughes' residence on Sunday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Gibson of Detroit, have returned home after visiting friends and relatives in the city.

Mrs. H. Bonisteel has returned to Belleville after spending two months with her daughter, Mrs. Cecil Gibson, Detroit.

Miss Jean Cushing, Reg.N., has returned to New York after visiting with Miss Doris Hogle for the past few weeks.

Weddings

BATES—HUFF

A quiet wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Huff in North Fredericksburg on Monday afternoon, when their younger daughter, Eileen Frances became the bride of Donald E. Bates, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Bates of Frankford.

The ceremony was performed under a bridal arch, and only the immediate relatives of the bride and groom were present.

The witnesses were Mr. Ernest Huff and Miss Nina Huff.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. A. C. McCallum of the Bay circuit.

Following the wedding luncheon, the happy couple left on a brief wedding tour and on their return will reside in Stirling.

ADAMS—BOYD

A pretty wedding took place at the home of the groom's parents, 36 Henry Street, yesterday afternoon at five o'colck when Ina Elda Boyd, Reg. N., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. I. Boyd, Campbellford, became the bride of Mr. Herbert Thomas Adams, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Adams, 36 Henry Street.

Gladioli, hydrangea and a profusion of varied summer blossoms formed a colorful setting for the ceremony which was performed by Rev. W. J. Walke of St. Andrew's Church.

The bride who was given in marriage by her father, was charming in a pale blue gown with white accessories. She carried a Colonial bouquet of roses and sweet peas.

Miss Marjorie Bonter, Reg. N., was bridesmaid and wore a navy blue ensemble with white accessories. Her bouquet was of roses and baby's breath.

Mr. Mac Bonter was groomsman.

Wedding music was played by Miss Velma Runnells of Campbellford.

Buffett luncheon was served at 27 Queen Street, following the ceremony. Mrs. Boyd, mother of the bride, was attired in navy blue flowered chiffon with white accessories, and Mrs. Adams, mother of the groom, wore white, floral crepe with blue accessories.

Luncheon was served by four nieces of the bride and groom, Barbara and Nancy Boyd and Ruth and Velma Brockhurst.

Later Mr. and Mrs. Adams left on a wedding trip to Toronto, Belmont and intermediate points. The bride travelled in orchid sheer with matching accessories. Upon their return they will reside in Belleville.

Out of town guests included Mr. and Mrs. Jack Boyd, Toronto, Mr. Arthur Stillman, Brantford, and Mr. and Mrs. George Boyd and family, Campbellford.

STAPLEY-TUFTS REUNION

The Stapey-Tufts families held their fourteenth annual reunion at Crescent Beach, Oak Lake, on Wednesday, July 19th. There were about one hundred and thirty present. The ladies prepared a delicious dinner which was enjoyed by all.

After dinner collection was taken by Mr. Frank Stapley. Mr. Murn. Stapley, president, called the gathering to order and the secretary, Mrs. Clayton Fisher, gave a report of last year's meeting. Mrs. Phil. Hamilton gave an account of births, marriages and deaths of the past year which were as follows:

At Napanee, to Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Hamilton, a son.

At Napinka, Man., to Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Elliott, a son.

At Madoc, to Mr. and Mrs. Harry Tufts, a son.

At Holloway, to Mr. and Mrs. Harry Clark, a daughter.

Ruby Clancy Tufts, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Tufts, Belleville, married to James William Elliott.

Ruby Elizabeth Stapley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Stapley, Stirling, married to Kenneth Thompkins.

June Pearl Stapley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Stapley, married to Albert Fraser.

At Plainfield, Ont., James Gilbert Latta passed away in his 87th year.

At Langham, Sask., Jos. Alcock passed away in his 75th year. All joined in singing "Shall We Gather At The River?"

Philip Carr and Stan. Tufts had charge of the folowing program:

Oldest Person Present—Mr. James Stapley, Halloway, age 86.

Youngest Baby—Master James Albert Lake, Halloway, age 11 months.

Largest Family Present—Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Palmateer, Tweed, ten children.

Person present from longest distance—Mrs. Mary Nixon, Milwaukee, Wis.

Grandparent with most grandchildren—Mrs. Sarah Stapley.

Newest Bride Present—Mrs. Albert Fraser, (nee Pearl Stapley) married July 12th.

Youngest Grandfather—Mr. Geo. Mills, Roslin, age 52.

Youngest Grandmother — Mrs. John Cook, Halloway, age 44.

Boys' race, 8 yrs. and under—Buddy Stratton.

Girls' race, 8 yrs. and under—Fern Stapley.

Girls' race, 12 yrs. and under—Thelma Fisher.

Boys' race, 12 yrs. and under—Gordon Clark.

Boys' bag-bursting race—Sam Fisher.

Young ladies' novelty race—Laura Cook.

Married men's race—Frank Stapley.

Married women's race—Mrs. Kenneth Thompkins (nee Ruby Stapley).

All the children enjoyed a candy scramble.

Russell Stapley was elected president for 1940-41. It was decided to hold the picnic at the same place next year on the third Wednesday in July. The younger folks enjoyed swimming and a social time was had by all. Quite a number stayed for supper and all wended their way home feeling they had spent a really enjoyable day.

Fashion Flashes

LONG SLEEVES appear on many smart evening frocks. A model of black organza with shirtwaist type bodice has a neckline with deep ruffles of the organza edged with bright pink Val lace. The ruffles are fastened with a black satin bow that matches the satin belt.

The sun shines, and here comes the bride dressed in a lovely creation fashioned entirely of white net arranged in shallow ruffles, creating a slim silhouette.

First prize in the travel coat section goes to a coat of exquisite rust brown tweed, topped by a huge collar of silver fox dyed in the rich ruby-tone.

Already spoken for is an exquisite evening ensemble designed for late autumn wear. The slim frock is of white velvet, and the white velvet wrap is threaded with glints of silver.

It won't be so bad to go back to school if sister wears a smart outfit A pretty suit is wine color with a blue over-plaid. The jacket has notched revers and a twin button fastening, and is hiplength. The skirt has front pleats. Self belt closes with a leather ornament in wine and blue. Worn with a blue sweater.

Highlighted for autumn and winter is the postilion hat. For early autumn a smart postilion is of black felt, the high crown marked by three gold kidskin ornaments in applique. A long dotted veil softens the model.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Unwilling Child Brides

It seems strange to read a letter, like the one given in this column today, bearing the postmark of a large city. If it came from the mountain fastnesses of the deep South, where little girls still playing with dolls have been married to men of thirty-five, forty and even older, it would be less startling.

Laws to keep men of grandfatherly age from marrying girl-children are not always invoked in those parts. But it's a bit startling to hear of such a marriage taking place in a metropolitan centre.

"Dear Miss Fairfax

"Old Mr. —— that I've got to marry, is rich, and owns a lot of property. And we are dreadfully poor. There are eight children in our family, and it's been awfully hard to feed us. So I had to quit in the grade school, and couldn't keep on and be a teacher as I wanted to.

"My mother and father were born in a small country of the Old World, and not many people from there have come to this city. You have to do just as your fathers wants you to do in that country. And we children have to do the same over here. My father is going to make me marry old Mr. —— before I'm 18 years old, because then I'll be of age, and he thinks I won't have to obey him.

"After old Mr. —— proposed to my father to have me marry him, they watched me so I couldn't get out and tell any of my American friends so they could stop the wedding for me. If you can do anything, please do it quick. My little brother will post this letter for me. . ."

The letter which continued for several pages was signed 'Hopeless', but the poor distracted child did not send me either her name or address, and I am powerless to help.

Strange as it may seem, this is not the only letter of the same sort I have had from big cities and from girls who have been to public schools. Why they don't do something, even something spectacular, before the dread wedding day arrives, is a mystery. You would think there would be some way they could get word to a former teacher, a Salvation Army, the Young Women's Christian Association, or some similar organization to rescue them.

But I suppose few of us know little of what goes on back of dingy doorways in the overcrowded sections of great cities and I cannot help cherishing the forlorn hope that the girl may escape, even at the altar.

Here's hoping she may decline to make the usual responses at the ceremony and will say 'I do not' when the clergyman or magistrate asks her if she will take this man to be her wedded husband.

Girls are capable of much stubbornness and whatever tantrums the young bride raises, the old gentleman who 'owns a lot of property' will be getting no more than he deserves.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Parents Have Duty to Other Passengers When Travelling with Children

Have understanding hearts, you mothers and fathers who are planning to travel by train with your children. Those active minds and hands are never more active than when they are travelling on a train. New adventures, new surroundings, new people, new social adjustments, new standards of good behaviour.

You can't expect these small travellers to "sit quiet" to "be good" and to "look out of the window" for hours at a time. Naturally they want something to occupy their minds and their hands, something to entertain them. If you prepare for this very human need, you will make them happy, make yourself happy, and make your fellow passengers comfortable.

For the child old enough to read, an entertaining new book will absorb his or her attention. A book or magazine of "funnies" is an excellent recipe for a contented child traveller.

The especially wise mother or father plans a "surprise", to be produced at the psychological moment when time begins to hang heavy. An intriguing new toy, an exciting game, an engrossing puzzle. Or for a little girl something new to sew or crochet for her doll's wardrobe.

We cannot, of course, expect children to abide by adult train behaviour. But, on the other hand, we have no right to allow them to annoy other passengers, as we too often see done by thoughtless mothers and fathers. Some adults' idea of entertaining children on trains is to allow them to eat continuously. Why worry, their smug manner implies, if the child drips the juice of oranges on the seats or floor? Why worry if the smell of bananas or chocolate is an abomination to the nostrils of other passengers? Why worry if the cute little darling puts smeared fingers on the dress or coat of a passenger? Why worry if the children dash noisily and boisterously up and down the train aisle?

Well, why not worry a bit about the comfort of other people?

If you do your job of thoughtful planning of entertainment and decent control of your children's manners, you'll prove that your children's manners 'began at home' and charmingly went a-travelling with them.

What Kind of Shower?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman

1—If a girl is engaged, when do you give her a shower? How should you decide what kind of shower to give her?

2—Do you give a girl a shower when she has had a baby? If so, when and where?

B.

1—Customarily showers are given about three weeks or two weeks before the wedding. The hostess or hostesses who plan to give the shower choose the type they consider will be most to the liking of the bride-elect. The choice depends on circumstances. When in doubt, there is always the good standby. . the miscellaneous shower! For a general shower, each guest brings what she chooses.

2—Stork showers are popular in some communities, and the shower may be given either in anticipation of the baby's arrival, or when the baby is five or six weeks old.

Sometimes when the stork shower is given after the baby's birth, it is in the nature of a surprise party. Usually, the women guests, understanding the circumstances, suggest that one of the guests give the guest of honor a hint, an hour or so in advance of the party, that the party is to be. This gives the mother an opportunity to get herself and the baby ready to receive the guests. As with other surprise parties, the guests bring the refreshments with them.

Courtesy Tip

An expensive pest is the guest who makes long distance telephone calls, and who makes no move toward reimbursement. If you are this kind of guest, don't be surprised if you aren't invited for a "return engagement".

Get More Oxygen In Your Blood and Get the Pep that Sends You Bounding Up the Stairs

People who smother to death die because oxygen has been completely cut off from them. Just as surely you are slowly smothering if your blood lacks red corpuscles. Red corpuscles are your oxygen-carriers. They carry the oxygen you breathe in to every part of your system. Without enough oxygen-carrying corpuscles, your kidneys, liver, stomach and bowels slow down. Your skin gets pale, flabby, often pimply. Your nerves may become jittery—you tire quickly—feel depressed.

What you need is Dr. Williams Pink Pills. These world-famous pills help make more and better red corpuscles and thus increase the oxygen-carrying power of your blood. Your Hair Likes To Be Curried Every Day

By HELEN FOLLETT

NOTHING so quickly brings a rush of worry to the head as falling hair. If the moulting shafts are only a few inches in length, they may drop from the ends that have been subjected too often to the permanent wave ordeal and have dried out. No loss, since most of us are getting sheared now and then. Long threads in the comb mean something else; that is, if there are a lot of them. One must not forget that hair is coming and going, each unit living from two to seven years. We're always moulting, as we are always shedding skin scales so that new ones can appear.

FRANCES ROBINSON
Keeps her hair and scalp in good condition

Tresses have a sympathetic nature, often sulk when some part of the physical machine is under strain. Nervousness, sleeplessness lack of nourishment may be factors that thin the brain thatch. Neglect is another cause. Hair likes to be curried daily, so use your brush even if you must trot-trot more frequently to the beautyorium for your wave set.

Scalp massage is recommended by all specialists because it exercises the tiny fibres in which the hair roots rest, it is comforting and stimulating to the blood streams on which the glory locks live and thrive. Shampooing must be thorough, all suds rinsed away. The balanced diet is suggested by those who know because it is believed that falling hair, even baldness, may be produced by a diet deficiency.

A nose surface that looks as if it were buttered is the bane of many a girl's life, especially in the silly season. Sebaceous glands pour forth oil profusely.

Soap and water should be used twice a day. And let me tell you this, Miss Shiny Face: When the scrubbing goes on it may be that the nose does not get its full portions of suds. It's easy enough to skid over it casually. Friction in the lather with your finger-tips, force it into the pores, an oily skin invites blackheads.

Rinse and rinse and rinse again. Have an ice cube at hand, skip it over the cutaneous coating. Then lave with witch hazel. Apply powder lightly; don't grind it in.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Take First-Aid Kit on Vacation, Says Doctor

No discussion of the care of children in the summer months would be complete without something being said about injuries. It is almost impossible for an active child to spend a holiday at camp or at a summer cottage, without suffering some cuts and bruises. Although most of these are minor injuries, if neglected they may lead to rather serious trouble.

In the summer you are usually away from your own doctor—possibly away from any doctor at all. So treating cuts and bruises is going to be the parents' job. That is one of the reasons I would advise every family to take a first-aid kit with them when they go camping. I don't mean they should invest a lot of money in an elaborate affair. A few rolls of bandages, some sterile gauze, a bottle of iodine and a lot of common sense will take care of all the minor accidents that occur.

Bruises are the most usual injury, and it is certainly unusual for a child to go more than a few days in the camp without a few of these. As long as the skin isn't broken, there isn't much to worry about even though they may seem quite painful. The anxious mother may notice the bruise go through a series of colors, first blackish blue, then green and finally back to the normal color again. These color changes aren't anything to be alarmed over, for they are only the result of a break-down in the blood which has gone into the tissues underneath the skin. These bruises are unsightly and at times may be painful, but the ordinary bruise doesn't require any special treatment.

If the bruise is on the knee or the elbow, or some other movable part of the body, and if it is accompanied by swelling, it may become very painful to bend the joint. Frequent applications of cold, water-soaked cloths will reduce the swelling so that the part can be moved without too much pain.

Frequently such a bruise is accompanied by a scratch or a scrape. This kind of lesion require a little more care because it is very easy for infection to get in through this wide area. Certainly, such an injury shouldn't be neglected; it should be carefully cleaned and covered by a dry bandage until the skin has grown over it again.

In this treatment, the cleaning is the important thing. If the mother has any green soap in her kichen it should be applied to a bit of sterile gauze and the wound carefully—and not too tenderly—washed off. After this the surface should be cleansed with alcohol in order to sterilize any parts which were not completely cleansed in the washing. Iodine may be applied, but this should be done very carefully for it may well burn the skin tissues if it is applied too thickly or left on too long. If the iodine is used, it should be washed off later with alcohol.

When you are convinced that the wound is sterile, then fresh gauze can be fastened over it with adhesive tape. Make sure that the adhesive doesn't come in contact with the abrasion itself.

SALEM W.M.S.

The Women's Missionary Society of the Salem United Church held their meeting Wednesday, July 13. The president Mrs. L. McLaren opened the meeting with hymn 153 which was followed with the Lord's prayer in unison.

Responsive reading were given and Hymn 221. After the Treasurer's report, business items were dealt with. Plans were made for a Sunday evening service at which Mrs. C. McFarlane will be the speaker. The Scripture was read by Mrs. McLaren followed with interesting readings by Mrs. G. Badgley, Mrs. Sills and Mrs. Haight. A hymn was sung and Mrs. Sills closed with prayer.

POLICE

Much Overlapping

Difficulties were encountered in Canadian police work through overlapping of jurisdiction between Municipal, County, Provincial and Royal Canadian Mounted Police he said.

Under the English system, the home office controlled every police organization, and inspectors-general maintained a high standard of efficiency in the different divisions. The home office paid half the cost of policing, but the grant could be withheld from any organization deficient in efficiency. "The corruption developing through local political jealousies and schemes are checked by this central authority," said Chief Draper.

Statistics showed crime increased six times as fast as the population in Canada in the first 36 years of this century. Crimes had increased 643 per cent, from 4,853 to 36,059, while the population increased 108.4 per cent.

Details of the R.C.M.P. finger print fyle system were given by Inspector W. W. Watson, who said that 697,845 sets of criminal finger prints were put on record from 1919 to the end of last June. There were also about 19,000 "miscellaneous" prints. From the grand total, 98,145 positive identifications had been effected.

Controversy over the parole system arose when Judge J. P. McKinley of Ottawa, chairman of the Ontario Parole Board, briefly sketched the operations of the Board.

No sooner had Judge McKinley turned to that subject than Chief Constable Newhall of Peterborough made some comment which drew the retort from the Judge: "I've got an answer for anything you've got to say."

"We have failures and we get public criticism, which we must be able to stand if we are fit for our jobs," said Judge McKinley, "but we find prejudice against the possibility of reformation, against the parole system, just as you find prejudice against police officers.

"We have been criticized by people, who don't understand or want to understand, just as you are accused of hounding criminals. But in my 22 years experience in this work I don't know of a single case where police have hounded a criminal, although I know of hundreds where they have played the big brother to criminals."

More Cooperation Needed

Judge McKinley declared the time had come when police had a right to expect a great deal more cooperation from the public. In fact, they should rise up and demand it, he said. Leaving automobile keys in automobiles was a simple example, which was responsible for most automobile thefts.

He suggested the purchaser of stolen goods from juveniles should be given more attention by the police. He saw a great opportunity for police service in the fact 85 per cent of juvenile offenders come from broken homes. He had particular tribute for Chief Eddie Watts of Napanee, Ont., a town of 3,500, where only four juveniles had reached court in the last nine years—primarily due to an organization Chief Watts sponsored to help them.

Chief Newhall, when Judge McKinley finished, moved that his address be "received and filed, and if the boys see anything in it, okay. I've been in this work for 43 years."

Experiences Cited

Chief Newhall cited some experience with "young devils" who slit the tops of automobiles to get into them, contending the members of the Parole Board "don't really understand the human side like we do."

"I know, Judge, you know your end well but we know these men," he insisted. He emphasized then that he favored parole if a prisoner was not a repeater.

Judge McKinley said Newhall had attended a meeting of the Board and, when it was over, had been asked if he had any suggestions to make but he had nothing but commendation for the Board.

"Not so long ago he wrote and asked for the release of a man with a record that long whose application for parole had been refused by the board already," the Judge said.

"Name him," challenged Chief Newhall.

"I'll place all the facts before your executive," said the Judge.

Chief William Hodgson of Kitchener declared he was 100 per cent behind the Board. It had refused to release a prisoner who was shortly after released by ticket-of-leave, he said. J. R. Wilkinson of Windsor and Chief Harold Nash of Guelph likewise commended the Board's conduct.

WORK-SEEKING

Few to be Engaged

The transients came into Delhi, Simcoe, Tillsonburg and other centres of the tobacco area in search of work. But authorities say that owing to a reduced crop this season comparatively few of the estimated 8,000 to 10,000 jobless will be engaged by the growers. The presence of the large number of unemployed has created a problem for some municipalities.

Some 3,000 of the transients are in Delhi and Reeve Wilbur said last night that 85 per cent of them "can never expect to get work here." He added: "We're going to force them out on the hoof, the way they came in. The town of Delhi is not going to put up with a lot of useless loitering."

On Whole Conduct Orderly

Police Chief Ernest Pratt said that on the whole the conduct of the transients has been orderly, although there have been complaints by some women residents of abusive language directed to them in the streets. Minor thefts from vegetable gardens also have been reported and early yesterday a store was broken into and $10 worth of cigarettes stolen.

Fear of a possible outbreak of disease also is believed to have been a factor in Reeve Wilbur ordering the exodus. Dr. E. W. Zumstein, Chief Coroner of Norfolk County, admitted this possibility was considered by the authorities and said if such occurred "a dangerous situation would be created for all Western Ontario."

No Sanitary Facilities

"Here in this small community we have at least 3,000 men concentrated," said Dr. Zumstein. "They have no sanitary facilities of any sort and water supplies here are from individual wells and none from a central municipal supply."

An organization meeting in the municipal park last night was attended by about 500 of the transients. Speakers urged the men to join the newly-formed United Tobacco Workers' Union of Canada and said the union demands that skilled tiers and primers be paid $3.50 to $4 a day and that handlers, mostly women, be paid $2.75 to $3.

Atley Donald's Win Streak Abruptly Halted at Twelve By Detroit Tigers at N. Y.

Rookie Pitcher Beaten 7-2 and Yankees Lose Three Straight

GIANTS ADVANCE

Defeat Reds 12-2 and Move Up to Fifth Place in League

(By Judson Bailey Associated Press Sports Writer).

It is little wonder baseball players are superstitious. Look what No. 13 did to rookie Atley Donald of New York Yankees.

The big freshman flinger, whose 12 victories without defeat was the best record for a newcomer in Major League history, cracked up yesterday 7-2 against Detroit's fearless Tigers.

Records like this are not made without luck and Donald has had narrow escapes before. The last time he started against Detroit the Yanks were beaten, but responsibility was shifted to other shoulders. There was no luck on his side when he came to No. 13.

The Tigers tore at him with seven hits and six runs in five innings before he was removed for a pinch-hitter and Schoolboy Rowe, one time idol of Detroit and waypoints, saw to it that the champions didn't catch up.

Although it was merely his fourth triumph of a not very lustrous season, Rowe unfurled some of his old form, allowing seven scattered hits and once striking out three batters in an inning.

He helped the No. 13 jinx make another killing in the same game. Joe DiMaggio, who had hit safely in 12 consecutivee contests, was blanked and his batting average fell below the 400 level for the first time this season.

DiMaggio Held Hitless

It was the third straight setback for the Yankees. However, their closest pursuers were unable to take full advantage of their opportunities, all the other first division clubs in the American League dividing doubleheaders.

Mel Hafder's eight-hit pitching paved the way for an 8-2 victory by Cleveland over Boston Red Sox in the first game of their program, even though Jimmie Foxx hit his 26th homer and a double. In the nightcap the Bostons managed to come from behind to win 5-4 on Joe Heving's excellent relief chore.

Philadelphia Athletics came up with a 14-hit attack, including two homers by Frank Hayes and one by Bill Nagel to beat Chicago White Sox, 13-4 and then last the second section of the bill 2-1 as John Rigney and Clint Brown pieced together a four-hit pitching performance.

Dutch Leonard the Washington knuckleballer, also submitted a four-hit exhibition to beat St. Louis Browns 2-1.

New York Giants put a 12-2 bite into Cincinnati Reds extending their budding winning streak to four games and moving up the National League ladder to fifth place. It was a personal conquest for 25-year-old Bill Lohrman, who spaced six hits and batted in four runs. One of his three hits was a two-run double and another was a single with the bases loaded.

Joe Bowman wrapped Brooklyn Dodgers around his fingers with a five-hit 6-0 shutout at Pittsburgh in the National League's other game. Chuck Klein drove in three runs with a homer and a sacrifice fly and Arky Vaughan brought in two more with three hits to make the assignment easy.

Two games were rained out.

Yesterday's Stars

(By The Associated Press)

Bill Lohrman, Giants: Strapped Reds on five hits and drove in four runs.

Dutch Leonard, Senators: Beat Browns with four-hit pitching.

Schoolboy Rowe, Tigers: Stopped Yankees on seven-hit hurling.

Chuck Klein, Pirates: Batted in three runs with homer and sacrifice fly.

Frank Hayes, Athletics, and John Rigney, White Sox: Former hit two home runs to lead Philadelphia to victory in first game and later gave only two hits for eight innings in taking nightcap.

Our chairman of games sure started something when he introduced a cup for doubles, the winner having to defend it within forty-eight hours. Already three games have been played and each time the cup has been taken away from the defender Harvey Stewart and Newt Wilbur were the first to fall to John Shaw and Ab Wonnacott. Then John and Ab fell by the wayside and just twenty-four hours later Mac and Harry had to hand it over to Geo. Watkin and Fred Harper; tonight Doug Row and Ernie Vanner take up the task and if history repeats it should be in the Smith Hardware window Friday morning.

On Monday next Civic Holiday, Kingston hold their annual mixed doubles tournament, this is a real treat every year, you will enjoy it if you go.

A thing of the past "men's rinks."

Harvey is starting a singles competition, get your name in and see how good you really are, it is a good test.

How about a little contest for our new members.

Four of the oldest players in our district are out this year through sickness. Bill Whitty, Stirling, Hugh Kellar and Trigger Gunn at Madoc and Charlie Symons at our own club, let's hope they will all be in the game next year, we can ill-afford to lose them, they are all good players and real sports at the game.

Jack deserves a great deal of credit for the condition of our greens only one rain in four weeks and they never looked better.

I have been asked by several members of our club just what happened to the four boys who left for Markham on Saturday. If these boys will ask Mac McLean, Ed Catcher or Fred Harper, I think they will get the story or part of it.

Look over the list in the club house and see if you are a star member if not, dues are due.

New York, Aug. 3 (AP)—The Detroit motor strikes have promoter Mike Jacobs so worried he's hustled out there by plane....The Bernie who is giving the Saratoga bookies headaches isn't the old maestro (Nowsuh), but his brother, Jeff.

Thirteen-year-old Charles A. Comiskey II, who some day will run the White Sox, says he'd rather develop a good curve ball than be President of the club.

It is a good guess that Joe McGuigan, just about the tops referee in Pennsylvania, will view the Galento-Nova fight as a judge, while an outsider does the refereeing and collects the fancy dough.... New Orleans will name the streets in its new $7,000,000 lake front development after its national champs and other sports immortals.

Lynn C. Doyle, Philadelphia Evening Bulletin, says: "If all these DiMaggios were infielders and Yanks, it would take a Gertrude (a rose is a rose is a rose) Stein to get a double play in the paper straight."

Bob Ray in the Los Angeles Times clears up the mystery why Joe McCarthy is endorsing a headache cure—it is for the misery of seven other American League managers.

CORBYS ON TOP IN CITY SERIES OVER THE OILERS

Team Defeats Shell Squad 8-7 in Third Game With Harris on Mound

REID BRILLIANT

Veteran Third Sacker for Winners Makes Two Sensational Plays

Backed by the sensational fielding of their veteran third baseman, Harold Reid, coupled with Connie Harris' eight hit pitching, the Corbys A.C. took a strangle hold on the city O.A.S.A. play-offs by beating the Shell-Aajmaa 8 to 7 at the Flats last evening, the victory giving the Corbys two wins to the "Oilers" one in a best in five series, that continues on Friday night.

Chuck Barnett's Corby outfit opened auspiciously with three runs in the initial frame and one each in the two subsequent innings, but the Oilers came back with one in the first and one in the third and added four runs in the fourth on two hits to forge to the lead. However, Art Cole opened the seventh with a mammoth home run into deep right-centre and later Murray raced around the base paths to score on two successive errors and an over-throw tossed in for good measure, to terminate the night's scoring.

Limited to Eight Hits

For the second time during the current city O.A.S.A. play-offs Connie Harris bested Johnnie Bawden as rival pitchers. Harris limited the "Oilers" to eight hits, three being of the extra base nature. Bawden was pounded hard for a total of 17 safeties, while his teammates booted the ball around for seven costly errors, three of which entered materially into the Corbys' scoring. Harris whiffed but one batter, the final hitter of the game while Bawden struck out three.

The fielding was sensational at times, but it remained to have Harold Reid, veteran Corby third sacker, literally pull the game out of the fire on two occasions. With two on in the eighth, Reid made a marvellous stop of O'Neill's drive for a third out and in the ninth raced into the spectators to snagg a hard fly for a first out, catching the foul fly from a dificult angle.

Cole with a home run and two singles and Murray with a triple, double and single, led the winners with the willow, while Cy Barriage pounded out a double and two singles for good measure. Bawden helped his own cause with a home run in the fourth, while O'Neill was the only Shell batter to count two safeties off Harris' deliveries.

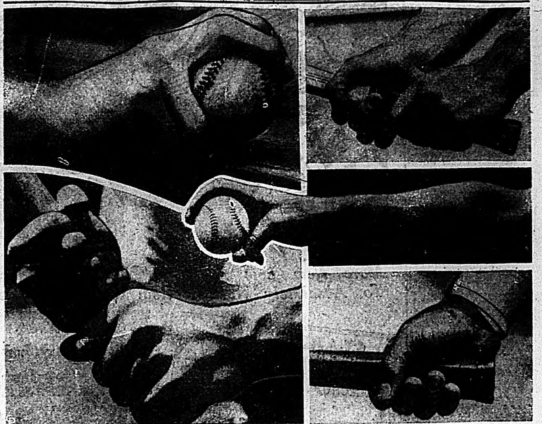
THESE HANDS ARE DOING VERY WELL BY THEIR OWNERS IN THE SPORT SPHERE



Famous hands are these from the diamond and the tennis greensward, and vital factors in the success of the persons at the other end of the arms. Power in athletics starts with the body and includes the shoulder, arm, wrist and hand, but the latter form interesting studies as they assume a wide variety of appearances as their owners go about their business of gripping their instruments of athletic warfare. The tennis grips belong to Jack Bromwich, TOP RIGHT, and Adrian Quist, LOWER RIGHT, who make up Australia's Davis cup team this year, and who are rated among the world's best at the net game. Bromwich's grip shows his famous two-handed grip that defies orthodoxy and proves quite effective. The hands holding the bat at the LOWER LEFT are those of Joe DiMaggio, star New York Yankee outfielder, currently leading the American league at bat, while gripping the ball to throw up some tantalizing curves or fast ones are the hands of Atley Donald, UPPER LEFT and Bucky Walters, MIDDLE RIGHT. Donald is the sensational Yankee rookie who has broken all winning records in his big league debut, and Walters is the reformed third baseman hurling such a great brand of ball for the National league-leading Cincinnati Reds.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

with Ken J. Colling

As classy a trophy as we've been privileged to see in some years was purchased yesterday by the Belleville Rotary Club for their Rotary Regatta softball tournament at Massassaga Park next Monday. The tourney is under the supervision of Rotarian Joe Shortt, who has lined up two Belleville mushball teams, a team from Mountain View, representing Prince Edward County and a team from Wallbridge, representing South Hastings. The two latter clubs may import as many players from their respective counties as necessary to bolster their entries. Just why Belleville was given two cracks at the Rotary Cup may cause some talk but by placing the two Belleville entries in the first round or semi-finals, the outside clubs are at least assured of one team in the cup finals. Other land sports will be presented in conjunction with the mammoth Rotary Regatta, which features the world's championship 225 power boat races.

Chuck Barnett's amalgamated Corbys A.C. squad took a firm hold on the city O.A.S.A. play-downs by beating the "Oilers" 8-7 last night. When the dust of battle had settled the score book did not exactly coincide with the actual played game. The Corbys collected something like 17 safeties off Johnnie Bawden, while Connie Harris hurled eight hit ball. Atop of these figures we find the Sedore-led nine booted the pellet around for seven costly errors, while Corbys committed but two misplays in the field. Seventeen hits, coupled with seven errors, should have been productive of more than 8 runs in an ordinary mushball game, but it wasn't last night and the "Oilers" left the field feeling they had been the victims of ill-luck rather than vanquished by a better adversary. From this corner's viewpoint Bawden was having trouble getting the first Corby batter from arriving safely at the initial sack and therein lies considerable of the reason of victory. Incidentally Connie Harris tells us he equalled Johnnie Bawden's consecutive string of eight victories last night.

While orchids were being passed around after the game, the donors forgot one man, Harold Reid, who perhaps was directly responsible for the Corbys winning last night. His one-hand stab of O'Neill's hard liner for a third out, with the tying and winning runs on the base paths in the eighth, was little less than phenomenal and Reid came back to make matters easy for Harris by snagging a foul fly in the ninth, that was also a sensation. Connie Harris has pitched two smart games for the Corbys in the current play-offs, but we attribute their present success to the fact that veteran and seasoned players usually come through in the moneyed series. However, in fairness to Johnnie Bawden, who hurled the Shell to the league leadership and continued in every play-off game, it should be pointed out that Bawden has pitched every league game the Oilers played this season, play-offs included, except two. Now it would seem as though Corbys have the Oilers in a tough spot, as Sedore can't gamble on any other pitcher except Bawden to even the series on Friday.

Coach Foster's ballsters kept pace in the Bay of Quinte League by holding the Napanee Gibbards to a 1-1 tie on the Aerodrome Tuesday night, the game going overtime into 12 innings. The Flyers unearthed a new moundsman named Dole, who held Walt Gerow's sluggers very well in tow, while Stan Spratt, pitching for the Gibbards turned in his best effort of the year. The Napanee nine was forced to come from behind to score the tying run in the seventh, but from that point until darkness set in and terminated matters there was no more evidence of scoring. Bud Wilkins' Belleville squad make their final appearance in Picton with a benched himself, had hit 494 home twilight game on Friday night.

Lou Gehrig, before he voluntarily runs during his major league career and had batted in 1,900 runs. When he receives his final pay cheque for the present season he will have earned close to $400,000 as a Yankee ballplayer. He began with a $3,750 salary in 1925, got $5,500 the next year and $7,500 in 1927. He made his biggest jump in 1928 when he got an increase to $25,000. Last season he was paid $39,000, more than was received by his boss, Joe McCarthy.

Baseball history was made yesterday—paramountly Rookie Atley Donald, the Yankees sensational first-year pitcher, suffered his first defeat of the current season as the Tigers beat the Yankees for the second time in as many days. It was Donald's first defeat in 13 Major League starts as Detroit shelled him from the rubber in the fifth. The Tigers' heavy artillery was supported by Schoolboy Rowe's seven-hit hurling. While the Yankees were absorbing another loss the league leading Cincinnati Reds were not to be out-done as they lost to the Giants 12-2 thsi reverse being the second in succession for the Reds.

Lastic Gratton, Wilmer Hillock's good pacer from Picton, clipped a second and one-half of the Canadian Pacing Derby at New Hamburg yesterday by turning the first mile of the race in 2.05 3-4. Hillock's horse finished second on the day's racing to Dillon Mo, however, but won the first heat in record time. The Healey-Herrington three year old Widow Henley was second in the 3 year old stake, winning the first heat also. Ten thousand saw the races.

Sports Spice — The Shannonville Hawks drew first blood in the South Hastings loop finals beating Cannifton 8-3 last night ....Out at the Belleville Golf course the home golfers were given a lesson at the art of swatting the little small pill as a contingent of Port Hope golfers beat the locals 29 1-2 to 15 1-2 yesterday....Johnny Ferraro, former Montreal football coach is being suggested as the successor of Teddy Reeve, who got Ferraro's job at Montreal....Apparently all's well that ends well....Ducky Wucky Joe Medwick is at cross purposes with Manager Ray Blades and was removed from the Cardinals lineup for indifferent playing yesterday.

CANNIFTON LOSES TO THE 'HAWKS' IN FIRST GAME

Shannonville Has Edge in Playoffs for South Hastings Loop Title

LOSERS 'JINXED'

Team Finishes Ahead in Schedule but Unable to Win Title

Foxboro, Aug. 3 (Special)—Still carrying that same old playoff jinx, which has dogged their tracks since the inception of the league, the Cannifton "Sluggers" ran into some unexpected opposition last night, when, right on their home diamond, the Shannonville "Hawks" tagged them for a decisive 8-3 loss in the first game of the S. H. League finals.

With the second game of the series back in Shannonville on Friday evening it now appears, that last night's winners should be long favourites to win No. 2 and also the series. Taking into consideration the turn of last night's events it seems that it does not pay to finish on top in the South Hastings League. Almost every year it has been the good fortune of the Cannifton lads to make a walkaway of the regular schedule and, as usual this year finished so far ahead, that the other teams needed a telescope to see them, but immediately the playoffs start the entire team seems to get the jitters and never in the history of the league have they won the championship. So regular has this "jinx" proved the downfall of the Cannifton lads that the president of the league, J. Ed. Shorey, a life-long resident of that village, has rather jokingly stated, "that the only way Cannifton will ever win a cup is for me to buy them one."

Ragged Ball in Field

Playing ragged ball in the field and outhit by a wide margin at the plate, the Cannifton lads proved no match for Shannonville last night, as fresh from their victory of Latta in the semi-finals, the "Hawks" played heads up ball in the field and nicked Loucks for eleven safeties to establish an early lead, which they never relinquished.

LARRY O'CONNOR BREAKS RECORD IN HIGH HURDLES

Slashes Two-Fifths of a Second Off the Canadian Mark

SCORES DOUBLE

Chatham Runner Annexes Mile and Half-Mile Races at Meet

Toronto, Aug. 3 (CP)—Track experts who figured Canada was without a good middle-distance runner are watching the performance of red-headed Max Lenover of Chatham.

The 21-year-old product of western Ontario scholastic tracks swept the mile and half-mile rusn at the Ontario track and field championships last night in convincing style. While the times were slow, his control of both races impressed those looking for possible Olympic material.

His coach, Alex Wilson, says Lenover has not yet decided what distance to concentrate on when pointing toward the Olympic trials next year. Wilson, a Canadian track man of no mean repute in his day, said he was pleased with Lenover's mile. It was the first he has run in real competition, Wilson said.

Lenover is credited with a 4.16 mile while attending Loyola College, Detroit, this spring, a mark just two seconds short of the Canadian record.

O'Connor Breaks Record

The Chatham youth's double win rivalled in brilliance the Canadian record-breaking performance of Larry O'Connor in the high hurdles. The tall Toronto timber-topper slashed two-fifths of a second from the old mark in 14.8. Some of the five official watches caught O'Connor in times as fast as 14.5.

Roy Class of Kitchener surprised the Toronto defending sprint champion, Roy Downing, in the 220 yards dash. Te staved off Downing's strong stretch bid to win in 22.3 with J. Duffey of Hamilton third.

Downing, who had not been defeated this year on Canadian tracks easily won the century dash from Harold Brown with Class third. Harold, one of the famous twin-brother team from Meaford, Ont., took the running broad jump while Wallace won the 12-pound shot-put.

Hamilton Men Second

A Neff and G. Furry, were second and third to Lenover in the half-mile. Dave Valeriotte of Guelph set the three-mile pace over most of the distance but a grand last-quarter sprint by Art Clarke of Toronto left him far behind. Milton Wallace of Toronto won a thrilling duel for second place with the Guelph runner.

The Canadian marathon champion, Scotty Rankine of Preston, retired from the three-mile run at the end of two miles with a spike wound. Doctors said the scratch was not serious.

Lous Concessi of Port Colborne defended the Ontario discus title he won last year by tossing the disc 136 feet 3 1-2 inches. In the high jump J. Jackson of Welland was third behind Jack Pinn and E. Boyd, both of Toronto. Pinn cleared the bar at six feet.

BELLEVILLE GOLF CLUB TEAM BEATEN BY PORT HOPE

A contingent of 15 golfers from Port Hope journeyed to Belleville yesterday and soundly trounced their hosts, the Belleville Golf Club by a 29 1-2 to 15 1-2 score in a friendly inter-club match.

During the tournament a sweepstake was held with prizes being awarded the player with the lowest net score, which was won by C. Williams, of Port Hope and a former Belleville boy. Williams turned in a low net of 65, having a handicap of 19.

Following the match the Belleville golfers entertained their victorious visitors from Port Hope.

BALL TRIES FOR GLOVE — RUNNER TRIES FOR BASE — WHO WINS?

There's all the action you could want in this picture from the major league baseball battlefront, as the baseman awaits the ball, the ball speeds through the air to his glove, and the runner does some flying of his own, only aimed at the base. The rampaging Cincinnati Reds were playing New York Giants, with Bill Jurges the man waiting for the ball, and his rival, Billy Meyers, the man trying to beat it. Oh yes,......the ball won.

New Carlow 9—Bancroft 9

New Carlow played Bancroft to a 9-9 tie in Bancroft Saturday afternoon in a hard hitting baseball game. It was called at the end of the sixth on account of rain. Harry Watson pitched for Bancroft and B. Kuno pitched for New Carlay. Both pitchers did exceptionally well but due to the fact that both teams' fielding was exceptionally poor a high score resulted.

Bancroft scored 2 runs in the first innings, 2 runs in third, 3 in the fifth and 2 in the sixth while New Carlow scored most of their runs in the second by getting 4, followed by a home run in the third by G. Kuno, 2 more in the fourth and one run in both the fifth and sixth. W. J. Murray starred for Bancroft, collecting 4 hits, 1 triple, 2 doubles and a single and scored 3 runs while B. Kuno, the New Carlow pitcher starred for the visitors working his way out of several tight spots.

The next game will be played in Bancroft Wednesday afternoon when Coe Hill visits the local lads.

CANNIFTON LOSES

Cannifton, on the other hand were kept well in check by "Monk" Barberstock, on the mound for the winners, and with the exception of the fourth inning when a trio of Shannonville errors allowed three unearned runs, was never in trouble. In limiting the losers to three small safeties, Barberstock rather handily won his second game of the week to put his team ahead in the series. Loucks was nicked for eleven safeties, one a homer by Snider, while he walked two and fanned two.

Snider, in centre for the winners, pulled off the feature play of the evening, when in the first inning he took Bleekman's line drive to hold Collins at third. Barberstock also made a nice play, when he raced away into foul territory to take Empson's lifter. Snider with a homer and a single to his credit, was best at the plate with Reid and Maracle hitting a brace of singles to come close seconds. L. Jarrell, Empson and Gannon were the only batters on the losing team to hit safely all having singles to their credit.

Cannifton Missed Chance

Cannifton missed a glorious chance to go ahead in the first inning when after Collins was hit to be followed by L. Jarrell's single, Bleekman was robbed of a sure double, when Snider raced the proverbial mile to take his drive and hold Collins at third. Empson then ended the inning by rolling weakly to second. Shannonville went two ahead in the second, when a couple of wide throws to first to be followed by Maracle's single drove in two runs and added another in the third, when a couple of more errors and a hit by Juby did the trick. They really went to town in the fourth, when they scored four times on two Cannifton errors to be followed by singles by Snider, Reid, Houston and Hill.

Cannifton broke the ice in their half of the fourth when the Shannonville lads fell down badly to commit three glaring errors to allow an equal number of unearned runs by the homesters for their only scoring spree of the game, but Collins ended things by hitting into a perfect double play as Reid snared his bounder to force Gannon at second. Cannifton were again the victims of a double killing in the next frame as after L. Jarrell went clear to third on an error and an overthow, only to be nabbed at the plate on the next play as Juby took Bleekman's drive at first to step on the bag before throwing home to catch the runner. Cannifton kicked in with a double killing in the sixth when Collins took Hill's bounder at third to step on the sack before tossing to first for the second out. Shannonville scored once more in the last inning when Snider pasted one of Loucks' shoots over the road for a homer which Empson did not even run after.

The lineups:

Shannonville: Reid 2b; Cook ss; Juby 1b; Houston c; Hill 3b; Barberstock p; Snider cf; Maracle rf and Barnhardt lf.

Cannifton: Gannon rf; Collins 3b; L. Jarrell ss; Bleekman cf; Empson lf; E. Jarrell c; Curley 1b; Farquharson 2b; and Loucks p.

Score by innings:

BRITAIN PERFECTS

Lord Strabolgijn, Labor, said his party favored abolition of submarines, battleships and naval and military aircraft.

"His Majesty's government have constantly and in every conceivable occasion pressed for abolition" Lord Stanhope said.

"We did it at the Washington conference and later at the 1923 conference at London. There we got no support whatever."

He said that at the time of the London naval treaty the United States "came round to our view and also proposed abolition of submarines."

In the disarmament conference of 1932 "certain nations desired the retention of the submarine in one form or other and a further eight desired to retain small submarines."

Formula For Happiness

By MEREDITH SCHOLL

When you are the daughter of a wealthy man and have plenty of money in your own name and every one knows what an easy time you have in life, an ambition is a very annoying thing. Add to this that your wealthy father is dead set against the idea of your going to work, considering the notion a silly whimsicality, and you have a perfect formula for misery.

The case of Shirley Keith was a little different because she was possessed of an extraordinary stubbornness, inherited, no doubt from Papa Keith,, and of which Papa Keith was painfully aware. And so, instead of heaving caution to the four winds and merely saying "No!" like that, Papa Keith tucked his disgust into his vest pocket and became shrewd. Shirley was his only child, his hope and joy, the target of his affections, the light of his life. Hence he could not risk the possibility of having her run out on him.

And so shrewd Papa Keith called on his friend, Mr. Ira Read, president of the Read Advertising agency, in which Papa Keith had a large financial interest.

"Irie," said Papa Keith, "I want you to do me a favor. Shirley, my daughter, has a childish notion that she wants to work for a living. Just a whimsicality, but nevertheless quite evident. I want you to give her a job".

"Humm," said Ira, and looked doubtful.

"Give her plenty to do," Papa Keith went on. "Give her so much to do, in fact, that she'll realize working for a living isn't half as exciting as being the daughter of a rich man with nothing to worry about."

Ira and Papa Keith exchanged glances, and the former began to grin and rub his hands together.

"I'll fix it, Jim," he said. "I'll turn her over to my man Whitten. Len Whitten. He's the best man on the staff. Able to handle any situation."

On the following Monday morning Shirley Keith appeared in the offices of the Read Advertising agency and stood before the desk of Mr. Len Whitten.

"Are you Mr. Whitten?" she asked.

"Yes," said Len, without looking up. "And I won't want to buy anything. Good day."

"I'm Shirley Keith. And I think you're impudent."

Mr. Whitten looked up. He was quite a young man to be so valuable to the staff of the Read Advertising agency. About 32, Shirley guessed.

"So," he said. "you're Shirley Keith? Well, well, well."

And then he became very officious.

"Miss Keith if you are to work for me you'll have to make a point or arriving on time. You're three minutes late this morning."

"That," said Miss Keith, "is because I've been standing here for three minutes waiting for you to have the good manners to notice me."

Mr. Whitten cleared his throat, and inwardly cursed Old Man Read for relegating this snippish young lady into his hands. But then, he reflected, it was going to be a joy, a real joy, bringing her to terms.

"Here," he said, "are some notes. Write me an ad using not more than 10 words and stating what a wonderful hose are Silk Smoothies."

Shirley took the notes and sat down at a nearby desk. Ten minutes later she showed the result of her labors to Mr. Whitten. He looked at it and glowered.

"Lous—Not very good," he said.

Tears came into Shirley's eyes. She thought the copy pretty effective and had expected a compliment.

"Stop your blubber—"

Mr. Whitten broke off and swore under his breath. He wasn't used to rich men's daughters who were accustomed to having their own way. He decided that his technique was wrong.

Shirley wrote advertising copy for the Read agency for two weeks. Then Mr. Read called his right-hand man into his office. "Well," he said, "is she sick of it?"

"She is not," said Mr. Whitten. "She likes it."

Ira scowled.

"Didn't you do as I ordered?"

"I did. I heaped more work on her shoulders than any three copy writers in our employ. I've had her running all over town on errands. I've told her she's no good, that her work is lousy. I've done everything."

"And still she likes it?"

"And furthermore she's made me out a liar. Her work's good. Mr. Read, I don't like this job. Believe me, when I have my own agency I'll—"

"Either," Mr. Read barked, "you make that girl sick of her job or you'll have a chance to run your own agency sooner than you expect."

Another two weeks passed and Mr. Read once more summoned his chief assistant.

"Well?" he asked.

"Well, what'?' said Len.

"Don't 'well, what' me!" Mr. Read pounded on his desk.

"Is she fed up?"

"Who?" said Len innocently.

"Oh, the Keith girl!"

He shook his head sadly. "She's a glutton for it. Likes it better than ever. And she's writing better copy than anyone on the staff."

Mr. Read chewed a cigar.

"All right," he said, "fire her. Tell her she's so lousy she's fired. Then, by jinks, let her try and get a job somewhere else."

"But Mr. Read, you can't do that! "Why, she's making money for us —"

"Fire her!" said Mr. Read, "or get your time."

Len walked slowly back to the outer office.

He hesitated a moment then went to the door that led to Miss Keith's sanctum. He knocked, and a bright, cheery voice bade him enter.

He stood on the threshold a moment, staring forlornly at the dark, perfectly-shaped head that was bent over the desk.

Presently, he said: 'Miss Keith?"

"Yes," said Shirley, without looking up, "and I don't want to buy anything. Good day."

Len swallowed hard and stepped forward.

"Shirley," he said, bending over the desk, "you're fired. Will you marry me?"

Shirley tossed up her head like a deer that is startled while drinking. For one wild moment she stared at Mr. Whitten's white face and still whiter lips.

Then she said: "Yes. If you'll quit this rotten agency and start one of your own on the money I have in my own name."

"I couldn't. I couldn't let you do that. I—"

Shirley shrugged.

'O. K. she said, and bent her head. Len came around the desk and there was desperation in his eyes.

"All right," he said. "I'll do it!"

"You will!" Shirley bounced to her feet and flung her arms around his neck. 'Darling! I'll write the copy and you be the manager and we'll just have the grandest time ever."

"When will you marry me?" said Len.

"Get your hat," said Shirley, "and meet me downstairs in five minutes."

She rushed out of the office and left him standing there. Without knocking she entered the chambers of Ira Read and found her father and Mr. Read chuckling over cigars. They sobered at sight of her.

"Darling," she said, "I'm quitting this job and taking Mr. Whitten with me. We're going to open our own agency and give you a run for your money." She flew across the room and kissed her father. "Oh, daddy, I'm so happy! Len and I are going to be married! Would you like to witness the ceremony?"

Papa Keith's mouth fell open. He gaped at his daughter and then at Mr. Read. Presently he got to his feet. "Ahem!" he said. "Ahem. Ahem."

"Ahem," echoed Mr. Read.

And then because both the old goats were human and knew when they were licked, and add to this fact that Shirley was the only daughter, the hope, the joy, the light of Papa Keith's life, and you have the perfect formula for happiness.

JOBLESS INVADE TOBACCO FIELD S FOR JOBS

The great influx of transients to the little town of Delhi, Ont., in search of work in Ontario's tobacco fields, is causing great anxiety to the town authorities. Work will not commence in the tobacco fields for 10 days and in the meantime the job-seekers while away the time by playing cribbage, ABOVE. Authorities fear trouble may arise as agitators are reported working among the homeless transients, many of whom have no food.

WALL STREET

New York, Aug. 3 (AP)—The rallying fever was still in the stock market today and favored issues pushed up fractions to more than two points, a number to new highs for the year.

Profit-takers occasionally swung at the list, but, for the most part, were ineffective and prices, near the fourth hour, were not far from the best in the majority of instances. Dealings were fairly lively, although there were slow periods.

Among ascending stocks were Chrysler, U.S. Steel, Santa Fe, Great Northern, Chesapeake & Ohio, Safeway Stores, General Motors, Eastern Airlines, Celanese, Anaconda, Phelps Dodge, Westinghouse, DuPont, U.S. Gypsum, Public Service of N.J. and J. I. Case.

Gains running to around a point were scored in the Canadian group by McIntyre Porcupine, Hiram Walker and C.P.R. Dominion 4s in the bond market were ignored.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Aug. 3—(CP)—Base metal shares pulled into the lead on Toronto exchange in the early session today, supported by a higher copper export price. Hudson Bay went up to 35, nickel to 50 1-2, Waite-Amulet to 7.15, Pend Oreille to 1.55 and Sherritt to 1.09, all for moderate gains. The base metal share index was up about .85 at noon while other groups held about steady. Volume continued better than the summer average with 398,000 shares changing hands in the first three hours.

In the gold group higher prices were boarded by Macassa, Aunor, Francoeur, Towagmac and a few others. The cheaper issues continued to receive the chief attention.

Utilities moved in comparatively small volume. Foods, utilities and building shares posted more gains than losses. In the western oil group narrow gains appeared for Davies and Highwood against minor losses for Home and Okalta.

Scarcity of Eggs Advances Prices

Toronto, Aug. 3 —Light receipts sent egg prices climbing yesterday on the Toronto open produce market, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported. Trading in butter and cheese slackened almost to a standstill, with butter prices remaining unchanged and cheese easing slightly.

After firming in the morning, the egg market developed a slightly easier undertone in the graded section during the afternoon. Demand was good, however, and receipts were kept moving steadily. In the ungraded section, A-large eggs sold at 25c and A-medium at 23c, while in the graded group, A-large sold at 28c, A-medium at 26c and B-grades at 18c. Selling prices to the retail trade also advanced.

The butter market was quiet and draggy during the morning, with light receipts moving slowly. Buyers made their purchases in odd lots only and appeared to be merely taking care of immediate requirements. In the afternoon, buying dwindled to nothing and prices quoted became pure nominal. No sales of Western butter were reported all day.

Montreal Butter Soft

Montreal, Aug. 3 (CP)—Butter was a fraction easier on open produce markets here yesterday, while eggs and cheese held unchanged, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported. Potatoes were firm to up a trifle.

Creamery butter prints to retailers sold for 22½-23 cents a pound and solids for 22-22 1-2. Western butter delivered in Montreal was unquoted. Quebec No. 1 pasteurized in wholesale jobbing lots made 21 1-2. Receipts, 504 boxes.

Ontario white and colored cheese were both quoted at 11 3-4. Quebec white was quoted at 10 3-4 and colored at 10 7-8. Receipts, 2,376 boxes.

Graded egg shipments in used free cases sold at 28-29 cents dozen for A-large, 26-27 for A-medium, 19 for B-large, 15 for C. Receipts, 801 cases.

LIVESTOCK

Toronto, Aug. 3 (CP)—Calf and lamb sections held steady on the Toronto Livestock Market today while cattle trade was practically at a standstill. No prices were established for hogs. About 250 head of cattle were held from Wednesday.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Livestock Branch were: Cattle 30; calves 50; hogs 230; sheep and lambs 10.

Cattle sales were too few to establish prices. Choice veal calves brought $8.50-$9 with common to medium $5-$8.

Previous close on hogs was $10.85 for rail grades. Few lambs offered sold at $8.50-$8.75 for good ewes and wethers.

PRISON TERMS FOR TWO WOMEN

Chatham Residents Sent to Penitentiary for Three Years

London, Ont., Aug. 3—(CP)—Two women with long prison records were sent to Kingston Penitentiary for three years by Deputy Magistrate LeBel in city court today for robbing John Bicknell a 75-year-old Londoner of $60 after a tavern party.

Sentenced were Mrs. Josephine Sears, 45, colored, of Brantford and Mrs. Ruth Smith, 42, of Hamilton.

Allan Kaufman, 34, of Brantford arrested in a rooming house a week ago, was given three months for vagrancy.

Mrs. Sears, 217 pounds of belligerent womanhood, took her sentence with an ironic smile, while her white companion burst into tears as she was led from the courtroom.

Bicknell said he met the women outside a downtown beer parlor and was induced to treat them to several beers. They left about midnight and they took him down an alley where they grabbed him and robbed him of $60. Police later recovered $36 from Mrs. Sears.

'State of Insurrection'

Governor Ralph Carr declared a "state of insurrection" last night at Glenwood Springs where he had gone to meet former President Herbert Hoover, in Colorado for a fishing vacation. Adjutant-General Harold Richardson began mobilizing between 200 and 300 infantrymen, including two tank units, in the Denver vicinity. He said he would "probably call out some artillery before it's all over."

The dame site lies 158 miles west of Denver on the Blue River, between Dillon and Kremmling Colo., 1 1-2 miles above sea level.

vote myself completely to the task of getting well. Any rumors connecting my name with any positions are entirely without foundation."

Mr. Dunning was stricken near the close of the 1938 parliamentary session but recovered sufficiently to carry his Ministry through the 1939 session. He was greatly weakened when prorogation came last June and has been almost continuously under care of a physician.

Issues Statement

He issued the following statement today.:

For the past 12 months I have been trying to regain my health, but it is evident now that I cannot do so and at the same time carry out my duties as Minister of Finance, even with all the help which the Prime Minister, my colleagues in the government, and the officials and staff of the department have so generously given.

For this reason, the Prime Minister has my resignation, effective at his convenience.

My medical advisers confidently assure me of complete recovery if I can be free from work and responsibility for a sufficient period.

I have no plans for the future, except to devote myself completely to the task of getting well. Any rumors connecting my name with any position are entirely without foundation.

I have advised my constituents in Queen's County, Prince Edward Island, that I shall be unable to accept nomination as a candidate at the forthcoming convention.

General Order Issued to Arrest I. R. A. Leader

London, Aug. 3 (CP)—The Home Office today sent a general order to authorities at all United Kingdom ports and air fields to arrest Sean Russell, head of the illegal Irish Republican Army, if he tried to enter Great Britain.

Russell, who was jailed at Detroit while the King and Queen were in the vicinity, was reported several days ago to have arrived in London but officials believe he now is hiding somewhere in County Cork.

The Home Office issued similar instructions regarding a second Irish Republican leader whose identity was not revealed. Scotland Yard said this man was in Dublin and was understood to plan to come to England to reorganize the I.R.A. terrorist campaign.

Police meanwhile intensified their round-up suspects in the United Kingdom and placed them aboard ships enroute to Eire as fast as they were arrested and deportation papers signed.

The first orders forbidding suspected terrorists to enter England were signed by Home Secretary Sir Samuel Hoare last night and 12 new deportation orders were issued bringing the total number of such edicts to 37.

NO NEW POLIO CASES

Sarnia, Ont., Aug. 3.—(CP)—There were no additions to Sarnia's list of infantile paralysis cases today. The only development was the arrival of a veterinary surgeon from the Ontario Health Department. This officer, Dr. Woolner, will be associated with other provincial authorities in attempts to find the cause of the outbreak. He will delve into the farm animal and household pet angle.

GOERING'S PAPER TALKS OF EMPIRE IN EVENT OF WAR

Declares Almost All Empire Would Go to Aid of Great Britain

REFERS TO AFRICA

Canada 'Must be Expected to Hurry to England's Side More or Less Quickly'

Berlin, Aug. 3—(CP Cable) — The National Zeitung of Essen, Field Marshal Hermann Goering's newspaper, today said almost the entire empire would go to the aid of Great Britain in the event of war.

South Africa was the only Dominion willing and able to remain neutral, the newspaper said, "but we must not forget the contradiction between the otherwise realistic and sensible political attitude of the union and its egoistic hunger for power over the mandated territory of southwest Africa (formerly a German colony).

Eire will not be able to remain neutral because Britain "can exercise immediate pressure on this Dominion and moreover Britain might win over Ireland by fulfilling the latter's 'last demands.'"

New Zealand to Join From Start

Canada, the paper continued, "must be expected to hurry to England's side more or less quickly." New Zealand was likely to join from the beginning "for ideological reasons."

The influence of the "English upper class should ensure India's assistance though this might be rendered partly ineffective by the anti-English lower class.

Australia would make "some gesture on behalf of London" in the event of a European war but if the conflict extended to the Pacific she "will try to keep out of the line of fire. Whether she can do so however depends not on Australia or England but on the attitude of certain opponents."

168 Million Young Trees Are Distributed

Toronto, Aug. 3—(CP)—Ontario is engaged in a vast tree-planting campaign, under which 168,000,000 baby trees have been distributed by the Forestry Branch of the Ontario Government for planting.

Provincial Forester. J. Zavitz has charge of the scheme under which trees may be planted for as little as $3 or $4 an acre. Waste lands on which crops cannot be grown will receive most of the trees.

"Planted forests in Ontario are too young yet to give accurate data as to financial returns," Zavitz said. "But we do know that in Europe such plantations produce almost one cord of wood a year, per acre."

Twelve counties in the province have launched "municipal forests" and in all about 78,000 acres of waste farmland have been turned into preserves by the department.

Air Marshal Predicts Canadian Air Force Will be Real Threat

Vancouver, Aug. 3 (CP)—Air Marshall W. A. Bishop, V.C., said Wednesday "there is a real danger of a fight ahead of us" and predicted that "if called upon, the new Royal Canadian Air Force will outdo the magnificient record" established in the last war.

The Canadian war ace addressed a luncheon meeting of 500 leading Vancouver citizens under auspices of the Service Clubs Council on "the air defence of Canada."

Speaking of the possibility of a new war, he said: "Canada will be in this fight because she cannot keep out of it. She will be battling, not for the defence of the United Kingdom nor in the general interests of the Empire, but for her own survival."

The "surest guarantee of world peace," he said, is a "show of overwhelming force" by a United British Empire, and development of Canada's air force is the greatest contribution the Dominion can make to the program.

Air Marshal Bishop said the Empire with its heritage of democracy and freedom, was menaced "by nations that were a few years ago insignificant powers."

Subject to Attack

Canada itself was subject to attack. In addition, the Dominion would be the strategic point of attack for an invasion on the United States by a foreign power. "History proves that isolation as a practical policy has been dead more than 20 years."

Speaking of the rebuilding of the Canadian Air Force, the Air Marshal said "wonderful results have been accomplished and new equipment is being received almost daily."

Canada, he added, "has a tremendous potential reserve of pilots." During the war they appeared like "dandelions in a lawn." And since then experienced civilian and military pilots have been produced.

"We have no fear on this score in case of war or emergency."

CHINESE QUARTER NOW THREATENED

Japanese May be Forced to Ease Blockade of British Concession

Tientsin, Aug. 3 (AP)—Flood waters of Hopeh Province streams appeared likely today to accomplish what British protests have failed to do—force Japanese to ease the blockade of Tientsin's British and French concessions.

The rising Hai River endangered two bridges upstream from the French concession. If they are carried away, Japanese will be forced to direct all trans-river traffic in the area over the International Bridge, one end of which is in the concession.

Such a routing would require, for example, that traffic from the Japanese concession to the Italian concession go through the French area. Thus it was believed that if the flood waters rise further Japanese may be forced to lift the restrictions under which persons entering or leaving the French and British concessions since the blockade was imposed June 14 have been permitted to pass barriers.

The Chinese quarter of Tientsin was threatened by the rising water. Dikes appeared near collapse. The Pelping-Tientsin Highway was submerged and waters lapped at ballast along the railway line between the two cities in some places. The Hai River, which flows into the Hai, broke its banks near Tientsin, destroying dikes and carrying away hundreds of peasant homes. More than 50,000 Chinese were reported homeless.

The anti-British campaign continued unabated in North China. Four British missionaries, including Rt. Rev. Thomas Scott, American Bishop of Shantung, had to leave Tienfu because of anti-British agitation. Their departure for Tsingtao brought to more than 50 the total of British missionaries thus forced from North China stations.

3 LOCAL JUVENILES HELD AT KINGSTON

Three Belleville juveniles stole an automobile from the J. B. Boyce parking lot on Front Street and wrecked the vehicle near Odessa late last night. The trio of youths were later arrested by Traffic Officer Henry Jillings, Napanee, and lodged in the city jail at Kingston on charges of motor car theft.

Belleville police were notified of the theft, wreck and apprehension of the culprits and when the authorities confronted the Boyce garage employeec of the theft, the vehicle had not been missed by the used car lot employees until the police revealed the fact. None of the lads sustained serious injury. Acting Chief Arthur Harman was informed. The boys will be brought back to Belleville this evening and placed on trial tomorrow.

REPORT STATES SHIP SINKING

Wireless Operator Says Crew Takes to Lifeboats After Explosion

Jacksonville, Fla., Aug. 3 (AP)—A wireless operator who had flashed dramatic but perplexing distress calls that his ship was afire, advised early today the crew had taken to lifeboats and the craft was sinking 90 miles southwest of Miami.

"No lives were lost except the second mate who is the regular wireless operator," he reported in what he said was a final message.

Earlier he had told how the regular operator had both legs broken in what apparently was an explosion. He sent his first SOS shortly after 10 p.m.

The coastguard cutter Pandora left Key West for the last position given by the operator, 24:30 north 79:20 west. A coastguard plane from Miami base was expected to make a flight over the position.

The spot where the ship was finally reported sinking was the fourth position given by the operator.

Even the identity of the ship was a mystery.

The operator gave the name as the Dunkwa, which is the name of a British oil tanker out of Liverpool but Lloyd's reported the Dunkwa was in Rotterdam.

Coastguard officials were perplexed by the incoherent nature of some of the messages and the number of positions given, but said the confusion possibly was due to the fact the sender was inexperienced and working under adverse conditions.

MARITAL RIFT ENDS IN BLAST

Husband, Who Sets Off Explosion, is Killed With His Wife, Her Daughter Injured

Oregon City, Ore., Aug. 3.—(AP)—An estranged husband and wife were killed in a blast set off by the husband here yesterday, the aftermath of a marital rift, and the mother's 15-year-old daughter was probably fatally injured.

Lee Phillippy, 40, Lone Elder, Ore farmer, set off the charge when he called at the trailer home of his wife and stepdaughter, Ruth Connerly, daughter of Mrs. Phillippy by a former marriage, had rented after their estrangement three weeks ago, Deputy Sheriff Tom Stevenson reported.

Phillippy was blown to bits and Mrs. Phillippy's body hurled 150 feet into a tree. The girl, who answered her stepfather's knock on the door and screamed a warning to her mother, is in an Oregon city hospital near death.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Ellison, neighbors, said they noticed Phillippy driving around the neighborhood several times, saw him park in front of the trailer home and leave the car, carrying a small box.

CRIME DRIVE BEGUN IN U. S.

'Clearing House of Crime' to be Set Up in New York City

New York, Aug. 3 (AP)—The United States Government today organized one of the biggest crime drives in its history—a coordinated campaign to smash a "crime trust", made up of loosely-linked underworld mobs operating over the United States.

United States Attorney John Cahill, after a conference with J. Edgar Hoover, Chief of the Federal Bureau of Investigation said a national "clearing house of crime" would be set up here to make the drive effective.

The drive will be set in motion Monday with the summoning of a Federal Grand Jury before which Cahill said would be placed a 500,000-word "Encyclopedia of Crime" compiled by Federal agents. It gives names, dates and complete available information on rackets and gangsters in every state.

Those likeable Dead End Kids are seen in "Hell's Kitchen," now at the Belle with Bob Hope and Shirley Ross in "Some Like It Hot".

IMPERSONATOR

By R. H. WILKINSON

Fat, paunchy, Ed Bradford, owner of the Bradford vaudeville circuit rolled a cigar between his thick lips and squinted at the young man on the opposite side of the desk.

"You're a female impersonator, eh? So what?"

"So", said the young man, "my name is Johnnie Shrewood. And I want a place on the Bradford circuit. I'll make you money, Mr. Bradford."

The fat man shook his head.

"No go, son. Business is lousy and getting lousier every minute. You gotta have something pretty special to interest me these days."

"I have got something special," said Johnnie.

He swallowed, and seemed to get a grip on himself.

"I'm good, Mr. Bradford. My act kills 'em."

"Then why aren't you signed up?"

The ghost of a smile flickered across Bradford's face. He waved airily, though his demeanor was not unkindly.

"Sorry, son. Better try the movies."

A sort of desperate look came into Johnnie's eyes. He leaned forward.

"Listen, Mr. Bradford, I've got to have a job. I've simply got to. We—I haven't worked for months, and when you know you've got something good—it kind of makes you mad."

Suddenly he seemed to remember where he was and to whom he was talking. But the memory served only to temporarily suppress his enthusiasm.

"Mr. Bradford, I've heard that you're a sporting man and a square shooter. I'd like to make you a proposition."

"What kind of a proposition?"

"Listen," said Johnnie. "I'm an impersonator, and I think I'm pretty good. You've been in the show business for thirty years, and you think you know the game, I mean, you've seen 'em come and you've seen 'em go. Old timers and beginners. There isn't much you don't know about vaudeville. You'd be a hard man to fool. Now suppose I fooled you with my act—"

Bradford broke into a deep-throated laugh.

'Fool me! Listen, son—"

Johnnie grinned.

"Silly, isn't it? Well, look; I'll step outside and climb into my makeup. Then I'll return here. If you don't think I'm good enough for the Bradford circuit you can say so and I'll scram out of here, otherwise I get a contract."

"What do you mean, otherwise?"

Johnnie shrugged and smiled a little.

"Otherwise I'll let you use your own judgment.

Fat Ed Bradford rolled his cigar and his eyes twinkled.

"O. K. kid. I ain't got nothing much to do this afternoon. You put on a show for me and I'll buy you a dinner into the bargain. You look hungry."

"I am hungry," said Johnnie, "but I want a job worse than a dinner."

He stood up.

"Give me five minutes, Mr. Bradford."

Bradford, amused, nodded. Johnnie went out. Five minutes later the fat man heard a knock on his door. In response to his "come in" the door opened and a pretty blond stepped inside. Bradford stared at her. Her hair looked genuine but her make-up was a little too pronounced—lips a bit redder than they should be, shadows under her eyes a little too deep. The fat man's experienced and expert eye traveled over her slim form. He shook his head sadly.

"Sorry," he said, and shrugegd.

"Between you and me, kid, I expected something better."

"I beg your pardon," said the blond.

Bradford looked at her closely. The cigar in his mouth stopped rolling.

"I said you were lousy. You don't get the job."

"What job?" said the blond.

She was obviously quite bewildered, and beginning to be a little annoyed. She went on:

"Are you Mr. Bradford? Mr. Ed Bradford?"

Bradford took a step closer. He squinted, relaxed. No, he wasn't slipping. He knew what he was talking about. Thirty years in the business! No young squirt could fool him.

"Take off the wig, kid, and we'll go out and grab some dinner. And cut out this nonsense. There ain't any use to carry it further."

The blond arched her brows. Her lips pressed together in a straight red line. She looked at him angrily.

"Mr. Bradford, will you kindly explain what this is all about. I came here to see you on business, and you've done nothing but act like—a—a crazy man. You might at least offer me a chair, and then tell me the joke so I can laugh, too."

Bradford began rolling his cigar again, folding his hands behind him. He was beginning to feel a little annoyed himself. This business was going too far.

"Now listen, son, why not be a good sport and take it like a man? You ain't got no kick coming. You made the terms of this proposition yourself, and I accepted 'em. You even admitted that old Ed Bradford couldn't be fooled. I've been in this racket too long. I've seen better'n you and worse'n you, but the way things are today I can't sign you on. Now get that wig off and climb outter those togs and I'll buy you a dinner, and we'll part friends."

For a moment the blond hesitated. She seemed at once angry and amused. After a moment she came over and stood quite close to Mr. Bradford.

"Mr. Bradford," she said, looking up at him, blue eyes wide, "are you quite sure you now to whom you're talking?"

She smiled.

"I've no doubt but what Ed Bradford is the great man he seems to think himself, and it appears that I interrupted some kind of an act that was being tried out in here. However, your secretary told me to walk right in, and I have some important business—"

Ed Bradford made a sound in his throat, followed by an angry gesture. Before the blond knew what he was about he had reached up, grabbed a handful of her perfectly coiffured hair in his fist, and yanked.

Astonishingly, alarmingly, hte thing that Ed Bradford had expected to happen didn't. The blond let out a little cry of agony, but her hair stuck.

Ed Bradford's eyes bulged and he gulped. For a moment it seemed that he wasn't going to grasp the significance of the thing he'd done. Then slowly a red wave beginning at the base of his neck, mounted into his face and up to the roots of his hair. He let go the handful of blond tresses as if suddenly they had become charged with electricity. He mumbled something in his throat and sat down, his face a picture of guilt and incredulity.

The blond turned and crossed to the wall mirror.

Bradford stared at her stupidly as she rearranged her hair.

"Lock here," he said, "this is all a mistake. I mistook you for a young feller who claimed to be a female impersonator. We made a bet, and he went outside to change, and when you came in I thought it was him. I woulda swore it was him, same features, same eyes same everything. But—but—well, I'm sorry. If there's anything I can do".

"There's no need to feel sorry," said the blond. "And there's plenty you can do, Mr. Ed Bradford. You said if I fooled you you'd give me a contract."

"Eh?" Bradford thrust forward his jaw. The blond turned and smiled at him. Specks danced before that fat man's eyes. He blinked. The face beneath the golden tresses had suddenly become that of Johnnie Sherwood again. Bradford swore under his breath.

"Listen", he said, "what is this? Who are you? Or what are you? I mean, which are you? Man or woman?"

"Since you don't know," said the blond, "I guess I fooled you, and I guess I win the bet. However, to ease your mind, I'll tell you I'm a woman, male impersonator, and I guess you'll have to admit I'm pretty good at it."

"I guess, said Ed, "I will." And he got to his feet and crossed to his desk. The incredulous, bewildered look was still on his face as he fumbled in a drawer and presently produced a contract form.

URGE IMPROVEMENTS IN JAIL

Toronto, Aug. 2—(CP)—Improvements in Hamilton's antiquated jail to prevent further escapes have been recommended by Prisons Inspector T. M. Gourlay, in his report to Hon. Harry Nixon, Provincial Secretary following his investigation of the escape of John Chylinsky early yesterday.

Inspector Gourlay suggested that at least one corridor should be made specially secure and that all outside windows should be strengthened.

CANADIAN DEPARTMENT STORES LIMITED

MOON ON THE WATER

by Ruby M. Ayres

Jane glanced towards the window. "There's a car stopping at the gate," she said.

Dulcie gave a mock sigh. "That will be Josh," she said in a long-suffering voice. "He's always so abominably punctual. Go down and talk to him till I'm ready, there's a pet—and, Jane you might powder your nose first, it's shiny."

Jane went slowly downstairs to find that Josh Hallard had already been admitted and was in the hall with a very impressed Mary relieving him of his hat and coat.

He was an aristocratic-looking man with grey hair and a slight stoop, and as Jane went towards him he smiled and bowed.

"I'm Dulcie's sister," Jane explained. "She won't be a moment, but——"

"Unpunctuality is one of her charms," he said.

She led the way to the drawing room, distressed to find that the fire was smoking.

"Oh, I'm so sorry——" She opened one of the windows a little way and then hurried back to poke the coals into order. "The wind is in the east," she said. "And when it is, this chimney always seems to smoke. Please sit down—what a lovely car you have; I saw you drive up."

Hallard was looking at her. "Are you Jane, or Pamela?" he asked.

"Jane. I suppose you have heard all about me?"

"Yes."

They smiled at each other, and Jane thought, "I think you're nice—I think I'm going to like you."

She had the feeling that her rather old frock did not matter to him, or her unruly hair, and that perhaps he, too, was thinking that they might be friends.

INSTALMENT 15.

"Will you have a cigarette?" Hallard asked.

"Thank you," Jane said.

He had a gold case. "He would," Jane thought drily, but it was a nice gold case, very plain and good looking, and not at all nouveau riche—but then perhaps he wasn't.

"And you don't really look fifty," she told him subconsciously, "Even though your hair is grey," and then she thought how distinguished grey hair could be, and she felt sorry that Dulcie should speak of him so lightly and callously.

"I am sorry Dulcie is so late," she said, but he laughed.

"I never mind waiting," he told her. "You see my time is very much my own—unfortunately."

"You mean—you have no business to attend to?" she asked. And he answered that all his life he had been a man of leisure.

"Isn't that nice?" she asked.

"I think it is one of the world's tragedies," he answered.

She liked him for that, and found herself wondering whether this man cared any more for Dulcie than she did for him, or whether it was just her pretty face which was the attraction.

"You must meet my father," she said. "He——" And then she broke off as Dulcie came into the room.

"I'm so sorry," she gave him both her hands. "But I had a bad night and overslept myself, didn't I, Jane? This is Jane," she explained. "I hope she's been nice to you."

"Exceedingly nice," Hallard answered.

Dulcie began to pull on her gloves.

"Is it cold out?" she asked, knowing perfectly well that it was. "But we shan't be cold in that lovely car, shall we? It's a most wonderful car," she told Jane enthusiastically. "The kind I would leave home for at any moment!" She laughed. "Jane is shocked when I say things like that," she told Hallard mischievously.

Above her dainty head Hallard's eyes met Jane's with a smile of understanding, and she felt as if some one had lit a little fire in her cold heart.

"Well, I'm ready at last," Dulcie anounced. She picked up her handbag. "Father is still in bed, Josh, or I should have liked you to meet him, but perhaps some other time——"

"I hope many other times," Hallard answered, and Jane thought with a little glow: "He doesn't notice that the house is shabby; he's above all that sort of thing. I wonder if he is really in love with Dulcie?" She went with them to the door.

"Expect me when you see me," Dulcie said gaily; she turned to blow Jane a kiss from her finger-tips.

Hallard held out his hand. "Good-bye—at least I hope it is not good-bye."

"I hope so, too," Jane answered, and when presently she shut the door and went back to the drawing room she realised in amazement that she felt happier than she had since the day Dulcie came home.

Gavin returned about six o'clock that evening. Jane heard his step a long way down the road and recognised it, but a new sort of pride prevented her from giving way to her natural impulse and rushing to meet him; she just stayed where she was by the fire, though her fingers tightened their hold of the book she was reading, and her heart began to race.

She heard the door-bell ring and Mary crossing the hall from the kitchen; Gavin came into the room.

Jane half turned in her chair. "Hullo!" she said, and thought what a stupid greeting it was.

"All alone?" Gavin asked.

"Yes."

He came forward and bent to kiss her cheek. "How's the head?" he asked.

"Much better, thank you." She put the book aside. "Would you like some tea—or is it too late?"

"I won't have anything, thanks. I must go back to my revered Aunt for dinner, I suppose."

He stood beside her, holding his hands to the warmth of the fire. "It's surprisingly cold," he said.

As if they had been married for years and years, Jane thought desolately.

Hullo! Will you have any tea? It's surprisingly cold.

No expression of pleasure from Gavin at finding her alone—no excited account of what he had been doing, and somehow it seemed impossible for her to be the first to introduce the subject.

"Dulcie's friend called for her this morning," she said.

"One of the Lawsons, do you mean?" he asked.

"No, a Mr. Hallard—he came in a most magnificent car, and he was nice—I liked him."

"A bloated millionaire, evidently," Gavin said, and there was a faint bitterness in his voice.

"All Dulcie's friends seem to have money," Jane admitted.

There was a little silence which she broke to say gently, "You look tired, Gavin."

He half sighed. "I am—I hate London and stuffy offices and poring over legal documents. I am beginning to think there is a good deal to be said for the Canadian backwoods after all."

Jane's heart lost a beat. It was hardly encouraging, and she realized how much she had counted on this moment and being told that everything was satisfactorily settled.

"I wonder whether you would really rather go back to Canada?" she said. She kept her eyes on the glowing coals, and when he did not answer she laughed. "Perhaps Dulcie was not so far wrong in her fortune-telling when she said she could see you crossing the water again." She wanted to add another word "alone", but it refused to pass her lips.

Gavin made a little gesture of impatience.

"Oh—that—rubbish," he said.

The silence fell once, more, and this time Jane made no attempt to break it. They were almost like strangers, she thought in despair—two people who did not even particularly like each other; all their happy comradeship seemed to have been lost, and the heaviness of misunderstanding lay between them.

He said at last, very bluntly, "Don't you want to know what happened today?"

She flushed. "Of course, I want to know. Is it—all settled, Gavin?"

He shook his head. "Not finally. The lawyers are still haggling over a few points—trying to get every shilling they can for themselves, I suppose."

"Oh," she said.

Armed Camp Seen 25 Years After War to End War

Correspondent Says Every Factor for War Present and Few of Real Essentials for Peace in European Situation

SWING FROM WAR?

Britain's Expanding Might Among Factors Which May Steer World Away from Conflict — Some Leaders of Reich Said to Fear War on Two Frontiers as Fatal to Germany

By J. F. SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Aug. 4—(CP)—Twenty-five years after "the war to end all wars" plunged the world into a conflict which cost millions of lives, Europe today is an armed camp.

Every factor necessary for war is present and very few of the real essentials for peace.

On the anniversary of that day, Aug. 4, 1914, when "the lights went out across Europe," the situation perhaps may be described best in these words: War in Europe is inevitable unless Germany—and that means Herr Hitler—exhibits some moderating change in policy. It is almost inconceivable things can go along as they are without producing war.

No Real Peace Today

It is impossible to support the view peace, real peace, exists today. The next few months, perhaps weeks, will tell the story and the decision, as far as it rests on one man, will be made by Adolf Hitler, who 25 years ago was unknown even in his native Austria.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Aug. 4—(CP)—The weather has been moderately warm from the Great Lakes eastward with thundershowers occurring in many parts of Ontario and Quebec, while in the Prairie Provinces it has been generally fair and quite warm. A fairly deep disturbance is centred near the east coast of Hudson Bay with a trough extending southward to the middle United States while high pressure covers the Western Provinces and the Grand Banks.

Lake Superior: Moderate easterly winds; fair today and Saturday and becoming somewhat warmer.

Manitoba: Moderate westerly winds; fair and warm. Saturday—Partly cloudy and warm with scattered thundershowers.

Saskatchewan: Partly cloudy and warm today and Saturday with scattered thundershowers.

Alberta: Partly cloudy with scattered thundershowers. Saturday—Partly cloudy and moderately warm.

Paris—57, cloudy.

Why the Weather!

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Cumulus Clouds! There seems to be nothing more peaceful than these superb, billowy masses of cloud so conspicuous at this time of the year. While their shapes do indicate internal commotion, it is when they develop into thunder clouds that they are at their worst. One balloonist was drawn up into such a cloud; he thought that the coolness would condense the gas and let him down; but no, the internal winds took charge, and he was raised, lowered and tossed about violently 8 or 10 times before he was tossed one side and descended to the ground in safety. But while in the cloud neither throwing out ballast or letting out gas had any effect on the control of the balloon.

Big Advance In Business Is Forecast

Washington, Aug. 4—(AP)—Business is on the threshold of a big advance, in the opinion of John Anes, Acting Secretary of the United States Treasury.

Conditions look better by far than they did 30 to 600 days ago, Hanes told reporters yesterday. He based his forecast on three factors: The piling up of forward orders at factories, the low state of merchandise inventories from which orders could be filled, and the "general state of business."

COL. DREW LOOKS TO PREMIER FOR CLEAR STATEMENT

Says He Should "Explain Clearly" Canada's Position in World Affairs

PLAIN WORDS NEEDED

Simcoe, Ont., Aug. 4—(CP)—Lieut.-Col. George A. Drew, Ontario Conservative leader, looks to Prime Minister Mackenzie King to "explain clearly" Canada's position in world affairs when he addresses a dinner in Toronto Tuesday night commemorating his 20 years' leadership of the Liberal party.

The Prime Minister's address "will be of the utmost importance to all Canadians" and will be "perhaps the most important speech of his life," Col. Drew told the Norfolk Conservative Association last night. He said the existing international situation demands "plain talking and plain words" from Mr. Mackenzie King.

CANADIAN SITE OF OLD FALLS BRIDGE WILL NOT BE USED

Niagara Falls, Ont., Aug. 4—(CP)—The Niagara Falls Bridge Commission will not use the Canadian site of the old Falls View Bridge for the new Rainbow structure which is to replace it, C. Ellison Kaumeyer, Secretary of the Commission said yesterday.

He said it is proposed to use the Falls View Bridge site on the United States side, but to locate the Canadian approach on the border between Bender and Newman hills.

The Falls View Bridge was destroyed by ice jams in January, 1938.

TERMS TO END STRIKE

Detroit, Aug. 4—(AP)— Terms for ending the month-old walkout of General Motors skilled workers were agreed upon early today, subject to ratification by union officials and the strikers.

If the proposals— which were not announced—are approved, it was considered likely that work on 1940 automobiles, delayed by the strike, could begin soon.

KILLED BY FATHER'S CAR

Peterborough, Ont., Aug. 4—(CP)—Two-year-old Helen McArthur was injured fatally last night when crushed beneath an automobile being driven from a garage by her father, Rev. William McArthur, pastor of Bethany Tabernacle Church.

Mr. McArthur left the child in a high chair in the house. She apparently climbed out of the chair and ran outside to watch her father leave and fell under the wheels.

Action Follows Threat of Danzig on Tuesday to Ignore Frontiers

Danzig, Aug. 4—(AP)—Danzig authorities announced today a pontoon bridge which would provide the only bridge connection over the Vistula River between the Free City of Danzig and German East Prussia was completed and ready for installation.

Announcement of the new bridge follows a threat on Tuesday by Danzig Nazi leaders to ignore the established frontiers after a revival of the "herring and margarine war" between Poland and Danzig.

(The Polish press today discussed the possibility that Danzig Nazis were preparing forcibly to open the frontier between the Free City and East Prussia—a step in the direction of incorporation of Danzig in the Reich.)

Chinese Attack Offices of British Export Corporation

Tientain, Aug. 4 (AP)—Anti-British violence broke out anew today when a mob of Chinese attacked officers of the British International Export Corporation, smashed furniture and other equipment, and threw it into the Hai River. Britons said the attack was instigated by Japan.

British and Chinese employees of the corporation took refuge on the adjoining property of an American concern, the Texas Oil Company.

After destroying typewriters, calculators and all other movable equipment in the British company's office, the demonstrators climbed into trucks and drove away through Japanese controlled territory.

CZECH MOTHER, TWO CHILDREN PLUNGE TO DEATH

Members of Wealthy Family, Their Fortune Disappeared When Germany Absorbed Czecho - Slovakia

HUSBAND STUNNED

Chicago, Aug. 4—(AP)—A middle aged mother and her two young sons—members of a wealthy Czecho-Slovakian family whose fortune disappeared in the German absorption of their homeland —plunged to death last night from the 13th floor of the Congress Hotel.

The three bodies struck almost simultaneously on the sidewalk of Michigan Avenue. They landed near several pedestrians.

The spectacular leap occurred about six hours after the woman had registered at the hotel as Mrs. Della Frank of New York. Pictures found in a bag in her room and other evidence enabled police investigators to establish her real identity.

Farmer Rounds Up Suspicious Pair Who Turn Out to Be Police Officers

Battle Creek, Mich., Aug. 4—(CP) — Identification cards don't mean a thing to farmer Miles Miller when a bandit chase is on. Miller has been warned to keep a lookout for suspicious characters on his wooded farm after a robbery at Battle Creek. When he came upon Police Chief Hugh Gordon and Detective Charles Thayer, he stuck out his shotgun and marched them two miles to posse headquarters.

Asked later why they hadn't identified themselves to the farmer, the officers reported Miller as saying, 'you can't fool me. All you smart guys have badges and stuff like that.'

25 YEARS' DIFFERENCE IN BRITISH PREPAREDNESS

Britain Spends as Much Every Six Weeks Now as She Did in a Year before Great War — Every Branch of Service Greatly Expanded — Contrasts with State of Armaments on August 4, 1914.

London, Aug. 4—(CP)—The 25th anniversary today of Great Britain's entry into the Great War found the nation in a preparedness period, calm but slightly puzzled by the difference in tone of speeches of two cabinet ministers.

The optimistic observation of Sir Thomas Inskip, Dominions Secretary, that war "is unlikely" and "the government has good reason for saying that" was the subject of wide discussion. Many wondered how to reconcile it with Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax's sober assertion that "the next few weeks or months may prove critical."

Viscount Halifax told the House of Lords that "the next few weeks or months may prove critical" and "I cannot encourage anyone to feel complacent about the situation in which the world finds itself."

Anxiety Felt Says Halifax

"I do not think the anxiety is confined to the people in this country," he continued. "It is felt by the people of all countries and therefore we cannot be complacent. It would not be in accordance with the facts and possibilities as we believe them to exist."

Lord Halifax said the government had done everything possible to "strengthen deterrents to war," adding:

"It only remains for us to keep calm, and so far as we may, to keep united, to avoid exaggerated attention to rumor and to be neither over-confident nor over-pessimistic."

Most newspapers noted the anniversary of Britain's declaration of war on Germany in 1914 following German refusal to comply with a 24-hour ultimatum to respect Belgium's neutrality.

Expansion of Services

They also emphasized Britain's present state of armament. During the year before the war Britain spent £77,000,000 (currently $382,000,000) on military and naval preparations. Now she is spending that much every six weeks or £730,000,000 ($3, 516,400,000) this year.

In the summer of 1914 she had 247,000 regulars in the army and around 500,000 reserves. Now, with a regular army of 208,000 plus reserves currently engaging in huge training exercises and new conscripts, Britain has around 1,000,000 men. The navy is about the same now as then.

The biggest difference is in the air force. In 1914 Britain had 822 men and 100 serviceable planes. Now she has 120,000 officers and men in the Royal Air Force plus 75,000 reserves. Although exact figures are not made public, the best estimates are that she has 2,300 first-line planes out of a total of 5,000 and is adding to these at the rate of 600 monthly.

Civil Preparedness

Another big difference is the tremendous civil preparedness program now in effect with 2,000,000 men and women enrolled and under constant training for police, fire and air raid precautions duty in the event of war.

Britain now has a full reserve fleet manned for manoeuvres. The R.A.F., with more than 1,300 planes taking part, will stage practices next week and London will be included in a huge blackout test.

Typical of the British attitude today was the comment by The Daily Mail that comparison of the 1914 with the 1939 state of preparedness "gives us reason for pride and for confidence that this time war may be averted."

JAPAN BEING FORCED TOWARD MILITARY PACT

Germany, Italy and Japan May Form Pact at Any Moment

MEET IN ITALY

Official Says "Events" Are Forcing Japan Into This Action

Tokyo, Aug. 4—(AP)—Japan is being forced toward a military alliance with Germany and Italy because of United States abrogation of her Japanese trade treaty and British resistance on the north China currency question, a high government official said today.

Conclusion of a military pact may come at any moment, he said, but he professed ignorance of the meeting of the Japanese Ambassadors to Italy and Germany, in progress at Villa D'este, Italy ,or the subject of the Villa D'este conference.

The official first said "events" were forcing Japan into an arms alliance with the axis powers and then added that by "events" he meant the July 27 notice from Washington that the United States after six months would cancel the 1911 treaty, and Great Britain's stand on the currency question.

BANDITS ESCAPE AFTER HOLDUP

Provincial Bank at Stoney Point Robbed of $1,600 Today

Stoney Point, Ont., Aug. 4 — (CP)—Four bandits escaped with $1,600 from a branch of the Provincial Bank of Canada here today after locking manager James Griffin in a washroom. Three gunmen entered the bank, while a fourth sat at the wheel of an automobile ready to drive toward Windsor, 25 miles west.

Griffin was alone when the bandits entered and he offered no resistance. The men stripped the vault and till of cash and ran from the building. Griffin soon escaped from the washroom and raised an alarm.

Police Chief Jerry Desjardins of Tecumseh, chased the bandit car to St. Joachim, eight miles west of Stoney Point, where it cut across railway tracks just ahead of a train to evade him.

The robbers' car was believed stolen in Ridgetown earlier today.

Boat Owners And Police Reach Agreement

Cannes, France, Aug. 4—(CP-Havas)—A "Gentleman's agreement" between police and boat owners apparently offered a guarantee last night that the privacy of the bathing beach at the Duke and Duchess of Windsor's villa here would be respected.

The Duke complained recently that boat owners were bringing parties of sightseers to the beach where they came to glimpse the Duke and Duchess from the water's edge. Some were said to have carried binoculars in order to obtain a better view.

The police explained they could not ban boat owners from taking their boats near the Duke's Chateau de la Croe, but announced today they had obtained promises fro mthose who ran the excursions to drop their lucrative trade in this direction, and take sightseers elsewhere.

British Premier Says Blood Boils To Hear of Insults

However He Tells Commons Britain Realizes That Use of Force Might Imperil British Subjects in Japanese-Controlled Sections of China and This Has Been Taken Into Consideration

Says Britain Might Find it Necessary to Send a Fleet to Far East 'in Certain Circumstances' — Situation in Europe Has Prevented Firmer Stand With Japan

London, Aug. 4—(CP)—Prime Minister Chamberlain declared today in a discussion of Anglo-Japanese difficulties that Great Britain might find it necessary to send a fleet to the far east "in certain circumstances."

"I do not say this as a threat, but only as a warning," declared the Prime Minister.

He also indicated Britain would have taken a much firmer stand against Japan from the start if it had not been for the critical European situation.

Speaking in foreign affairs debate in the House of Commons, Mr. Chamberlain said:

"Sometimes I hear members say, 'Why don't you do the same as United States does.' It is hardly necessary for me to point to the fundamental difference between the United States and its isolation from Europe and this country.

Insults to British by Japanese

"Even in the presence of those insults and injuries which have been inflicted upon British people in China by the Japanese we must remember there are limits to what we can do at this time to help our people there.

"At the present moment we have now got in the far east a fleet superior to that of the Japanese. We have such a fleet here. In certain circumstances we might find it necessary to send a fleet out there."

(Britain normally maintains in far eastern waters only her China squadron, which includes no capital ships. Commanded by Admiral Sir Percy Noble the squadron includes three 10,000-ton cruisers, one 9,100-ton cruiser, one aircraft

KEEP OUT 'ISMS'

Niagara Falls, Ont., Aug. 4—(CP)—Confidence in the future of the weekly newspaper in Canada was expressed by M. Lyle Spencer, director of the School of Journalism, Syracuse, N.Y., in an address last night before nearly 300 delegates to the 20th annual convention of the Canadian Weekly Newspaper Association.

"If there is any field of publishing in which I have confidence today, it is the weekly newspaper," said Mr. Spencer, pointing out that a decrease in recent years in the number of daily newspapers in Canada and the United States had been accompanied by a noticeable increase in weekly publications.

Juveniles Spending Grandpa's Money Faster Than He Could Cache It

Detroit, Aug. 4—(CP)— Though Fred Muratski, 66, is a thrifty sort of person he found the nest egg he had been piling up for years was getting smaller instead of increasing. Things reached a crisis when he learned one of the money caches around his home contained $104 instead of a former $400.

After investigation, police arrested Muratski's 13-year-old grand son and three other juveniles who had been treating all their friends royally. It was estimated the children had spent $2,400 over a period of two years with the biggest purchase a $400 automobile.

2½ MILE SWIM BY LOCAL YOUTH

Murray Jones, 16-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Jones of this city, successfully swam across Crowe Lake this week, a distance reputed to be nearly two and one-half miles. Young Jones was accompanied by a canoeist during his long gruelling swim. According to residents of the district it is several years since any person has successfully swam across Crowe Lake, a feat that commands considerable energy and durability.

Three Recommendations For Pension Rejected

Out of twenty-two recommendations for Old Age Pensions placed before the Hastings County Committee for Pensions and Mothers' Allowance nineteen were recommended and three rejected at a special meeting of the committee yesterday.

Three appeals for readjustment were recommended by the committee which met under the chairmanship of Mr. Roy Sills.

MOIRA LAKE YIELDS 25-POUND BEAUTY

Madoc, Ont., Aug. 4 (Special)—A. J. Hindson, Youngstown, O., who is visiting in this district is not taking any chances that the boys back home won't believe the stories of his fishing prowess while in Canada.

The other day when he landed a beautiful twenty-five pound muskie from the waters of Moira Lake, he immediately rushed the big fellow to a Belleville cold storage plant where it will remain until Mr. Hindson returns home. He will carry his catch with him and give the boys first-hand proof.

The big fish gave its captor a thrilling 30-minute struggle before he succeeded in hauling it into the boat.

DOG APPARENTLY STRAYS FROM OWNER

Apparently strayed from the car of its tourist owner, a handsome brown and white fox terrier, bearing a Detroit dog-license numbered 1685 was found curiously nosing parked cars on Front street yesterday by little Miss Betty Buker, 32 Colborne street.

On the back of the tag was the address, Buckingham street, Detroit, Mich. Betty took care of the lost puppy and fed it at her home. But apparently homesick for its owner, the little fellow broke away from its new-found mistress, and is now at large in the city, looking for its owners.

CHEESE OFFICIALS TO ATTEND LOCAL MEET

Cheesemakers, farmers and others throughout the Central Ontario district who are interested in the dairying and agricultural industry are given an open invitation to attend a special meeting, primarily connected with dairy matters to be held in the cheese warehouse of James Cook, Albion street, on the evening of Friday, August 11.

The meeting will have as its guest speakers Clarence Lackner, director of dairying for the province, H. B. Sandwith, chief dairy instructor of Ontario and J. L. Irwin, Dominion dairy grader, among others. Informal discussions of various aspects of the dairying industry will be featured.

HONEY MAKE DOWN REPORTS BYRON LOTT

Returned this week from eastern Quebec where he has for the past three weeks been engaged in inspection work among eastern apiarists, Byron O. Lott, Holloway, commented today that honey prices would go up this year due to a scarcity of the product, which on account of the general dry weather of the province is about half the production of last year, "a good honey year".

"Most sections report considerable dryness this year and the bees haven't been working as hard. Honey has been harder to get and the production has fallen away off. Bee keepers can expect higher prices for their product this fall," stated Mr. Lott.

Everything In Readiness For Rotary Club Regatta At Massassaga, Monday

Famous Drivers Will Arrive Sunday — R. C. A. F. and Belleville Bands in Attendance — Grand Program of Field Sports — Racing Starts 9.30 a.m. and Lasts All Day — Large Crowd Expected to View Biggest Race Meet in Eastern Ontario

Way back in the old days the old-timers will tell you, Massassaga Park was the mecca for picnics, family reunions, organization get-togethers and other functions where parties of people mingled together in a happy whole.

Steamboats, the old fellows say, made regular scheduled trips down the bay to this attractive point, while the small craft of those hectic days carried the families to Sunday and holiday outings.

Shades of the old days, memories of delightful era when a depression was a low-lying part of a field, and economic agreements were something made between Pop and Mom on Saturday nights, when the pay envelope came home, will be revived on Monday, August 7th, when the Belleville Rotary Yacht Club will hold the first annual regatta.

Massassaga Park will again take on a holiday garb. Once more the old familiar landmarks will ring with the joyous cries of happy children and grownups. All the thrills, that made the days of Grandpa and Grandma joyous ones in this holiday rendezvous, will again be experienced.

A Modern Touch

But they will have a modern touch. On that part of the beautiful Bay of Quinte that borders picturesque Massassaga Point, where the roomy rowboat and sailboats of ancient vintage dipped their sails to the breeze and cumbersome steamboats sailed more or less majestically down stream carrying their quotas of noisy children and more or less sedate adults to the scene of festivities, the staccato exhausts of beautiful streamlined hydroplane boats will echo in the tree-fringed natural amphitheatre, that is that part of the bay east of the famous point.

Marvels of marine engineering, things of nautical beauty that are the last words in boat construction, swiftly speeding craft, that rip through the water at speeds anywhere between fifty and seventy-five miles per hour; pulsing living things that answer the feather-touch of drivers, whose fame as masters of these flying ghosts of the waterways, has reached all parts of the globe, will roar through spume-topped waters with flaming exhausts streaking in their wake like blazing meteors, for supremacy in this form of water sports that of late years has taken the entire world by storm.

Come From All Parts

From the far-flung parts of the continent they will come. From the sunny slopes of Florida to the orange-grove valleys of California, from Missouri to Delaware, from New York City, Toronto, Lindsay, Hamilton, Buffalo, Peterborough, Smith's Falls—and other Ontario points they will converge on beautiful Massassaga for that elusive will-o-the-wisp of victory.

Sanctioned by the powerful American Power Boat Association, the regatta will attract such famous drivers as Jackie "Pops" Cooper, greying veteran of 68 years, holder of the unofficial world's record of 87.345 miles per hour over a measured mile course made last year in his boat "Tops III" at Picton. Robert Jaite, seventy-nine year old Ohioan in his "Apache II" winner of the Prince Edward Gold Cup Trophy last year; Doctor Jim Bly, Hamilton; Chauncey Hamlin and Dave Forman, Buffalo, Gordon Love and Jack Wheaton, famous Canadian drivers, and many others will be here.

Not only will the powerful 225 cubic inch boats vie for supremacy. There will be a dozen other classes. Diminutive sea-fleas, that streak through the water like a moonbeam, will roar at terrific speed all day. Outboards, inboards, and other varieties of racing craft will be here to make the event one of the largest of its kind ever held in Eastern Canada.

But a far-sighted committee has seen to it that nothing will occur to prevent the day from being one crammed full with entertainment. Taking advantage of lessons learned at other regattas, and in an effort to "fill in" the gaps that of necessity occur between the nautical events, a promising program of land sports has been arranged. There will be fun for old and young.

Field Sports

People tiring perhaps of the thrill of speeding watercraft will be able to get other diversion on the park proper where four outstanding softball teams of the district will battle for the beautiful Rotary Club Silver Trophy emblematic of the district championship.

Races of all sorts for people of all ages, novelty events, and other field sports dear to the holiday public will be had for the "seeing".

There will be concessions where food and soft drinks will be available. There is plenty of parking space and "seeing room" for approximately ten thousand people. The shoreline that borders the five-mile course in the bay over which the speedboats will roar is ideal for "sightseeing". Rising in a gentle elevation the natural topography of the terrain in this spot affords an amphitheatre, perfect for viewing the water. Don't be alarmed, you will be able to see all that goes on, and especially the thrilling start and finishes of the boats, as the line will be directly opposite the Park.

Family Picnics

The locale is an ideal one for family picnics, and members of the committee urge potential spectators to pack the family basket, load up the family chariot, and spend the day at this beautiful spot. There will be plenty of room for everybody and weather permitting, the day should go down in local history as events, in history of the city and district.

Races Start in Morning

There will not be a dull moment all day. The first race is scheduled to start at promptly nine-thirty in the morning and ensuing races will take place sharply on scheduled time. The last event will roar over the course at roughly six-thirty, when the final heat of the 225 class will be run and the winner of the famous Belleville-Sargent Gold Trophy will be awarded the handsome prize.

Motorists should have no difficulty in finding their way to Massassaga Course. Committees in charge of traffic have had the route marked with posters and indication cards which inform car drivers the correct route to take. Start early and get your pick of the beauty spots.

"There Shall be Music"

No picnic would be complete without music. And with this in mind two of the outstanding brass bands of Eastern Canada will play a continuous program from one o'clock until six. The now famous band of the Royal Canadian Air Force of Trenton, with the special permission of the officer commanding the base, will play, some sixty strong, in conjunction with the Belleville Municipal Band under Lieut. Fred Jobson. Flight Sergeant Tommy Cooper will direct the military organization.

Grand Ball at Night

And don't forget to bring your sport clothes, for when the checkered flags swoop down shortly after six o'clock in the evening, it by no means denotes the end of the day's festivities. At the Hume Arena in the evening a grand ball will be held at which a beautiful cocktail set will be given away as a special door prize. Dancing will start at ten o'clock but previous to that all sorts of games and amusements will be going on. There will be loads of fun so don't miss the evening performance.

Taxi-transportation

Chairman Ken Dyson of the Traffic Committee stated today that arrangements have been made with the majority of city taxi-firms to supply transportation for those who have no other way of getting to the scene of activity.

Taxi-men have decided to transport spectators to Massassaga Park for the sum of twenty-five cents per person in carloads of not less than four. This of course is for one-way only.

Arrange your party, call your favorite taxi-driver and everything will be arranged to get to the park.

Obituary

LATE DR. MORLEY A. DAY

The funeral of Dr. Morley Ash Day, dentist, which was private took place from the Belleville Burial Company Funeral Home, Campbell Street, Thursday afternoon, Aug. 3rd. The service in the chapel was conducted by the Rev. A. L. Geen, assisted by the Rev. Dr. James Semple.

Interment was made in Cataraqui cemetery, Cataraqui, Ont.; the committal service was conducted by the Rev. A. L. Geen.

The bearers were four sons, Messrs. Percy Day, Earl Day, Edward Day and Charles Day, and two brothers, Messrs. Ernest Day and Percy Day.

THOMAS C. MALONEY (Deseronto)

Thomas C. Maloney passed away at his residence in Deseronto on Wednesday, Aug. 2nd. He was well esteemed in the community. The funeral will take place on Saturday.

HALF FEE LICENCES AFTER SEPTEMBER 1

Though no unusual activity in sales is generally expected at the local office after that date, the annual half fee licence period for cars and trucks will go into effect on September 1, Major S. E. Vermilyea, local issuer of licences for this district has been informed by the department. After this date all fees for markers for cars and trucks will be halved.

"We don't expect an unusual activity after the September 1 date," it was reported by the office. "In fact last year we really sold fewer licences in September than we did in August."

At the present time three or four new licences are being issued each day at the office.

WEST WIND BLOWS TRAVELLING CYCLIST

Harold T. Case, Chatham unemployed youth, is en route to the Maritime district with the help of a west wind.

Travelling by bicycle, the youth in a favorable breeze spreads a small sail from the handlebars of his machine and is propelled at a ten mile an hour speed over the smooth sections of the road, often covering from forty to fifty miles a day in this novel manner.

This morning he rested briefly in Belleville after an easy jaunt from Trenton where last evening he camped on the outskirts of the town. His bicycle, laden with small tent and other effects carries sufficient supplies to enable him to live in the open as he goes. When short of funds, he stops, secures odd jobs for a brief period, purchases sufficient provisions and continues. In the east he will sell his bicycle and attempt to secure work on one of the coastal boats.

"I just got tired hanging around Chatham with nothing to do," he says.

Police Blotter

Sneak thieves entered a parked truck in Belleville and stole $26.00 in silver, police were informed yesterday. Mr. M. Whitney, of Kingston parked his company truck in the McCarthy Theatre parking lot while he partook of an evening meal yesterday. Upon his return, Mr. Whitney observed the vehicle had been broken into and the cash stolen.

Sneak thieves, presumably juveniles, broke and entered the Belleville Yacht Clubhouse sometime early today and stole a quantity of chocolate bars and soft drinks. City police were informed of the robbery by Mr. Cook, the Yacht Club caretaker, this morning.

Residents in the vicinity of Green, Howard and Ponton Streets have been complaining to police of late regarding the theft of milk, left by city dairymen. Acting Chief Arthur Harman instructed the night force to patrol that section of the city during the early hours before sunrise, when the milk is believed to be taken. As the dairy product is being taken in wholesale quantities, it is believed that transients are responsible. The milk is stolen between the time of delivery and sunrise.

An automobile stolen at Bloomfield on June 28th last was recovered in Sutton, Ont., yesterday, Provincial Police announced today. The car was a 1935 model Chrysler bearing Ontario license plates No. 4-C-359 when stolen. The plates had been removed and others used when the vehicle was recovered.

Provincial Police are in possession of a complete set of license plates found recently in a stolen car which had been recovered. The plate numbers are 4-V-439.

The three Belleville youths, all juveniles, who were arrested yesterday near Odessa after stealing a motor car from the J. B. Boyce car lot, were held in Kingston on charges of breaking and entering in that district. Their cases will be disposed of today and the lads returned to Belleville later.

5 TRUCK DRIVERS DEMAND A JOB

Informed Local Men Would be Given Preference on Highway Work

Five irate husky truck drivers, who stated they lived in Long Branch, Ont., laid siege to the local Employment Office yesterday and practically demanded they be given employment on the highway construction project now under way at the eastern city limits.

"We have as much right to this work as anyone", the swarthy spokesmen for the group stated. "We have travelled from Toronto for this job, and we went to know why we can't get it."

Informed that local men would get the first chance should the opportunity arise, and that such was the case in Ontario where highway construction is under way, they grumbled "if we waited in Long Branch until the highways came through, we would linger there a h—— of a long time".

"Well, we're going to see the boss of this job and if he doesn't give us any satisfaction we'll see the minister of Labor", they told Employment Office officials.

Finally being persuaded that there was no work available here, they jumped into an ancient runabout car, and with parting salutes that "we'll go to Brockville where we'll be treated like white men" snorted and chugged their way down Pinnacle Street.

County Road System In Splendid Shape Says Road Supt.

With spring and summer resurfacing with crushed rock and gravel concluded; dust treatment with calcium chloride and oil completed; and the County pavements through the villages of Stirling, Deloro and Marlbank given a seal coat, the county road system, generally speaking is in good shape, Road Superintendent W. L. Langlois stated today.

Work of replanking the Cannifton Bridge is almost completed and the structure will be reopened to traffic today, he added.

Exceedingly heavy rains in the vicinity of Coe Hill caused some washouts on the sandy sections of the county road from Coe Hill to Purdyville, but these are now undergoing repair.

Motorists travelling to Madoc on county road No. 1 are requested to drive carefully where a crew of men are working at earth excavation in a cut on the hill south of the railway tracks at West Huntingdon. The temporary inconvenience Mr. Langlois stated, is necessary for the good of the travelling public which is asked to bear this fact in mind.

Brush and weed-cutting is now about half-completed.

Talented Family Wins Applause At McCarthy Theatre

A little boy, less than three years of age, acting, singing, dancing and directing the music, attracted the attention of the large audience at the McCarthy Theatre last evening. He is Ronnie Johnson who is already a real trouper and appears on the stage with the entire Johnson Family who travel by car and cabin trailer across Ontario enjoying the scenery in the summer months. This year they are devoting much of their time to pure enjoyment in Canada's great open spaces. Last summer, however, they played thirty theatres for engagements and everywhere they go they make instantaneous hits.

Heading the company is Mr. Arthur W. Johnson, a member of the Canadian Legion, branch No. 206, Tilbury. Mr. Johnson's home is Comber in the fertile county of Essex. The other members of the company are Mrs. Johnson, two daughters, Bernice, 20; Mildred Beryl, aged 9; a son Vernon, coming 17 shortly, and of course, Ronnie.

Their program is extensive, comprising accordion trios with many familiar old and modern numbers, tap dancing, singing, readings, music by Mr. Johnson with a bow and a carpenter's saw, indeed a whole realm of entertainment. Mr. Johnson himself is a musician and a talented actor; Vernon is a fine reader, fine tap dancer and singer with real histrionic skill; Bernice is accompanist and member of the trio; Mildred Beryl, though but nine, has an excellent voice for song, dances and acts. Mrs. Johnson takes part in the ensembles and Ronnie in his gala dress suit keeps the audience in a gale of laughter.

The Johnson Family appear at the McCarthy Theatre tonight and twice tomorrow and Ronnie himself will be on the stage with them.

Mr. Johnson told The Ontario Intelligencer today the winters are filled with engagements within a radius of seventy-five or eighty miles of their home at Comber, Ont. The nine-year-old daughter attends school.

The Johnson Family program is in addition to the fine film program 'Border G-Man', Leon Errol Comedy and a 'Donald Duck' cartoon.

THE ONTARIO INTELLIGENCER

THE DAILY ONTARIO INTELLIGENCER is published every afternoon (Sunday and holidays excepted) at The Ontario Intelligencer Building, Front Street, Belleville.

THE BRITISHER'S HOLIDAYS

The Britisher's holidays are here and he takes them.

He has set his house in order, arranged his affairs as they related to other nations, especially his allies, France, Poland, Turkey, Greece and so on.

He is that fortunate man who possesses his soul in peace. His is the most fortunate of peoples for into its soul makeup goes that happy balance or adjustment which finds it standing the test in danger's hour or in the piping, dancing days of peace.

Canadians like all other peoples of the Empire admire the qualities of the British people and are fortunate that so much of their spirit plays a part in Canada and has made so large a contribution to the Canadian spirit. They also admire the Irish, the Scotch, the Welsh, the French elements in the elements which make up Canada's soul.

As Britishers Canadians all pray that we possess in fullest measure the spirit of the people who have again in the threatening times of the past year or two gathered the nations of the world around her as their spearhead, their defence, their shield, lest an enemy should strike, and try to break the peace.

Sir Thomas Inskip said yesterday he believed "war is not likely." Prime Minister Chamberlain said the day before he saw no reason why Parliament should not take its recess for two months, (even though these are the two months spoken of by those who feared a dictator manifestation of strength or battle of will or nerves.

History will record these days and whatever the future holds. History will relate the story of the steady heart of Britain and her ally, France, with other nations of the democratic form of government, who have done everything to save a world while others, assuming various violent political forms, have tried to exalt these in a way unfair to numbers of their own peoples and potent for destruction of democracy, had not the spirit of the world been largely democratic.

So having arranged affairs during the past year, the Britishers take their holidays, the Prime Minister among them. What a message to dictator countries! what an assrance to the rest of the world!

WHY BUSINESS

What is business? might be asked and probably few could give anything like a complete answer. Business or commerce is as extensive as the world and nearly as old as man. It ought to have attractions and outlets to please so many millions who are engaged in it.

August number of Canada Lumberman quotes the following words from R. H. Cabell president of Armour and Co., Chicago:

> "I like business because it is competitive, because it rewards deeds rather than words.
> "I like business because it compels earnestness and does not permit me to neglect today's task while thinking about tomorrow.
> "I like business because it undertakes to please, not reform; because it is honestly selfish, thereby avoiding hypocrisy and sentimentality.
> "I like business because it promptly penalizes mistakes, shiftlessness and inefficiency, while rewarding well those who give it the best they have in them.
> "Lastly, I like business, because each day is a fresh adventure."

When one goes into a shop or store or emporium she or he can feel something of the inspiration which guides the great business heads. The buyers also have experiences and thrills in meeting business folk and in buying their goods. They have the benefit of the use of these goods, for it is what they buy which makes up so large a part of the essentials of life, the food they eat, the clothes they wear, the implements they use in order to farm or the tools man uses in the factory, the car he buys, even the taxes he pays for services he would not otherwise enjoy, the newspaper he reads, the medicine he gets from the doctor and the document he gets from a lawyer.

What would this world be without business?

In a very real sense Mr. Cabell grasps the very essence of business for his statement why "I Like Business" is a complete answer to much radical talk which falls under the names of Bolshevism, Fascism and Nazlism.

JAMAICA, B.W.I., IS ONE OF THE PLACES ONE HEARS ABOUT OCCASIONALLY but knows little about, hence a copy of the Daily Gleaner, published at Kingston, Jamaica, July 17, 1939, which has just reached this desk, is quite interesting. The date line indicates that the Gleaner is fifty-five years old sells for a penny half-penny by the copy, and this particular number contains 24 pages. The Daily Gleaner sure "Covers the Water Front"...for it notes passenger ships arriving in port, their names and the names of the passengers. Hence the arrival from Montreal of the Canadian National Steamship, Lady Rodney, is recorded with list of passengers including Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Findlay, of Belleville, Ontario, Canada, with the additional information that Mr. Findlay is Secretary of the Board of Education of Belleville. From the number of steamships recorded as arriving in the port of Kingston the preceding day, Kingston must be a busy port. The Lady Rodney was noted as having arrived from Montreal via Bermuda and Nassau, with mails, passengers and cargo. "She will sail on Wednesday afternoon for Montreal via the outports, Nassau and Bermuda, with mails, passengers and cargo."

All of which gives us a thrill and a vision of many out-of-the-way ports of the world, strange scenes and stranger people—far, far away from the daily grind of everlasting sameness — whispering adventure, weird and wonderful.

x

To the Canadian newspaperman the first thing which strikes the eye, in the Daily Gleaner, Jamaica, B.W.I., is the number of liquor advertisements, being as that kind of advertising is frowned upon in parts of Canada and particularly in Ontario where it is prohibited entirely. In this issue of The Gleaner thirteen liquor advertisements are noted, from champagne to rum, mostly British made. In fact, the entire paper is British in appearance and tone.

x

The Gleaner carries two comic strips, "Bringing Up Father," (Jiggs and Maggie), and "The Gumps".

x

Prominence is given British news, and front page features the mobilization in England of 35,000 militiamen, "the first peacetime recruits in Britain's modern history." Also featured on the front page is an optimistic article about the future of citrus fruits in the West Indies. The Japanese situation and other foreign news is also featured. Another front page article, featured with large headlines, tells readers that there is NO NEED TO WORRY ABOUT EARTHQUAKES, for the article goes on to say that "Jamaica will have more earthquakes, and maybe violent ones too . . . but it may take years and years for this to materialize." All of this on the authority of Professor F. A. Vening Meinesz, M.A., D.Sc., Ph.D., "one of Holland's greatest geodesy and geophysics authorities, who went in an American submarine off this Island in a gravity measurement expedition."

x

Another front page article details a shooting affray in which the word "alleged" is used so many times as to suggest that the newspaper has had virulent libel trouble and does not propose to have any more of the same.

x

One rather startling advertisement announces that CHRISTMAS IS COMING, rather a chilly thought for July, but the adv. advises that orders must be in before the end of July for Christmas Trees, "Real ones, of Pine, Balsam and Fir, for delivery on or about December 21, indicating that Christmas Trees must be imported, there being no local trees suitable.

x

Covering the waterfront so thoroughly the Gleaner reporter does not neglect the airliners for Kingston, Jamaica, is a regular port of call for the big passenger air liners, and the Gleaner meets them all and records the names of the passengers.

x

Returning to the Lady Rodney, The Gleaner gives the names of the ninety-six passengers with interesting particulars as to their home port and vocations. The Gleaner also descends into the kitchen and the pantry in an enquiring manner, and ascertained what it takes to feed passengers and crew on a big tourist ship filled with hungry appetites. He found that beef is the mainstay of the voyage with 5,000 pounds required for each round trip Jamaica and return to Montreal. To vary the menu 1,000 pounds of fish are required; 800 pounds veal, 800 pounds lamb, 800 pounds bacon, 1000 pounds fowl 500 pounds pork.

x

All this was ascertained from The Gleaner, which, as we said before, "Covers the Water Front,"—and then some.

x

A complete stock market service is given by cable and wireless, from London, New York and Toronto, including Toronto mining market quotations.

x

Many other interesting oddities, from a Canadian standpoint, might be noted in The Gleaner, if space permitted. One other oddity, however, must be noted in closing. In the Classified Advs. or Want Advs. as they are generally called, a number of requests for positions from young women appear, and nearly every one of them begins A DECENT YOUNG WOMAN WANTS WORK AS etc. What price decent?

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Regaining Nervous Energy

A professional man of high standing found himself becoming tired easily and very irritable at home and in his office. As he had been thoroughly checked over by his family physician and dentist, he knew there was no physical cause for his fatigue, nervousness and irritability. Down in his heart he knew that while hard work was partly to blame, worry was even more to blame, and yet he knew that he had less cause for worry than many of his friends and acquaintances who were not showing these signs of tired nerves.

His physician advised him as follows: "Bill, you need to build up some reserve nervous energy. You have always been a hard worker, no recreations, no physical exercise, overconscientious about your work, very ambitious. The time has come for you to stop expending energy and give your brain and body a chance to accumulate nervous energy. You were brought up on a farm, in fact, two of your brothers are still on the old homestead. Why not go back and do some work about the farm?"

"How will that help me?" asked the patient.

"It will help you in two ways. First, the physical work will give you a normal or natural appetite, will enable you to enjoy and digest simple, nourishing foods, and you'll be so tired at night from the work and fresh air that you'll sleep for many hours. You will thus build up a strong healthy body with pure nourishing blood coursing through your brain and carrying away the worn wastes to be thrown from the body. But that is only the half of it. All the time you are engaged in the chores about the farm—ploughing, planting, reaping, milking, repairing the barn and farm machinery —you will be thinking of these chores and your mind will thus be free, all these hours, of the worries or anxieties that were so wearing on you while in the city."

It is by this method —work which requires thought and physical effort—that so many mental patients are now able to return home and to work. The hours they spend at work is just that many hours less in which they can worry about themselves, aside from the great benefit of building up strong muscles and nerves by the work itself.

BEAUTIFUL PEST

Beautiful and treacherous is the brightly colored water hyacinth, a common weed in Bengal. It grows fast in shallow water-ways, choking them, allowing malarious mosquitoes to breed in stagnant reaches, and hindering all traffic. At last a vigorous drive against it was made during the week April 23-30. All government officials and the public in general were urged to take part. Posters, pamphlets, leaflets, dramas and songs are being utilized to stir the province to the proper frame of mind and proper activities of limb and muscle.

The province has an Act for the eradication of the pest, but little action has been taken under it; there are difficulties in the way of making it operative. The week was Bengal's first large experiment in grappling with the hyacinth, though this has been steadily abused in legislative sessions and conferences for twenty years. — Indian Press Union.

A RUBY MAP

When the Crown Prince and Crown Princess of Denmark sailed for home, the luggage of the Crown Princess Ingrid included a selection of compacts, scarves and handkerchiefs imprinted with maps of the United States and of New York City, as gifts for friends in the homeland. For her husband she bought a gold cigaret case, on which she had engraved a map of the United States. Each stop on their tour from San Francisco to New York was marked with a tiny diamond or a ruby. Boulder Dam rated a ruby and New York rated a diamond.

Since Crown Prince Frederik told Detroit reporters that Boulder Dam had impressd him as much as anything he had seen up to his arrival in Detroit, it may be that the rubies mark the "red-letter" spots. If that is a good guess, Detroit is probably indicated by a ruby, too.

In any case, the royal Denmark way is a most amiable way in which to take home territory. It is a far happier use for maps than to spread them on a general's table in a staff headquarters with markers to indicate invasion by armed force.—Detroit Free Press.

Britain's New Militia

While their Majesties were making their historic tour in Canada, a tour which delighted all hearts in this country by the enthusiasm of the welcome and the spontaneous tribute paid to their personalities, we, in this city of London, were preparing for a possible European catastrophe. If I were still at school I should have been half-killed for that sentence, because we were always taught never to get more than twenty words into one sentence. There! I have done it again. But, anyway, I think that the people of Canada might like to know something of what we are doing.

I am a medical general practitioner, and I finished up the last war as major in charge of a hospital at Constantinople. In September, 1914, I was examining recruits for two "Kitchener" battalions of an old English Midland regiment. I was aghast at the poor physical standard—the bow-legs, knock-knees, pigeon breasts, puny stature and the general signs of bad hygiene and undernourishment.

Today there are very few of these poor specimens. In September, 1914, one could make only about 60 per cent of the recruits "A1"; today in London, with a stricter examination, we are making 85 per cent "A1". Less than 3 per cent are quite hopeless and have to be cast into "outer darkness".

In conjunction with the improvement in physique there goes a most striking improvement in intelligence. I have yet to see one of these lads of twenty who shows the slightest resentment at being called up. On the contrary, they all show the keenest appreciation of why they have been called up and what may be expected of them.

Now, in case it may interest you, I will give details of the modern method of examining a recruit. The Medical Board consists of four examining doctors, with a fifth who acts as boss and arbitrates where any controversy arises. The recruit enters the first cubicle. His eyesight and the condition of his nervous system are tested and his feet are examined. In the next cubicle his height, weight, chest expansion, teeth, mouth and upper air-passages are looked at, also ears; then a note is taken of his coloring and marks on the body, such as moles, birthmarks, scars or tattooing.

In the third cubicle a doctor examines his heart and lungs, his exercise tolerance and the movements of his limbs. In the fourth his digestive system and urinary functions are tested. Gastric ulcers, diabetes, etc., are thus eliminated.

Having passed through this long ordeal, he is sent on to the "interviewer", in this case an ex-major of the Royal Artillery. The interviewer has to find out the mentality, the occupation, the aptitudes, and, particularly, the hobbies of the recruit. This last part of the examination will, we hope, do much to eliminate the large number of "square pegs in round holes" which we found in the last war.

In conclusion, I should like to say that this is a far more comprehensive examination than recruits got in 1914; that there is seldom any matter for arbitration by the chairman; and that the physical and mental standards have gone up by leaps and bounds since 1914.

We are not a C3 nation. I attribute this largely to our social services. The old dogged spirit is still there, but it is backed by a better physique and better intelligence, and I am told that this is even the case in the "depressed areas" of Durham, Glasgow and South Wales. I have been so impressed by the hundreds that I have seen that I want to communicate my encouragement to the Dominions.

I have lived in the Dominions, and I know how they like to hear something about the Old Country.—Montreal Star.

ST. LAWRENCE CHARTED

The charting of the St. Lawrence route stands out as one of the major achievements in the annals of hydrography. It is a story of ships and men. From the time of the early French explorers in 1678 intermittent attempts were made to sound the waters of the river. However, it was not until 1827, when Captain Bayfield was appointed by the British Admiralty to chart the river and Gulf, that any marked progress was made in this stupendous task. Bayfield's first schooner, the little Gulnare, was built especially for him in a Quebec shipyard in 1828. He spent twenty-nine years working up and down the river and gulf, and his ships, his work, and his remarkable personality still live in the memory of the seagoing folk of Lower Canada.

Sailing in his wake came able successors in the persons of Bullock and Orlebar and Tooker, Chimmo, Maxwell, and Kerr. Until 1904, the shipping of the St. Lawrence was guided by the charts of these intrepid hydrographers, and the combined results of their work are still to be found incorporated in some of the charts issued to vessels today.

Shortly after the beginning of the present century, the increase in number, tonnage and speed of vessels and changes in aids to navigation and in harbor facilities, brought demands for more modern and up-to-date charts. The task of charting the St. Lawrence from Quebec to the sea was assigned to the Canadian Hydrographic Service in 1904, and the work has been carried on with few interruptions since that date. While large areas in the Gulf are as yet inadequately charted, the completion of the steamship route along the north shore in 1938 marked another milestone in Canadian navigation.—Branton Daily Sun.

BALDHEADED BARBER

In the window of a barber shop in Boston is a sign which says: "Take a look at our barbers. They are all bald. Unless you want to look like them you had better start taking care of your hair immediately".

When a man is selling something he should, as far as possible, look the part. He should look like a good advertisement for his line of goods and services. We have had barbers try to sell us hair tonics, who seemed badly in need of some themselves. Perhaps they should have explained to us that it was the one regret of their lives that they had left it too late for the tonic to do them any good. That is where the Boston barber practiser psychology.

This idea could be carried into various occupations. Tradition has it that the cobbler's children are always the worst shod. He should say, "That is how your children's shoes will be if you neglect them". Perhaps a dentist should have bad teeth so that he might parade them before all mankind and say: "See, that is what will happen to your teeth unless you come and see me twice a year".

Our own preference, however, is for men to look like their trades, if that be feasible. We like to see a butcher who is round and ruddy from eating his own meats. We like to note a relationship between a seller and what he sells. Those Boston barbers do not impress us, because barbers do not usually become barbers late in life. Being in the profession young, they should try to keep their hair on, and if they can't, why, there is just nothing they can sell that will bring it back.—Stratford Beacon-Herald.

TEACHER WANTED

In an advertisement in the Regina Leader-Post, the Hanley area applies for a Protestant teacher for a school of eleven pupils, in an English-speaking district. The salary offered is only $550. But here is the added inducement: "Nine teachers married from school in last nineteen years. Possibilities not exhausted. Give telephone number when replying."

Knowledge of psychology is a great asset, and these trustees have shown they are not lacking in it. They know that there will be plenty of young women willing to teach for a school year at a low salary if there is a reasonable chance of catching a good bread-winner for life.—Windsor Star.

GANANOQUE SMELTS

Several specimens of a new variety of fish in the Gananoque river have been identified as smelts, and the identification is of unusual interest not only to biologists, anglers and commercial fishermen but to those interested in the tourist trade. It means that the smelts have completed the major part of their conquest of the Great Lakes.

The species was introduced into an inland lake in Northern Michigan several years ago. From there it spread to Lake Michigan and thence down the lakes, apparently making itself at home and reproducing in enormous numbers wherever it went.

During the past few weeks smelt fishing has been making headlines throughout the western section of Ontario, fishermen coming in large numbers to several of the Georgian Bay ports for the run. A new, if very brief variety, of tourist season is developing. — Kingston Whig-Standard.

PRIEST WHO SAVED LIFE OF MUSSOLINI DIES

"Few men have been accorded the honor of continuously leading a great political party for 20 years" said Col. Drew. "No matter what any of us may think of Mr. King personally, we must recognize that this long period of leadership reflects the confidence which his immediate associates have had in his judgment in the past. But the dinner on Tuesday night will be the greatest test of his long career.

"He will be speaking to the whole of Canada. What the Canadian people will wish to hear from the Prime Minister of Canada is a clear statement of the practical measures which Canada is prepared to take to preserve those institutions of which the King and Queen are such worthy representatives."

A fate of civilization may be decided in the next 60 days, said the Conservative leader. The scale now "hangs almost evenly between war and peace." If a "clear declaration by Canada will swing the scale even a little toward non-aggression and peace, then we Canadians should be willing to add that little while it may still help the effort which is being made to preserve civilization for ourselves and others."

NEWSPAPER

Mr. Spencer stressed the need for a social consciousness among publishers in their work, which was a "sort of public utility." He deplored the practice among some publishers of filling vacant space in their papers with "hurry-up" advertising about the publisher's own business.

Frank B. Hutchinson of Syracuse, N.Y., said much of the mutual respect existing between Canada and the United States was attributable to the "hundreds of newspapers, large and small, which were close to the people.

Occupy World Stage

"These newspapers are free and intelligent," said Mr. Hutchinson. "They are free to print what they please and intelligent enough to print the truth. Our two countries will remain friendly and peaceful as long as our press remains free, fair and intelligent."

Mr. Hutchinson said the day was approaching when Canada and the United States will "occupy the world stage for power and culture, when we will be in the centre of protection of world civilization." He said the real test would come when the two countries, "growing in numbers and world importance, come to clash more frequently in commerce, power and world influence."

Hon. William L. Houck, Liberal member of the Ontario legislature for Niagara Falls, and vice-chairman of the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission, told an evening banquet gathering it was the duty of Canadian newspaper publishers to mould public opinion and strive to keep "isms" out of Canada.

Comparing the "blustering of the dictators" with the "sincerity and dignity" of the King and Queen during the visit to Canada, Mr. Houck said Canadians were prone to "grasp at something new" but were resolved to "stick to democracy."

Playground Notes

On Friday afternoon the East End Playground held their own Field Day. Mike Powers with the most points won the Senior Championship; the Senior Girls was won by Wilma Clarke; the Junior Girls by Norma Maker; the Junior Boys by Gord. Theobold, and the Midget Boys by Bill Anderson.

On Friday evening the West Hill Senior Girls won their softball game against the East End by default. Tuesday afternoon the East End Senior Boys' volley ball team journeyed to the West End and defeated them. Scores: 19-21, 21-5, 21-15. It was not till the second game that the East End really played a faultless game. Then the West seemed to blow to pieces after the bad beating they took and the East took the third and final game quite easily.

Wednesday afternoon the West End Bantam team journeyed to the East Hill and were defeated by a score of 18 to 12. Bunton of the East was the star of the game with 12 strikeouts and perfect batting. Smith of the West End was the best hitter on the losing squad.

East End—Mulligan, Bunton, Anderson, Winer, Boyle, Lockyre, Kellett and McBride.

West End—Strachan, Rawson, Strachan, Gilbert, Rayner, Barrager, Smith, Lavering, and Smith.

After taking such a bad beating all around, the West End team playing host to the East End team, defeated them by the score of 15 to 14. The game was close all the way through, but the West End were just too good in every appointment. They just had to be good after the pep talk their coach, Bowerman, gave them.

Teams: West End—Smith, Sword, Martin, Badgley, Watkins, Massey, York, Burns, Rosotte, Peters. East End—Wilson, Bunton, Cronin, Moore, Anderson, Ford, Lazenby, Moon, Cooper.

The two crack relay teams from the East and West are scheduled to run this evening at the Fair Grounds. Bowerman boasts of two good sprinters while Grant of the East talks of nothing but his half-miler, Pigden, and quarter-miler, Clark.

DANZIGERS

The bridge has not yet been put in place and authorities said they were not certain when it would be anchored. It will be entirely on Free State territory and will connect Kaesemark, on the west side of the river, and Roebude, on the east.

A completed bridge is now at Danzig dock awaiting installation.

Threats in Newspapers

This action followed a threat on Tuesday to ignore the established frontiers after a revival of "the herring and margarine war."

Treaty provisions place the Free City within the Polish customs administration. Nazis charged that Polish restrictions on the margarine and herring trade would cost Danzig valuable business.

(Earlier today the Polish press discussed the possibility that Danzig Nazis were preparing forcibly to open the frontier between the Free City and German East Prussia.)

JAPAN

Japan Insistent

In talks designed to settle Anglo-Japanese differences at Tientsin the Japanese have insisted that Great Britain withdraw support from the Central Chinese government currency which the Japanese sponsored North China regime has outlawed and is attempting to supplant with its own banknotes.

"Obviously," said this government source, "the two attitudes (American and British) are connected. They indicate joint pressure on Japan whether the American and British governments actually are conferring or not.

"We have been confidentially informed that Washington fears war in Europe in September and the treaty abrogation was done on the spur of the moment in order to clear the way for military assistance to Britain and France while withholding war materials from Japan. As long as the treaty was in existence this would have been legally impossible."

Delegates Meet

Rome. Aug. 4—(AP)—Japan's Ambassadors to Italy and Germany weighed "closer adherence" to the Rome-Berlin axis today in a conference variously interpreted as a step toward a military alliance or only a diplomatic feint.

The Ambassadors in Rome and Berlin, Toshiro Shiratori and Lieut.-General Hiroshi Oshima, respectively, accompanied by their military attaches and counsellors, were at Villa D'este, near Lake Como.

A statement they were considering "eventual closer adherence of Tokyo to the two axis powers" was attributed to Shiratori by Premier Mussolini's Milan newspaper, Il Popolo D'Italia. The meetings will continue until the end of the week, it was reliably reported.

Usually informed Italians thought the talks might well be the preliminary step toward negotiations with Italy and Germany to broaden the three powers' present ties to combat international communism into an arms pact such as exists between Italy and Germany.

Those foreign observers who thought they saw concerted action between Japan in China and Germany and Italy in Europe wondered how Tokyo could come "closer" to her anti-comintern partners without some form of military alliance.

Observers inclined to regard the declaration as a bluff pointed to the indefinite word, "eventual."

Stirling

Stirling.—The regular monthly meeting of St. Paul's Women's Association was held on Tuesday afternoon, August 1st, at the home of Mrs. George Rosebush. The president of the organization, Mrs. F. N. McKee, presided over the first part of the programme which included the devotional period and general business. After the use of the theme song with Mrs. J. J. Wilson presiding at the piano in the absence of the regular pianist, Mrs. M. Hick, all joined in the Lord's Prayer. Mrs. Nora Wescott, secretary, presented her report of the last meeting and also on the intervening activities of the month. Ten cards and letters of sympathy had been sent during July. The secretary also presented the communications received. The attendance recording system revealed twenty-eight ladies present including one new member. Mrs. R. B. Duffin, treasurer, then gave the financial state of the association in a detailed financial report of a most encouraging nature.

Fine Programme

Mrs. Fred Jackman, convener of the programme committee, took charge of the remaining portion of the meeting. Following the use of another hymn and prayer by Mrs. Wilson, Mrs. R. P. Coulter read the Scripture lesson. Mrs. Jackman then sponsored an interesting clothespin contest in which first honors were gained by Mrs. George Luery who won first prize. (four dozen clothespins).

At this time the entire group joined in the singing of a hymn and Mrs. Gordanier directed a group contest, "Things Grandmother Missed" in which two groups tied for first honors. This part of the meeting closed with the Benediction and was followed by luncheon served by the following ladies who were responsible for the program of the day. Mrs. F. Jackman, Mrs. Arthur Gordonier, Mrs. J. J. Wilson, Mrs. W. Wallace, Mrs. C. Scott, Mrs. George White and R. P. Coulter. An expression of appreciation on the part of the association was directed to the hostess for a pleasant afternoon in a brief address of thanks by Mrs. C. B. Macklin.

KEEP COOL THE "SALADA" WAY
Infuse 6 heaping teaspoons of Salada Black Tea in a pint of fresh, boiling water. After 6 minutes strain liquid into 2-quart container; while hot, add 1 to 1½ cups of sugar and juice of 2 lemons, strained; stir until sugar is dissolved; fill container with cold water. Do not allow tea to cool before adding cold water or liquid will become cloudy. Serve with chipped ice. The above makes 7 tall glasses.

Former Stirling Resident Celebrates Golden Wedding

Observing open house at their home in Creston, Montana, Sunday, July 16th, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Plummer (formerly Miss Mary Danford of the Oak Hills, Ontario) received felicitations of friends on the golden anniversary of their wedding.

In the home the dining and living rooms were decorated with over one hundred gladiolus blossoms brought from Grant's Pass, Oregon, for the occasion by their son, Henry Plummer, who is president of the large floral association there. These with many other beautiful flowers, made an exquisite display of harmonious colors.

A family dinner was served at noon and telegrams from absent members of the family, containing messages of good wishes, were read. A reception was held throughout the afternoon and evening. Mrs. Sam Parker, Mrs. George Danford and Miss Nellie Redlingshafer served refreshments.

Inscribe Names In Book

At a small table decorated in gold, 125 friends inscribed their names in the visitors' memory book. A golden bowl containing a gift of money was presented to the happy couple. Music and conversation gave pleasant diversion during the reception hours.

Mr. and Mrs. Plummer were married in Helena, Montana, in 1889. Mrs. Plummer was born in the Oak Hills district near Stirling, Ontario. Her parents were the late Mr. and Mrs. George Danford and when she was eleven years of age she came with them to Montana to reside. Shortly after their marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Plummer came to Creston, Montana to make their home. Mr. Plummer was with the Great Northern for a number of years and was later assistant postmaster at Creston for some time.

They have three living children, William Plummer, who is postmaster at Creston, and Roy and Henry Plummer in Oregon also 17 grandchildren and five great grandchildren. They have made many friends during their long and active life who welcomed the opportunity to shower them with good wishes and gifts on their happy anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Fralick, Picton, Mark 69th Wedding Anniversary

Picton, Aug. 4— (Special) — A shower of congratulatory messages and gifts poured in on Mr. and Mrs. Courtland Fralick who on Wednesday marked the 69th anniversary of their wedding at their East Lake home. Though he is 93 and she is 90, both are enjoying excellent health and both live unusually active lives for persons of their age. They were very much interested in the gathering of relatives and friends which marked the occasion, but both declared that it did not seem that they had been married so long. 'You can truly say that we have been long and happily married', said Mr. Fralick as he gazed fondly on his partner for 69 years.

During the afternoon, Mr. and Mrs. Fralick recalled many happy memories. They both possess the use of all their faculties and keep abreast of the events of the day. Both are great readers but use glasses for this purpose. A feature of the celebration was a dinner, when the table was centred with a cake bearing 69 candles, which took considerable puffing on the part of the honored guests to extinguish.

When The Ontario Intelligencer representative called at the home, they were seated on the verandah of their pleasant home, where they reside alone. Alone? queried the visitor and Mrs Fralick replied 'Sure alone, and we do all our own work too. Come around at five o'clock tomorrow morning and you will see me feeding the flock of chickens. They are good layers too,' she added.

Mr. Fralick took the reporter out to the garden of which he is justly proud. It is taken care of in a very creditable manner and has all kinds of vegetables. 'We grow just about everything we need in the garden and my wife cans it, so that we have to buy very little,' he said. 'I think a lot of people could make a living if they had a little plot of land as we have, but I guess their tastes are not as simple as ours. Why I recall that as a boy I went to attend an Orange walk at Bloomfield and my uncle, with whom I was residing gave me twenty-five cents. I thought that I had a fortune then, but what would young folks say of such today'.

In the garden, Mr. Fralick pointed to some plants with large leaves growing on them. 'That's my tobacco,' he proudly announced. 'You see I grow all I need and after I have dried it, I mix it with some I buy and for me it cannot be beat. I do love my pipe and my wife says that I smoke too much, but it does not seem to have done me any harm,' he noted with a chuckle.

During the past spring, Mr. Fralick split four cords of wood. He has alway been interested in farming and notes many changes in the methods since he was young. 'But I think that farming conditions were better those days than now. It is hard for a farmer to get along and there are so many taxes,' he said.

Mr. Fralick recalls that his grandfather had told him of seeing Indian encampments on the shores of East Lake, but that they were friendly and lived by hunting and fishing. Many great woods have been cleared away since he was young. The present Outlet beach, where thousands come each summer to bathe and get sun baths, was not used when he was young, Mr. Fralick stated. 'The fishermen used it, dragging in their seines from Lake Ontario, and they got great catches of fish too.'

Mr. and Mrs. Fralick were married in the state of New York, where she was born. A year after they were married they decided to come to Prince Edward County, he having been born at Cherry Valley. They farmed before settling at East Lake thirty years ago.

Mrs. Fralick thinks that the seasons have changed since she was a girl. 'We always had far more snow than we have now and the summers were not so hot and dry.'

Mr. Malcolm Parks, a neighbor, who attended the anniversary celebration, stated that Mr. and Mrs. Fralick were ideal neighbours. He recalled that Mrs. Fralick was for many years a practical nurse and was in demand when there were especially difficult cases. He believed that few can cook better pancakes or fried cakes than Mrs. Fralick and stated that he was always sure to drop over when he found out they were being made.

Present at the celebration were the four daughters, Mrs. Eldon Scott of East Lake, Mrs. Luther Leavitt of Buffalo, Mrs. Frank Howell of Demorestville and Mrs. George Woodward of East Lake. Also present was Mrs. William Vrooman of Albany, N.Y. They also have twelve grandchildren, nine great grandchildren and two great, great grandchildren.

Mr. and Mrs. Fralick are friends of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Addison Mabee, who have been married for 76 years and who are Canada's longest married couple.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Has Marriage a Time Limit?

It is a conceded fact that the average life of a city house is twenty-five years. By this time it is outmoded, and is torn down and something more up-to-date replaces it. Has marriage the same time limit?

Statistics, those straws which show how the wind blows, have contributed something new concerning marriage. More middle-aged couples are getting divorces than ever before. It used to be agreed that if couples stayed together for twenty-five or thirty years, they were apt to fulfill that clause of the marriage contract: "Until death us do part."

But marriage license bureaus indicate this is no longer the case, especially in states which specialize in divorce. It's not the young and restless who are eager to break their marriage ties, but of late years people approaching middle-age.

A certain woman's organization sent out a questionnaire and received some interesting answers. The principal reason assigned for the severance of marriage ties in middle age is that the children of unhappy marriages are now grown, possibly married, are launched, successfully in careers and that their mismated parents no longer feel an obligation to keep the home together.

Another answer and one which countless letters coming to this column would seek to confirm, is that as middle-aged couples see the wintry years approach, they make one last frantic grab for romance. In the case of men this is especially true. People who have been bogged down in dreary domesticity welcome anything which promises to pull them from the rut. To turn over a new leaf with a new partner—the chance is well forth trying.

Again there are the plodders who do not find fault with the long gray road over which they have travelled, unless the travelling companion has been a nagger, a fault-finder, a philanderer a spend-thrift, a miser and then strangely enough, at the end of a quarter of a century, patience ceases to be a virtue.

One is amazed sometimes to see a sensible woman break up a beautiful home, go into a tiny apartment and take anything in the way of a job. You are amazed, too, to see the effect of this change in her face, her improved appearance and alertness. If reticence keeps her from telling the world the secret of this second youth, you may surmise it's because she no longer has to make excuses for a drunkard, or be blind to the skirt-chasings of the philanderers: or the little job she has succeeded in getting may be saving her from begging dimes from a miser. The effect of earning her own money, no matter how little, instead of living on a matrimonial dole from a man she has ceased to love or respect, is accountable for her changed appearance.

Or again, the aging pater familias will indulge in a bright hatband or a gay necktie, a signal to friends and acquaintances that life in his club, or even a humble boarding house, is "Paradise Enow", that he has parted with a shrew, who has nagged him for a quarter of a century. Nothing he ever did was agreeable to his wife. She did not like his relatives, his friends, his occupation, his clothes, his politics, his religion, or anything that was his. And she has a memory for unhappy occurrences as long as eternity.

A generation ago, these people would not have divorced each other They would have stayed together and endured until death intervened. But divorce today is not what it was when Queen Victoria was the social arbiter of this country as well as Great Britain, and decreed that no woman should be presented at Court, who had been divorced, and when we Americans followed suit to the extent of not presenting marital grievances to the divorce court.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Do's and Don'ts For Train Travelers

Don't push your way pellmell into a train. Enter quickly, of course, if there are other passengers behind you that shouldn't be held up. But don't shove your manners and other passengers aside in grim-determination to capture the best seat.

If someone is occupying part of a seat, the polite traveller asks "Is this seat taken ?" It's one of those small acts of grace that show our mannerliness.

Don't take a seat on which a bag or a wrap has been left. This is a sign that the seat is occupied and that the rightful occupant of the seat will return to it.

Don't be a seat-hog, one of the lowest forms of animal life. Don't monopolize an entire seat when you see that other passengers are looking for seats. Don't be such a meanie that you make believe that you are asleep or are engrossed in a book or in looking at the scenery and so didn't notice that the train is filling up and that the place in your seat is needed. Don't force a passenger who is entitled to a seat as much as you are, to ask, "May I sit here?" Before you're rated as a selfish gump, instantly remove your impedimenta from the seat that doesn't belong to you.

Don't put your feet on the cushion of the seat in front. It's an obvious courtesy to the next occupant of the seat.

Don't greedily turn the seat over and place your belongings on it. Another trick of the seat-hog!

If, in getting to your seat next to the window, you have to pass in front of the passenger sitting on the aisle, courteously ask "May I pass?" and say a courteous "Thank you" when you have passed. A man sitting in the aisle seat should rise to let a woman pass in or out. A woman needn't rise, but she may, if she things that this will make for greater comfort, both to her fellow passenger and herself.

Windows and window shades are often a courtesy problem on trains. The courteous passenger, seated next to the window, is sensitive to the comfort of the person seated in the same seat, and to those directly behind and in front. Thoughtful questions, such as 'Do you mind if I open this window?" or "Would you mind if I pull down this shade?" are appreciated and usually consented to. On the other hand, if we are made uncomfortable by an open window in front of us or behind us, we may, politely, ask that it be closed.

Have a considerate regard for other people's nostrils. Don't pack a lunch-box with odoriferous foods. Don't eat bananas or juicy foods in day coaches. And don't use heavy perfumes when you are travelling.

Don't smoke at times or in places when you are not supposed to. And when you are smoking in the dining-car, press out your cigarette or cigar when you have finished smoking. . . . don't leave it smouldering. And use an ash-tray, not your plate or saucer.

Don't (with your group) monopolize the platform of an observation car, or the radio in a lounge or club car. And don't monopolize the mirror or washbowl in the dressing room.

When you make inquiries, make them of the proper official or attendant.

And do say a pleasant 'Thank you' to a trainman or porter or anyone who does you a service.

Courtesy Tip

There are two kinds of hostesses and hosts. Those who serve a guest with a cold drink with a small plate under the glass and those who never think of putting a plate under the glass.

It's easy to get the habit of always remembering to put a plate under a glass before you pass a drink to a guest. And it's one of those important details that give grace to you service, and at the same time are practical. The under-plate catches the drops from the glass, is a resting-place for the spoon or sipper.

Fiery, Itching Toes and Feet

Here is a clean, stainless antiseptic oil now dispensed by chemists at trifling cost, that will do more to help you get rid of your trouble than anything you've ever used.

Its action is so powerfully penetrating that the itching is instantly stopped; and in a short time you are rid of that bothersome, fiery eczema. The same is true of Barber's Itch, Salt Rheum, Itching Toes and Feet—other irritating unsightly skin troubles.

You can obtain Moone's Emerald Oil in the original bottles at any modern drug store. It is safe to use—and failure in any of the ailments noted above is rare indeed.

As Exercise, Riding is Tops

By HELEN FOLLETT

HORSEBACK riding is an exercise that is considered tops. What prettier sight can you find than a pretty girl galloping along the bridle path? Fun, as any horsewoman will tell you. It's fine for jiggling hips down to normal. Fresh air pours into the lungs to make the cheeks rosy and to chug up appetite.

As far as reducing is concerned, an establishment devoted to physical remodeling can supply you with a substitute horse propelled by electricity. It canters and gallops. The late President Coolidge found it a convenient form of exercise. One good thing; it won't throw you over its head, because it hasn't got one.

A rowing machine is a good friend to any woman who would work superfluous tissues from arms and neck. Chinning the bar will develop a normal chest, and the normal chest usually supports a normally-rounded bust.

Some day when you want to give yourself a treat, join a gym class. It is only by that means, that some women will get exercise. They find calesthenics tedious and uninteresting, so postpone the agony. But a regular appointment keeps them at the task in course of time they find pleasure in muscular exertion.

JEAN CHATBURN

Horseback riding keeps her in health and beauty

Pouches under the eyes don't always mean that kidney ailments are present. Sometimes they are a family inheritance, and not a very nice one. Fatigue brings them, also intestinal disturbances.

The first step is strict regard for all the laws of health. Eat wisely, drink plenty of water, bathe daily so that the skin will function normally as an eliminating organ. Get plenty of fresh air and exercise. Don't wait until you are fagged out before you tumble into bed. When you go to bed, rid yourself of the day's worries, try to be tranquil.

Every night bathe the eyes with hot water, rubbing from the inner corner outward. Dip a washcloth in ice cold water, place over the eyes for five minutes. Dry gently, go 'round and 'round the eyes with a finger dipped in a soothing cream. Use cold water freely every morning.

Beauty's Temple!

FLORENCE RICE . . . knows there are many elements of good looks.

It's Built on a Foundation of Health

By HELEN FOLLETT

ONE hears the question, "Which comes first the hairdress or the hat?" Or, "Which is the greater asset, a lovely figure or a beautiful face?" All futile. The beauty go-getter whose brain works seeks a harmonious composition. She saws wood, keeps all her beauty kettles boiling. Arguments don't interest her; she has pulchritude chores to attend to.

She knows that good looks are made up of many elements, that qualities of charm would make a list as long as your arm. She goes after all of them, lands as many as she can. She cultivates a pleasing voice, has regard for posture no matter how tired she is, keeps herself clean and dainty, makes a big point of freshness of appearance.

She doesn't take smiling glimpses of herself in the mirror, but regards herself with a critical eye, then she knows what materials she has to work with. She has no inferiority complex. If other girls can be attractive, she can, too.

Having sense in her head, she knows that the temple of beauty is built on a foundation of health. She counts on eight hours of sleep every night, doesn't permit herself to get worn to a frazzle, has at least one hour out-of-doors each day, keeps a tight rein on her nervous system. No emotional storms for her they demand too high a price in appearance, cause premature wrinkles and saggy tissues.

There are skins that rebel against soap; there are others that won't endure creams of even the finest composition. These last are rare, having a phobia for which nobody can account without a medical examination.

For both types of complexions a cleansing meal will perform the work of renovating. Cosmetic counters have them in various forms. Some have a base of powdered oatmeal, others include almond meal, a beautifying agent that has been used for many years.

Dip a washcloth in warm water, sprinkle it with meal, go over the skin surface lightly. In place of an oily cosmetic a hand lotion can be used. We refer to those milky, semi-solid preparations that are soothing.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Medical Treatment of Minor Cuts May Obviate Lastings Scars

Not long ago I had to remove a toe from a child's foot because he had sustained a cut which hadn't received the proper attention. This may sound pretty gruesome, but it is in the nature of a warning to mothers, particularly in the summer, when children are at camp and such injuries are common.

The trouble is that when children are away for the summer, no doctors are nearby, and so the responsibility for looking after minor injuries falls on the mother. It is relatively easy to clean off a scrape —provided you aren't too gentle— but cleaning out a cut is much harder. If the cut is very deep, then it is wise to call a doctor.

There are two reasons for being so insistent about a doctor. The first is the danger of tetanus. Usually cuts sustained outdoors are contaminated by contact with the ground. This means there is danger that they may have been infected with tetanus baccilli. Unless precautions are taken the child may become the victim of tetanus— "lockjaw", to give it the name most people know it by.

There is now an anti-toxin available which, if injected in time, will protect the child from the disease. But it must be administered within a day or two of the time of the cut. It is because of the serious nature of this terrible disease that I recommend that the doctor be advised about every bad cut that a child suffers. Let the doctor decide whether or not he thinks it is of sufficient importance to have the anti-toxin given.

If the cuts happen to be in a prominent place such as in the hands, or on the face, it is a good thing to call a doctor for a different reason. A good doctor can take an ugly -looking scar and with a few well-placed stitches close it up so that little if any scar is left when it is healed. Just look at the many people you meet on the streets who bear scars, and you can bet that if a doctor had looked after that wound when it was first made there wouldn't have been any scar left.

I can tell you we are careful of any injuries the Quintuplets get as they play about the yard. They have their trained nures right there all the time but anytime one of them gets a cut, they call me out immediately. I insist on this because I recall many times hearing mothers moan "Oh, doctor, if we had only called you when Willie first cut himself." But by the time they got around to calling me, Willie was a very sick boy.

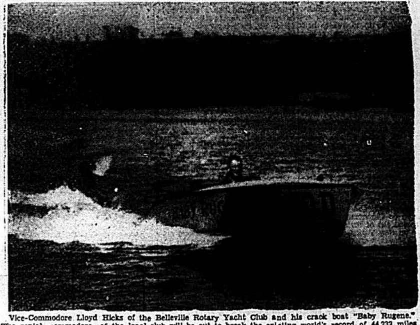
"Aguila" crack 225 cubic inch flash owned and driven by Don Forman of Buffalo. Don is one of the entries in the feature event at the regatta here on Monday, and willbe going "all out" in an endeavor to wrest the handsome Belleville-Sargent Gold Trophy.

Jackie "Pops" Cooper, Kansas City, grand old man of the water speedways and one of the grandest sportsmen that ever jerked a throttle. "Pops" is so convinced that he can take the measure of the younger men, that he wired Regatta officials yesterday that he is bringing an outboard motor job and will race it against anything that floats in its class.

Jackie "Pops" Cooper Kansas City, Mo., veteran speedboat driver and holder of the world's record over a measured mile course for 225 cubic inch hydroplanes. "Pops" and his crack flyer, "Tops 3rd," will be here to defend the title on Monday.

Here he is, ladies and gents, that rip-snorting, tootin' shootin' son-of-a-gun from Ohio, the seventy-nine year old youngster, "Bob" Jaite, of Jaite, Ohio. The stern look on the "kid's" face was registered before he took off in the final heat of the Gold Cup race at Picton this year. Incidentally Bob won the trophy and will be here to take back the Belleville-Sargent Gold Trophy to keep it company. If he wins, Bob says, he is going to take up dentistry, figuring he'll have enough gold to last him for years.

The two grand old men of the speedboat stakes. On the left, ladies and gentlemen is "Kid" Pops Cooper, 64, 225 champion of Missouri and holder of the world's title, and his opponent "Bob Jaite" the Terror from Ohio, aged 79. They'll be in there battling for the title on Monday and will in all likelihood provide thrills such as never before experienced by the local public.



Vice-Commodore Lloyd Hicks of the Belleville Rotary Yacht Club and his crack boat "Baby Rugene." The genial commodore of the local club will be out to break the existing world's record of 44.232 miles per hour for 210 cubic inch boats.

DiMag Led Yankee Uprising With Two Homers and Single As Tigers Are Swamped 12-3

Boston Red Sox Hold to Pace by Win Over Cleveland

CARDS WIN TWO

Slaughter and Medwick Hit Homers to Defeat Boston Bees

(By Judson Bailey Associated Press Sports Writer).

Just when a few doubting fans begin to believe the Yankees have lost their vaunted power to overcome forbidding obstacles the world baseball champions step forth justly to show they haven't. That's what they did yesterday against Detroit Tigers.

It's an old story for the American League rulers. After losing half a dozen games in a row and getting a lot of people excited in early July they reeled off 13 victories in their next 15 games. Yesterday they came up with a 16-hit attack on Detroit to halt a three-game skid and set the Tigers back 12-3.

Joe DiMaggio led the Yankee uprising with two home runs and a single, bringing in five tallies. Bill Dickey and Red Rolfe hit homers and Babe Dahlgren tripled with the bases loaded. The home runs brought the Yankee total to 95 for 96 games this season.

Boston Red Sox, grimly hanging within hollering distance of the lead, scalped the Cleveland Indians 17-6. Cleveland contributed six errors in addition to 19 hits to help the Red Sox along. They needed help because their own pitchers gave up 15 safeties.

Chicago White Sox completed their series with the Athletics on a 9-7 victory note accomplished by bunching most of their blows and all their runs in three middle innings.

Senators Sweep Series

Washington Senators swept their session with St. Louis Browns with a 9-5 victory in the finale, although outhit 13-10. Young George Washington Case put this one across, hitting a triple, a double and a single, stealing three bases and scoring three runs.

In the National League the second place St. Louis Cardinals extended their current winning streak to five games with a double victory over Boston Bees and picked up a full notch on Cincinnati Reds, who were rained out of their chance at revenge on New York Giants.

Lon Warneke went the route for the first time since May 30 with an eight-hit exhibit in the first game, which Joe Medwick and Enos Slaughter helped him win 5-1 with a couple of homers. Slaughter hit another circuit blow with one on in the eighth inning of the nightcap to bring the Cards cruising from behind to win 4-3 for Mort Cooper.

Brooklyn Dodgers climbed into a fifth-place tie with the Giants by taking the deciding game of their series at Pittsburgh 4-1.

Chicago Cubs plastered another defeat on the Phillies 9-6 to give Bill Lee his 12th victory of the year.

BANCROFT HANDED 6-5 LOSS BY COE HILL

Bancroft, Aug. 4 (Special)—What was advertised as a ball game turned out to be somewhat of a donnybrook and was interspersed with outbreaks of fisticuffs between opposing players and spectators alike as Coe Hill came to town and handed the local ballsters a 6-5 reverse here yesterday.

B. Giles did the pitching for Coe Hill, issuing one walk, struck out eight and issuing 8 safe hits. K. Sprung was on the mound for the locals striking out 11, issuing seven hits and giving three walks.

Both teams played fairly good ball, but poor umpiring by Martin of Coe Hill discouraged them.

Lineups:

Coe Hill: H. LeHigh 1b; G. Martin c; G. McCaw lf; J McKeeligan rf; B. Giles p; C. Rollins cf; G. Puff ss; G. Muffett 2b; I. Gunter 3b.

Bancroft: H. Watson ss; M. J. Murray 2b; Harold Watson 1b; M. Burns cf; M. Fisher 3b; B. McAlpine c; G. Buckley rf; E. Vance lf; K. Sprung p.

GREYHOUND TO GIVE EXHIBITION MILE AT GOSHEN

(By Gayle Talbot Associated Press Sports Writer).

New York, Aug. 4 (AP)—A great, tall horse named Greyhound will be hanging around like a ghost at a banquet and taking the guests' minds off their provender during the trotting of the $40,000 Hambletonian mile, world's top harness classic, next Wednesday at Goshen, N.Y.

While the cream of the three-year-olds are pounding around the track a lot of spectators will be waiting for them to get through so Greyhound can come out and give his "exhibition." Or perhaps they will let Greyhound do his showing-off first and then turn the stage over to the youngsters.

It's been four years now since Greyhound won his Hambletonian, and his successor isn't in sight. He could trot them all into the ground then, and he still can.

Greyhound's world record for the mile is 1:55 1-4, or a speed of better than 30 miles an hour with a heavy driver and a rubber-tired sulky pitched on behind. The best they are hoping for in the Hambletonian is about a 2:01 mile, and that would be a quarter-second faster than the existing record for the classic.

They aren't sure how Greyhound happened. His sire, Guy Abbey, had a record of 2:06 3-4, but his dam, Elizabeth, left no record and scarcely was trained. They've tried the same parents three times since, but two full-brothers of Greyhound showed absolutely no promise and a sister still is a yearling.

Attempting to Catch Ball from Great Height Causes Painful Injuries

San Francisco, Aug. 4 (AP)—An attempt to set a new record for catching a baseball dropped from a great height cost J. Sprinz, veteran catcher for Pacific Coast League San Francisco Seals, a compound jaw fracture, the loss of eight teeth and ragged lacerations of both lips.

At a celebration of baseball day at the Golden Gate Exposition yesterday, five baseballs were dropped 800 feet from a blimp cruising over Treasure Island.

Four balls fell out of range. Sprinz circled under the fifth and held his glove up. The ball struck the glove with terrific force, and the glove smashed against his face. He dropped to the ground in pain and failed to hang onto the baseball.

The record catch of 758 feet was from the top of Terminal Tower in Cleveland.

GRAHAM HITTING

Oriole Outfielder Hitting a Streak Since Joining Squad

(By The Associated Press)

Baltimore Orioles have climbed out of the cellar to sixth place in the International League standings since July 14 and now are pressing Newark Bears for the top spot in the second division. A good deal of credit for the Flock's sudden upward flight should be given to Arthur W. Graham.

Art was obtained from Little Rock of the Southern Association where he batted .243. Until July 14 he wasn't any great shakes with the willow, hitting only .252, but for the past three weeks he has been on a batting spree and has boosted his average to .308.

When Baltimore left the cellar for greener pastures, Graham had batted in 22 runs. His total now is 58 and he has connected for seven homers during his splurge.

Last night Art gave a typical slugging performance to help the Flock break even in a twin-bill with Toronto. Baltimore won the opener 9-3 and lost the second game 6-5.

Four Out of Seven

Graham hit safely four times in seven trips to the plate and knocked in six runs. He collected two homers in the first game, one of which was good for four runs. Dick Midkiff went the distance for Baltimore in this stanza, holding the Leafs to eight safeties for his fifth win of the year, while his mates pounded Joe Mulligan for 10.

The Orioles jumped on Carl Fischer in the second game and nicked him for seven hits in four innings, but John Berley went to the rescue and held them to three hits the rest of the way. The Leafs belted four Oriole hurlers, starting with Jimmy Kerr who was charged with loss, for 10 sound blows, including round-trippers by Mel Mazzera and Emile Dejonghe. Dejonghe's came in the fifth with two aboard and decided the game.

Rain caused postponement of the game between Montreal and Jersey City and also the Buffalo-Syracuse tilt. Two games will be played at Jersey City tomorrow.

BISONS TROUNCE RUGMAKERS 5-2

Amsterdam's Lead Shaved to Five Games in Can-Am League

(By The Canadian Press)

Amsterdam Rugmakers, leaders of the Canadian-American Baseball League for most of the season, are beginning to find the going just a little tough and a big lead they sported two weeks ago has been shaved down to less than five games.

The second place Oswego Netherlands, although their game with Uhica was rained out, gained a half game yesterday as Cornwall's fast stepping Bisons trounced the Rugmkers 5-2 for their -0th victory in 13 starts.

Trumbore's seven hit pitching was the big factor in Cornwall's victory as the Bisons had a big third inning in which they scored three runs. Two doubles, a wild pitch and Sabol's triple accounted for the runs.

In the best pitched game of the night, Bill Gorman of Gloversville tossed four-hit ball to beat Ottawa 3-0 and shade Johnny Orpheus who allowed only eight blows himself. Alec Clowson, who had eight put-outs in centre field, batted in two of the runs.

Rome Colonels pounded two Ogdensburg pitchers for 15 hits and an 8-4 victory. The attack included three home runs and three doubles.

JOE MEDWICK, MANAGER BLADES SHAKE HANDS

St. Louis, Aug. 4 (AP)—Joe Medwick's homer in his first time up against Boston Bees yesterday, after the fans had cheered his appearance, was looked upon today as a resounding answer to reports the Cardinal outfielder was disgruntled, was not doing his best, and would soon don a Brooklyn uniform.

The reports were inspired by Medwick's display of temper in Tuesday's game when Manager Ray Blades sent Lynn King to replace him in the outfield in the ninth inning.

After he and Medwick shook hands Blades said: "The removal of Medwick was just a tactical change for a moment which I thought might be beneficial on the defence. I think Medwick is a great player and have never thought anytning else. He'll be in there every day.

Medwick stated: "I have done my very best, and if I have missed a few more flies than ordinarily it was not because of lack of heart. I have no sore arm or sore leg excuses and I'm giving everything I have and will continue to do so. Blades is trying to manage the club as he sees it, I know."

President Sam Breadon of the Cards, backing Blades in his managerial tactics, called the affair a "tempest in a teapot," and said it was "a closed incident."

Ken J. Colling

We received a bulletin from W. J. Snyder, secretary of the O.B.A. today announcing the minor league play-offs throughout the province. Listed were draws for the Bantam, Midget, Juvenile and Junior O.B.A. playdowns. What actually struck us as being rather queer was the absence of entries from Eastern and Central Ontario. To be more explicit, and it is a rather deplorable state of affairs we suggest, but there wasn't a single minor league baseball entry listed in the O.B.A. bulletin east of Toronto, with the lone exception of the Lake Shore League, which we believe is composed solely of the Oshawa juniors. Minor league baseball has never been afforded encouragement or even the consideration it should have received throughout the Eastern end of the O.B.A. jurisdiction with the result that baseball is rapidly on the decline east of Oshawa, with the possible exception of Peterboro. When the minors are neglected eventually the higher ranking clubs suffer through the lack of replenishment as time marches on.

In recent years there has been a lack of young players advancing to fill the places or retiring veterans in both baseball and hockey in Belleville. This absence is directly responsible for the lack of interest taken in minor league sports both by sponsors and the attending public. If the patrons do not attend and encourage minor league sports how do they expect matured athletes to entertain them? Minor league baseball is a dead issue in Belleville today after years of struggling on the part of a few interested parties. Insofar as hockey is concerned a juvenile team was organised two years ago, but dropped out in favour of junior hockey last winter. When the present crop of juniors attain the age of manhood and graduate into higher ranks Belleville will again be confronted with commencing at the bottom of the hockey ladder and constructing a new foundation. In team sports the only successful method of continued replenishment is the sponsorship and fostering of juveniles as well as juniors. The rest will take care of itself.

As has been the repeated situation ever since softball has been played in Belleville under the banner of the O.A.S.A., that old bone of contention—umpires, annually crops up and causes no end of arguments as soon as the play-off period rides around. Frankly speaking we see no reason why the umpires employed all season should not be continued throughout the league play-offs. If they are qualified to umpire, in league championship games in June, surely they are equally as qualified in August, when the play-offs get under way. When the city winner continues into the O.A.S.A. they are perfectly satisfied with the umpires assigned by the O.A.S.A., and who are usually the arbiters to have officiated during the season's play. So why all this huff guff and complaining? When the world series rolls around we don't see the major leagues bringing in umpires from the bush leagues, nor do they bring in new faces into the International League play-offs and we again say—if the umpires in our softball league are qualified to officiate during regular league play, they are equally as qualified to officiate when the play-offs roll around, equally as well as the players.

Secretary Orland Pinkston today assured us he had received 13 entries for the 225 cubic inch class for Monday's A.P.B.A. big race sponsored by the Belleville Rotary Club. This is one of the largest fields of entries ever to face the starting buoy in Canada.

Also of interest is the introduction of the 135 cubic inch displacement class. Only once before in Canada have these speedy 135 class boats raced, two craft giving an exhibition at the Toronto National Exhibition last year. At Massassaga on Monday five of the 135 inch class have been entered. Lloyd Hicks, Belleville's hope in the 210 class, informs us the 135 class boats are faster than the 210 class, attaining as high as 65 miles per hour at times. Although the boats attain their maximum speed on the straightaway of the course, the thrills are seen on the turns, where the drivers are often hurled bodily from their seats as the boats capsize or in some cases actually toss the drived a la bronco style. A thrill a minute is the guarantee of the Rotary Regatta.

Saying it with circuit clouts, the New York Yankees returned to winning ways yesterday to down the Detroit Tigers 12-3. DiMaggio hit two homers whill Bill Dickey clouted his 17th circuit blow and Red Rolfe hit a four bagger in the sixth. Monte Pearson was the winning pitcher. At Washington "Canada Joe" Krakauskas chalked up another win for himself as the Senators beat the Browns. Incidentally did you know the proper nickname for the Washington Americans is the Nationals and not the Senators?

No doubt it will be Eddie Schrieder versus Johnnie Bawden at the Flats tonight. It is a case of do or die on the part of the "Oilers", because a loss means elimination. Corbys now have two chances to the Sedore-led squad's only hope of winning. The "Oilers" have beaten Schrieder once during the series, but as the old saying goes — tonight's another day and another mushball game.

Sports Chips — Both Poland and Russia are interested in introducing both baseball and basketball into their respective countries and may employ American coaches in the advancement of these team sports soon....The Cannifton "Sluggers" hope to even their series with the Shannonville Hawks tonight....The Sunderland club of the Lake Shore League was suspended yesterday, bringing together Port Hope and Cobourg in the league semi-finals ....The Belleville "Orfuns" are in Picton tonight and had better shake a leg in victory if they hope to terminate the league schedule in a play-off slot.

BRITISH PREMIER

carrier, one destroyer flotilla of eight ships, 15 submarines, about 25 river gunboats and escort vessels and half a dozen station and mother ships.

Negotiation Preferred

(Britain has, however, built a great naval base at Singapore, two or three days' steaming from the China coast, capable of basing and repairing the largest battleships.

(Last April 15 President Roosevelt ordered the United States fleet back to the Pacific coast after several months in Atlantic waters.)

"We would much rather settle our differences with the Japanese by discussion and negotiation, provided we can do so without sacrificing what we conceive to be fundamental considerations and principles, than to do it by threats of force," he said.

Force Would Imperil Those in Orient

He said the use of force would imperil British subjects in Japanese-controlled areas of China and this had been taken into consideration.

"Even if we determined tomorrow that we were going to the last extremity we could not perhaps protect those people—we certainly could not protect many of them," he continued.

"I do feel we have a duty to them that we ought to bear in mind and that we ought not, if we can avoid it, put them in greater peril than that in which they now stand."

(About 20,000 British subjects are resident in China, nearly all in Japanese occupied territory. In addition about 20,000 Britons live in the crown colony of Hong Kong, off the south China coast.)

The Prime Minister then paid a tribute to Sir Robert Craigie, Ambassador to Japan, "who is carrying on at the present time with great skill, coolness and courage negotiations in extraordinarly difficult circumstances"—the Tokyo conference on the Tientsin dispute.

Formula Defended

Referring to opposition criticism of the formula agreed to by Britain July 22 as a basis for negotiation of the Tientsin dispute, Mr. Chamberlain said:

"At any rate this formula has enabled us to discuss the very acute situation in Tientsin and in regard to some parts of the difficulties there it does look as though we should not have any great difficulty in coming to an agreement with the Japanese.

"I say that deliberately because although it is no use coming to an agreement on one point if you cannot react an agreement on others—because an agreement must be taken as a whole—it does show that those who are conducting these negotiations in Tokyo are by no means so extreme or unreasonable as we have found many of the Japanese in China itself."

Britain had made it perfectly clear, Mr. Chamberlain continued, that she was not prepared to settle with Japan alone questions of currency and Chinese silver in the British and French concessions in Tientsin because these were questions which concerned other powers.

Japan Submits Evidence

On the question of handing over four alleged Chinese terrorists being held in the British concession in Tientsin, Mr. Chamberlain said Japanese had submitted evidence of the men's guilt and that this now was under consideration.

(Anglo-Japanese dispute in the north China port originally was precipitated by British refusal to hand over the four Chinese to the Japanese who charged them with being responsible for the murder of a minor customs official).

British Position Unchanged

The Prime Minister said Britain had not gone back on her position regarding Japan's military action in China, but there was nothing in any obligation she had undertaken which bound her to denounce her commercial treaty with Japan.

(The United States denounced her commercial treaty with Japan July 26.)

Mr. Chamberlain said "no immediate effect would be produced" if Britain denounced her treaty. He added the Japanese-British treaty was accompanied by Japanese treaties with some of the Dominions and said it would be "outrageous on our part to shut our eyes to the effect denunciation of the treaty might have and do anything about denunciation without first having full agreement of the Dominions."

He added his statement might give the impression that "I am determined that the trade treaty should not be denounced, but do not let anybody put that interpretation on my words." He continued:

Shares Violent Feelings

"However our feelings may be exasperated by things happening in the Far East I can assure the House that I share fully the most violent feelings of anyone on that subject.

"It makes my blood boil to hear and read of some of the things happening there. However those emotions may be aroused in us, let us not forget the liabilities we have already assumed or the position of our fellow countrymen and countrywomen who are already on the spot.

"I have tried to give the House some sort of indication of considerations which we have to take into consideration in the Far East.

"We shall endeavor in continuing negotiations to preserve to the utmost extent the principles which have hitherto governed our conduct there.

To Show Patience

"We shall preserve to the utmost possible extent the interests and fortunes of British subjects there.

"We shall endeavor to show patience and to exercise reasonable moderation, recognizing that behind all these outrageous things there may be some genuine suspicion on the part of Japanese in China of our treatment of them.

"We must not forget there may be even greater and nearer problems to consider in the course of the next few months and we must conserve our forces to meet any emergency which might arise."

The Stars Say

For Saturday, August 5

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

DESPITE unsettlement and surprising developments, this day will be memorable for honors, dignities, promotion and some token of preferment from those in high places. It is a time to aim at high objectives, as those in influential positions will be ready to reward sterling qualities and steadfastness.

Those whose birthday it is will find this a year for definite expansion, promotion and recognition for industry, fidelity and achievement in places of responsibility and service. High powers are ready to confer favors, but be careful with writings and documents. Be wary with strangers.

A child born on this day will be efficient, versatile and ambitious and will have the support and preferment of important personages in promoting its enduring success.

MOON ON THE WATER

by Ruby M. Ayres

Gavin pulled up a chair and sat down, his hands hanging loosely between his knees, his eyes on the fire. "Supposing I make a failure of it," he said.

Jane's eyes dilated. "You won't," she answered.

He shrugged his shoulders. "There's a great risk. I'm not a business man—and the fact that I—or rather that you—have put money into the show, is no guarantee that I shall be a success."

There was a sort of hard unhappiness in his voice. Jane slipped her hand into his. "Don't look on the dark side, dear."

He let her hand lie in his, but he gave it no answering pressure, and he did not seem to notice when presently she drew it gently away.

It was like struggling up a hill, she thought—a hill which you know perfectly well you cannot really climb, and yet you have to go on—trying.

The telephone bell rang in the hall, and with a sense of relief Jane rose to answer it.

"Pamela, speaking—I am bringing Sidney back to supper. Will you tell Mary, please? Is Dulcie back?"

"Not yet."

"Or Gavin?"

"Yes."

"Oh—well, I hope there'll be enough food." Pamela sounded a little anxious—the ordering of meals was a constant worry to her.

"Gavin is not staying," Jane told her.

"Oh—well, then it will be all right. I shall be in by half-past seven."

Jane went back to the drawing room. "It was Pamela—she is bringing Sidney for supper."

"The highly respectable suitor," Gavin said.

She flushed. "I wish you wouldn't sneer at Sidney," she said offendedly. "He's really very kind."

"Kind!" Gavin echoed.

"I think kindness is the greatest thing in the world," Jane said. She stooped to poke the dying fire.

Presently Gavin said. "Well, I must be off. It's past seven."

"You mustn't be late for dinner," Jane agreed quietly.

It was all so unbelieveable—so tragic! and then she wondered whether that was too exaggerated a word, or whether the small and apparently inexplicable things of life are its greatest tragedies.

"Shall I see you tomorrow?" Gavin asked.

"Yes, of course, if you want to?" she answered.

He turned towards the door, and then suddenly she seemed to come to life, so that she took a quick step to follow him.

"Gavin!"

He stopped, and she said, half laughing, half in tears: "What is the matter with us? We seem so—different — somehow. Everything seems to have gone wrong since Dulcie came home," and then she would have given ten years of her life never to have spoken her sister's name.

"Dulcie?"

"I mean, during the last week," Jane explained. "We were so happy before, and now—I feel as if there are miles and miles between us which I can't cover."

She was flushed with eagerness and the desire to make him understand the things she could not say, and it was like a cold wind blowing upon her heart when he answered:

"Perhaps you are beginning to regret your generosity to a penniless man. I warned you, you know, and if it's that——"

INSTALMENT 16.

Jane just looked at Gavin and she saw the color rise dully in his handsome face.

"I'm sorry, Jane. I'm out of sorts. You're too good to me—I don't deserve it. I——" Then he laughed. "We're making a tragedy out of nothing," he said more naturally. "It will be all right—later on, when things are settled."

But Jane could not smile, and he came back, looking down at her with sorry eyes.

"I'm a brute," he said remorsefully. "And you're an angel of patience and forgiveness. Forgive me, Jane——"

Her eyes filled with tears. "I love you, she whispered."

It seemed an eternity before he answered, and then he put an arm around her, drawing her to him.

"You've made a bad bargain, my dear."

For a moment she clung to him and then, as if afraid of the emotion that had arisen between them, she tried to laugh.

"I'm the best judge of that," she said. "Run along now to supper, or you'll be unpopular with Mrs. Bingham. Come tomorrow morning—and —and don't worry, dear—everything is quite all right."

But she knew it was not—she knew it was not, and after he had gone, the old despair descended once more like a cold weight upon her shoulders. Ought she to offer to release him? Was that what he wanted? Did he really hate the idea of this partnership, and was he only going on with it for her sake?

It was agonizing to sit at the supper table and watch Pamela and Sidney Dale. She had always considered them to be rather a dull pair, but tonight she understood the quiet happiness of their relationship and their gentle consideration of each other.

"Of course, Pamela will marry him," she told herself. "And I suppose Dulcie will marry her Josh—or won't she? And then—there will be only me left to look after father."

Her thoughts seemed to come to a full stop.

The Moon on the Water! "A fair woman who will cast a cloud over your life!" She seemed to hear Dulcie's voice as she bent over Gavin's hand.

As if it could possibly be true! And even supposing there were things to be discovered from palmistry, or from an ordinary pack of cards, how could Dulcie possibly know anything about it?

She had just been pretending—just been trying to draw attention to herself; it was foolish to allow oneself to be influenced.

Jane dragged her thoughts back to something Sidney was saying. "I've bought a house; did Pamela tell you, Jane?"

He made the announcement in his quiet voice as if it were quite an ordinary every day thing to buy a house, but Jane saw the sudden light in Pamela's eyes.

"Oh, no, she hasn't told me," Jane said. "Where is it? How thrilling. What are you going to do with it?"

"Live in it, of course," he answered.

Jane looked at her sister, but Pamela merely said:

"There's nothing settled yet. Sidney has bought the house, and it's very nice, but the workmen won't be out for another month at least." And then she deliberately changed the conversation. But to Jane it was like the first roll of drums heralding disaster.

Pamela was going to be married and that would mean that she must stay at home to look after their father; because, of course, nobody in his senses would imagine that Dulcie would consider it to be her duty.

But later on in the evening when Sidney had taken his departure, Pamela said casually, "Even if we do decide to get married, I shall have father live with us, Sidney knows that and he is quite willing."

Jane drew a long breath of relief and her sister asked shrewdly, "Did you imagine I was going to leave him to you?"

"I never thought about it," Jane answered, but she felt as if a great load had been lifted from her shoulders.

"I should like to see the house," she said presently.

"It's quite nice," Pamela answered with deep satisfaction. "It's got two bathrooms—such an asset, I think—and a boiler for the hot-water. No more horrid stoves. I shall take Mary, too, if she'll come."

"It seems to be all arranged," Jane said, and Pamela answered, "Well, you have made your plans, so I thought it was time I thought of my own future."

Jane did not reply, and the elder girl went on, "Of course, you'll be married now Gavin's partnership is settled. There won't be anything to wait for. We might even have a double wedding if it can be arranged it will save expense."

"And—Dulcie?" Jane hazarded.

Pamela shrugged her shoulders. "Dulcie has never considered us, so there is no need for us to consider her. I expect she'll marry her old gentleman."

"He's not so 'old,' " Jane said indignantly, and then she laughed in faint embarrassment. "At least, he didn't seem old to me."

"He has evidently got the right side of you," Pamela remarked, and then she asked pertinently where Jane had thought of living after she was married.

"We've never thought about it," Jane was forced to admit.

Pamela said, "But you told me you had arranged to get married as soon as Gavin had his partnership."

"Oh—did I?" Jane flushed. "I'd forgotten; but anyway, we haven't decided anything — there's no hurry."

A little flash of pity crossed Pamela's face, but she did not pursue the subject, though Jane had the dreadful feeling that her sister knew something—or could see that she was not happy.

"What can I do? What can I do?" she asked herself in despair, and it seemed impossible that so short a time ago she had been confidently sure of managing her love affair successfully.

She had made up her mind to the fact that Gavin was not in love with her, and she had believed that friendship would be a sound enough basis for lasting happiness, but she no longer believed it. It was not enough; she had made the discovery that at heart she longed for love, just as any other girl longed for it, and that marriage with Gavin in the present circumstances was an impossibility, even supposing he was willing to go through with it.

And there was nobody to whom she could talk, nobody whose advice she could ask; her natural independence had failed her and left her with the feeling that she was just drifting about like a rudderless boat.

"Perhaps it will all come right and some day I shall find myself in port," she thought without much hope. "But it seems far more likely that I shall land on the rocks."

And Pamela, covertly watching her, was thinking: "Well, she won't break her heart, whatever happens; she's so happy-go-lucky—she'll just laugh if it turns out badly, and make the best of it."

Pamela did not like Gavin Montford very much. She held the conventional idea that if a man accepted financial help from a woman—even from the woman he was to marry—there must be something wrong.

Dulcie did not come home until the small hours of the morning, and she spent the best part of the following day in bed.

When Jane went to inquire if she would like anything, she merely shut her eyes and asked to be left alone.

"You're not ill, are you?" Jane asked.

"Ill?" Dulcie sat up then, looking the picture of health and beauty. "Ill? I was never better in my life. We had a marvelous evening but as I don't want to look an old hag before I'm thirty, I believe in taking a good rest. By the way," she added as Jane turned to go, "Josh says he would like to take you to lunch and a theatre some day—with me, of course," she was quick to add. "I suppose he thinks he must be polite to the family."

"There is no need for him to be polite to me," Jane said. "But I should love to go to a theatre—if you don't mind. It's very nice of him to ask me."

"Why should I mind?" Dulcie demanded. "I'm sure enough of him not to be jealous."

Jane could believe that, and she felt ashamed of her own wretchedness two nights ago when Dulcie and Gavin had dined at The George. And yet—wasn't that different? And hadn't Dulcie wished to be alone with him?

It was nearly lunch time, and so far there had been no word from Gavin, although he had promised to come during the morning.

INSTALMENT 17.

Jane felt restless and unable to settle to anything, and more than once she crossed the hall to telephone, meaning to ring Gavin, but each time she turned away.

If he did not wish to come, she would not ask him, and that seemed all wrong, for surely if they cared for each other and understood each other, there could be no question of pride, or feeling of hesitation over such a little matter.

When lunch was over she went out for a walk. Her spirits rose, and she delibedately chose to walk along by the stream, the way she had first walked with Gavin through the quiet darkness. "He liked me then," she told herself, and was sure of it.

No moon this afternoon! Just the shimmering sunlight on the surface of the water. It was impossible to feel sad on such an afternoon.

"It will all come right," she told herself firmly, as she turned to retrace her steps.

The first thing she saw in the hall was Gavin's hat thrown down on a chair, and Pamela, coming down the stairs, said in an undertone, "He came almost as soon as you'd gone out. Dulcie has been entertaining him."

"Oh," Jane said.

She took off her hat and coat and pushed back her unruly hair. "It must be tea time," she said vaguely, and she wondered why she felt as if she ought to call out in order to let Gavin and Dulcie know of her arrival before she opened the drawing-room door.

Dulcie was sitting on a low stool by the fire while Gavin lounged opposite in an armchair, and there was such an air of comfortable intimacy about the little scene that Jane felt as if she ought to say, "I'm sorry. I hope I'm not disturbing you."

Gavin rose to his feet, "Where have you been" he asked.

"Only for a walk—it was such a lovely afternoon.

"I've done my best to entertain him," Dulcie said, but she showed no signs of taking her departure. "Any hope of tea?" she asked.

INSIDE OUT

By CARLTON JAMES

Policeman Kelly swore profusely and glanced at his companion, Officer Herman Westley. The shortwave radio set in the patrol car had begun to bark their number. And it was just five minutes before three in the morning. At three the two officers would have been relieved from duty.

"That's luck for you," Kelly groaned.

He glanced into his code book, holding it beneath the instrument board light.

"Code 76." He repeated the number that had come from the shortwave set. "Murder," he read. "Man shot and killer has escaped."

Kelly closed the book and grinned. "Well, that ain't so bad. Murders was always my meat and drink."

Westley, who was driving, spun the wheel sharply. They slewed off the main thoroughfare and tore madly along a dimly lighted side street. Five minutes later the car drew up in front of a pretentious looking apartment, before which a small crowd was collected. The policemen pushed their way to the front door, ordered the liveried footman who was standing there to allow no one to enter, and went inside. A greatly excited superintendent met them in the hallway.

"This way, gentlemen. I thought you'd never come."

He stepped into an elevator, and the officers followed. At the tenth floor they lighted and the superintendent pointed to the door directly opposite.

"It happened in there, gentlemen. Ordway, Mr. Hentsling's butler, will let you in. It was Ordway who spread the alarm."

Kelly rapped loudly on the door and stepped inside the moment it was opened. Westley followed. The man who confronted them was obviously Ordway, the butler, and a badly frightened butler, too, Kelly thought with some amusement.

They could see the figure of a man lying on the floor in a room just off the entrance hall. Kelly bent over the body.

The victim had been shot squarely between the eyes.

The officer knew vaguely that Michael Hentaling was a prominent financier, and was reported to have lost heavily in the stock market crash.

Kelly stood erect and eyed the butler.

"What happened?" he asked.

Ordway gulped.

"I don't know, sir. I was in the pantry, preparing a sandwich and a glass of milk for Mr. Hentsling, who had just come in. I heard a shot, and rushed into the living room—to find this."

He paused staring helplessly at his master.

"Know where the shot came from?"

"It must have come from over there—through that window."

"What makes you think so?"

"It sounded sort of muffled. Besides, there's a fire escape there. A man could have been standing outside and made good his escape."

Officer Westley had reached the window in his rounds, and now Kelly turned to ask him a question.

"How's it look, Herman?"

Westley grunted.

The window in question was open and the policeman was tugging at the screen. Suddenly he stopped, seemed to examine something with unusual interest.

"Ordway's right," he said, joining the others in the centre of the room.

"There's a fire escape there and it would have been easy for the murderer to turn his trick and get away."

He looked abruptly into Ordway's white face.

"You been here all evening?"

"Yes, sir. Since early morning."

"And no one else was around? No one came in or went out?"

"No one except Mr. Hentsling."

"In that event," said Officer Westley sternly, "we'll have to charge you with the murder of your employer!"

Ordway gasped, and his cheeks went even whiter.

"Why—I don't understand. I—that is, you can't accuse me, without proof."

"That's true," Westley agreed laconically.

"Listen, Ordway, we know you killed Hentsling so you might as well come clean."

"You know! How? You haven't any proof!"

Westley leaned close.

"It's true that Hentsling lost heavily in the stock market, isn't it?"

"Yes."

"It's true his brokers have run him ragged by continually calling up for more margin? And it's true that Hentsling was just about out of funds?"

"I don't know. I know he received a good many calls."

"And you know also his brokers called him this morning. You know he had to have money, and he asked you for what you had, promising to double the amount when he paid you back. You gave it to him—probably your whole life's savings. And tonight you discovered he'd lost it all. You were broke, without a chance of getting it back. So you waited for him to come in, intending to kill him, which you did! That's true, isn't it?"

For an instant Ordway's eyes wavered. His expression was that of blank amazement.

"Why—why, how did you—that is—" he paused, staring helplessly into the officer's face.

There wasn't much he could do. Westley had the whole story down to its minutest detail. It was too amazing, too shockingly true to be contradicted without fear of incrimination.

"Self-defense is your best alibi," Westley was saying as he snapped on the cuffs. "It's your only chance." His tone was not unkind.

Later, once more in the patrol car, Officer Kelly let out a long whistle. "How," he asked, "in the name of all creation, did you dope it out? And me always thinking you were a dumb bloke."

Officer Westley grinned pleasantly. This was his moment of triumph and he took advantage of it.

"I don't know nothin' but what I read in the papers, as Will Rogers says," he grinned.

"Yeah! Well, get it off your chest. It's your night to crow."

Westley produced and lighted a cigarette. They were off duty now.

"It was like this," he began. "I guessed it."

"Guessed it!"

"Sure. This evening I read how Hentsling was about ready to blow up, and his borrowing money from his butler seemed like the only logical solution. I took a chance, and made a bullseye. I'll bet Ordway is still trying to puzzle out how I did it."

"Fine. But you must have had something to arouse your suspicions. You just couldn't accuse a man like that without a bit of evidence."

"Oh, that!"

Westley flicked his cigarette airily.

"Well, that's where the secret lies. You see, when I examined that screen I found a hole in it. Only the bullet that had made the hole was shot from the inside, as was indicated by the fact that the pieces of wire were forced outward. I figured that Ordway had shot that hole through the screen just to make it look like some one standing outside had killed the old man. And when he swore that no one else had entered the room, I knew I was on the right track. That's why I took a chance on hatching up the rest of the story."

"Oh, I see."

Officer Kelly spun the wheel and brought the car to a stop before the curb at police headquarters.

"Well, that just goes to prove what I get for not reading the papers. I knew you couldn't have doped it all out yourself."

And he stepped quickly from the car to avoid a poorly-timed blow from Westley's open hand.

Owner and Crew Play Waiting Game On Gambling Ship

Santa Monica, Calif, Aug. 3. — (AP)—The owner and crew of a luxurious gambling ship played a game not on the Casino list today—a waiting game with bobbing boatloads of Sheriff's deputies.

In poker-faced patience Tony Cornero Stralla and 200-odd employees lounged about the floating casino "Rex".

And just beyond reach of hose playing from the ship, equally patient, waited the deputies with warrants charging conspiracy to violate gambling laws.

Stralla, a rum-runner, in prohibition days, snorted at the would-be visitors that he had enough food on board to last a year. The Rex, in addition to its gambling salons, operated a large restaurant.

Attorney General Earl Warren, "Admiral" of the Deputies' fleet, retorted: "We are satisfied that the Rex is not doing business. If Stralla and his crew want to remain in seclusion three miles out on the ocean indefinitely, we can wait longer than they can."

Warren's men moved Tuesday night to close the four gambling ships which have been operating off the Southern California coast. In three the games of chance were quickly closed and patrons ordered ashore.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Aug. 4 (CP)—Trading turned quiet and prices slipped narrowly in the early session on Toronto Exchange today, in sympathy with lower prices in New York. Volume dropped to 223,000 shares for the first three hours. Gold issues weakened about half a point in the index while other groups showed little net change. By early afternoon the bids appeared to be a little firmer.

Pamour weakened to 2.10 and improved slightly later while minor losses were showing for Moneta, Chesterville, Kerr-Addison, Macassa, O'Brien and Uchi. In the base metal group the tone was soft for Nickel, Pend Oreille and Waite-Amulet.

The market was dull for the industrials and the Western oils. Utilities held gains and the Western Oils were off by minor fractions. Home, Davies and Okalta posted minor losses and other Western oils were unchanged.

WALL STREET

New York, Aug. 4—(AP)— The stock market loafed at slightly lower levels in the early part of today's proceedings but a selling flurry after mid-day hit the list for losses of fractions to 2 points.

Until profit-taking became more insistent, the volume was about one-half that of Thursday. Near the fourth hour prices were around bottom.

Stocks prominent on the retreat included U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors, Goodyear, U. S. Rubber, American Smelting, American Water Works, J. I. Case, Douglas Aircraft, Sears Roebuck, Westinghouse, Philip Morris and Great Northern.

Lake Shore slanted lower in the Canadian group while Dome inched ahead. Others, including Dominion 4s in the bond market, were neglected.

Trading Quiet on Produce Markets

Toronto, Aug. 4. — Butter prices eased slightly in slow trading on the Toronto open produce market yesterday, while cheese and eggs were generally unchanged, according to the Dominion Department of Agriculture.

With buyers showing no interest in offerings, the butter market became quiet and draggy, and an easier undertone developed. While receipts were light, sellers found it difficult to keep them moving, and trading was barely sufficient to establish prices. No. 1 creamery solids eased to a range of 21¾c to 22c. No sale of western butter was reported.

Part of the background against which the day's butter sales were transacted was a report issued by the Ontario Department of Agriculture's statistics branch, showing that on August 1 there were 5,728,737 pounds of butter in cold storage in Toronto, compared with 3,986,659 pounds on Aug. 1 last year. Cheese on hand was also up, with 4,675,128 pounds in cold storage on Aug. 1, 1939, as against 4,601,516 pounds on Aug. 1, 1938.

Consequently, there was very little demand for cheese yesterday, and although receipts were not heavy, trading was slow and draggy. Prices remained unchanged.

Eggs were steady. Receipts arrived in fair volume and were kept moving steadily. In the graded section, A-large eggs declined ½c, while A-medium advanced ½c. Due to a slight shortage, A-medium eggs enjoyed the best inquiry throughout the day. Retailers' prices on grade B eggs climbed to 22c. Fresh eggs in cold storage numbered 131,238 dozen on Aug. 1, compared with 105,042 dozen on the same day last year. Cold storage eggs totalled 933,690 dozen this Aug. 1, and 907,770 last Aug. 1, while frozen eggs amounted to 1,501,098 pounds this August, compared with 1,564,254 pounds last August.

Montreal Cheese Easy.

Montreal, Aug. 4.—Quebec No. 1 potatoes dipped 5 cents while Quebec No. 2 advanced a similar amount on open product markets here yesterday, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported. Butter held steady and cheese was a fraction easier. Yesterday's selling prices of eggs were almost at par with today's offering prices.

Creamery butter prints to retailers sold for 22½-23 cents a pound and solids for 22-22½ cents. Western butter delivered in Montreal was unquoted. Quebec No. 1 pasteurized in wholesale jobbing lots made 21½ cents. Receipts: 1,673 boxes.

Ontario white and colored cheese were both quoted at 11¾ cents. Quebec white and colored were both quoted at 10¾ cents. Receipts. 2,048 boxes.

Graded egg shipments in used free cases were offered at 28-29 cents a dozen for A-large, 26-27 cents for A-medium; 18½-19 cents for B-large, 15 cents for C. Receipts: 2,028 case, including 560 export.

Driver Injured As Horse Bolts With Milk Wagon

Bolting when it became suddenly frightened while proceeding up James street early today, a horse attached to a milk wagon owned by the Citizens Dairy, dashed along the street, turned the Bridge street corner and raced across the bridge pulling up in an alleyway behind the offices of the Bell Telephone Company.

Carl Kessler, 61 Lewis street, driver of the horse, was hurled to the ground when the horse dashed away and suffered severe foot injuries. He was taken to Belleville General Hospital, where his injuries were attended by Dr. R. A. Flynn.

The horse, which has been hauling Citizens Dairy wagons for the past three or four years is of a quiet disposition, and has never run away before, manager Howard Clarke stated today, advancing the theory that the animal became badly frightened at something.

The wagon was badly damaged, while a quantity of milk was destroyed.

WESTBORO WOMAN HURT NEAR TWEED

When an automobile tire blew out forcing the vehicle into the ditch near Tweed at noon today, Mrs. Hazel Leger, Westboro, Ont., sustained head lacerations and other injuries, it was disclosed after the injured woman was removed from the wreckage.

Dr. G. H. Stobie, who attended the injured woman after her removal to Belleville General Hospital, stated today that extent of Mrs. Leger's injuries will not be ascertained until X-ray examinations are made this afternoon.

Other occupants of the car escaped injury, it was reported.

OBITUARY

MRS. PRESTON McCANN

(Madoc)

Madoc, Aug. 4 (Special)— Mrs. Preston McCann died suddenly as the result of a heart seizure at her residence in this village on Thursday, Aug. 3rd.

The late Mrs. McCann, who was in her 53rd year, was Miss Mary Ida Donahue prior to her marriage and was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Donahue. Her mother's maiden name was Mary Kehoe. In religion Mrs. McCann was a member of Trinity United Church and was highly esteemed in the community.

Surviving to mourn her loss are her husband; two daughters, Misses Ruby and Marian McCann, both at the O.S.D., Belleville; three sons, Truman McCann, Beaumont McCann and Christopher McCann.

The funeral will take place Saturday afternoon.

WILLETT C. DORLAND

After an illness of two weeks' duration Willett Casey Dorland passed away about noon this Friday at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. R. E. Kilbank, 38 Sinclair street.

The late Mr. Dorland, who was in his 81st year, was born in Murray Township, Northumberland County, his parents being the late Mr. and Mrs. John Dorland. At the age of eleven years he went to reside in Brighton Township and when he reached young manhood he engaged in farming and followed this vocation all his life. He was well known in the district and held a high place in the esteem of all who knew him. In religion he was a faithful member of the Methodist Church, later the United Church and when age and health permitted he took an active part in church work. The greater part of his life was passed in Brighton Township and for the past five years he made his home in Belleville with his daughter, Mrs. R. E. Kilbank. He was twice married, his first wife, who died nine yaers ago, was Miss Elizabeth Ann Maybee, and his second wife was Miss Mina Gainsforth, who died six years ago.

Surviving him are one son, Mr. F. A. Dorland, Wooler, Ont., and one daughter, Mrs. R. E. Kilbank, Belleville. Mrs. E. T. Moynes of this city is a niece of the deceased. Six grandchildren also survive.

The funeral announcement will be made later.

POLICE COURT

Robt. J. Foster and Eric Knapp, two transients who were found loitering at the rear of J. A. McFee's jewellery store by city police recently, appeared in city police court this morning charged with common vagrancy. "I would like to have these men remanded in custody until we can ascertain more about their past'," Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C. asked of Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C. His Worship granted the request.

When a charge of assault was read against Thos. Irwin, Sidney, Ormonde Butler, local barrister appearing for the accused, informed the court that the complainant in the case, Mr. C. Milligan, desired to withdraw the charge. His Worship agreed, but assessed the costs of the proceedings, $11.75 in all, upon the complainant, Milligan.

Garnet Richmond was convicted on a charge of careless driving, the charge arising out of a motor accident on East Bridge Street on July 22nd last, when Richmond's car was in collision with another motor car driven by Herbert Collins, of this city. Charles A. Payne, K.C., appearing for the accused man intimated an appeal might be lodged.

In a subsequent court proceedings held at the Court House, Wilfred C. Ristow, Belleville, pleaded guilty to a charge that he did have in charge an inanimate object, to wit a motor car, which he allowed to be driven by an incompetent person, namely Dorothy Ross, resulting in grievous injuries to others. Ristow pleaded guilty and was fined $200.00 and costs and had his motor vehicle driver's licence cancelled and declared null and void for a period of three years. Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., outlined the situation surrounding the accident, which occurred on June 27th last in Thurlow Township. Charles A. Payne, K.C., appearing for the accused, assured the Bench that Mr. Ristow was a highly responsible citizen and held the respect of the community and his employers.

"He did a very foolish thing in permitting this young girl to drive and was the cause of so many persons being injured," pointed out Magistrate Butler before passing sentence.

WEEKLY NEWSPAPER CONTEST AWARDS

Picton Gazette of Picton, won first place in the David Williams Cup award for papers of 2,000 circulation or more, for "best masthead", it is announced in the list of awards in the Canadian Weekly Newspaper Association contest in which more than 100 papers in the eight provinces, the Yukon Territory and Newfoundland, participated. The awards were announced at the 20th annual convention of the Association at Niagara Falls today.

In the contest for The Amherstburgh Echo Shield for the best front page for papers of 2,000 circulation or more second place was won by the Bowmanville Statesman of Bowmanville, Ontario, which also was placed first in the 'news value' competition in another class.

Trenton

Trenton, August 4.—(Special) — Nearly one hundred officers and men of "A" Company and Headquarters Company of The Hastings & Prince Edward Regiment arrived home on Wednesday by special train after spending eleven days at Barriefield at the annual summer militia training camp there, and pay parades for personnel were held at the Armoury on Thursday. Camp began on July 23rd, when almost two hundred and fifty all ranks came to the regimental camp from Trenton, Madoc, Picton and surrounding districts. Commanded by Lieut.Col. Sherman Young, E.D., of Picton, the unit was one of three at Barriefield, the other two being the Midland Regiment centred at Cobourg, and the Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry Highlanders centred at Cornwall. Almost one thousand men were in the brigade camp, and training during the period included rifle and machine gun work on the ranges, tactical exercises or schemes by battalions and by the brigade, and inspections of the units on different days.

Oldest Regiment in District

The Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment is one of the oldest and proudest in the country, and its work this year at training camp brought words of high praise from military authorities. The inspection held on Monday forenoon was witnesed by many spectators, among them Lieut.Col. and Mrs. B. C. Donnan of Belleville, and Major-General C. F. Constantine, District Office commanding military district No. 3, complimented the men on their work. A formal dinner on Monday evening brought many guests from a distance, a number of them from Trenton, and district officers and officers of the unit invited wives and friends to the affair.

One of the features of interest insofar as the officers and N.C.O.'s was concerned was the firing of the Bren machine gun about which so much has been written. Pistol was fired by the officers while all ranks fired the Lewis gun and the rifle. Some excellent scores were recorded and badges for best rifle shots and for Lewis gun scores were presented to those qualifying by Lt.-Col. Young before leaving camp. A special silver cup, presented to the regiment by sergeants of the Royal Sussex Regiment in England, the affiliated regiment of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment was won in a rifle competition by sergeants of 'B' Coy. after a stirring contest.

Awards for efficiency and progress were made before the unit broke camp, and the various trophies were won as follows: Hepburn-Palmer Efficiency Trophy "D" Coy. Hall Progress Cup, "B" Coy. Musketry Cup, "B" Coy.

Included in the list of officers who were in the camp were a number from Trenton and area, among them H. D. Graham, O.C, H.Q. Coy., Major Bruce Sutcliffe, O.C., "A" Coy., Capt. the Rev. F. A. Smith, Chaplain, Lieut. A. H. Norrington, Adjutant, Capt. A. A. Mutton, Lieut. F. W. Sherbert, Signalling Officer, Lieut. T. S. Ketcheson, and Lieut. H. S. Campbell.

Workmen have completed the cutting down of trees along No. 2 highway near the R.C.A.F. aerodrome, and motorists who are familiar with the road but who have not driven it recently are rubbing their eyes as they note the vast change. Authorities considered the trees potentially dangerous to low-flying planes, and so down they have come. Considerable changes have taken place recently at the Air Station, and this is only one of them.

Painters are administering last minute touches to the exterior of the Benedict-Proctor silver plating plant here and are about to wash out their brushes after changing the color scheme from light yellow to red. The difference is startling and the newly-decorated building looks very smart indeed.

Among the officers of "A" Company of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment who trained with the unit at Barriefield this summer was a well-known ex-Trentonian, Angus Mowat, inspector of public libraries in Ontario and author of a recent novel, "Then I'll Look Up". Major Mowat acted as second-in-command of "A" Company under Major B. A. Sutcliffe, also of Toronto but an ex-Trentonian, and made a verbal resolve to be with the unit again next summer if at all possible. He made the trip to Kingston from Toronto in his yacht the "Scotch Bonnet".

With autumn just around the corner and the aroma of ripe corn and wood smoke and rugby almost in our nostrils, it isn't surprising that down at the air station the gridiron gallants have begun their initial warming up. Squads are getting out on the turf every evening, and it won't be long before the team begins to take some form. Rumor has it that the annual sports day will be coming along about Aug. 28 and the lads are warming up their muscles in sprints and hurdles and other events each evening. Softball diamonds have been marked out at various points on the aerodrome, and areas have been laid out for practice of hurdles, 100 yards, quarter mile, high jumping, pole vaulting and broad jumping. Many existing records are to be toppled by R.C.A.F. athletes this year, according to the sports authorities down at the air station, and the lads are sparing no effort in their preparations.

Canvassers were on the street last week and this in an effort to secure membership in the recently organized Trenton Bowling Club, and to date the response has been excellent. Lawn bowling should go over big in this town, and many enthusiasts are to be numbered amongst local citizenry. A site has been secured from the municipality for a nominal rental of one dollar per year, and the lot behind Kemp's grocery on Middle street fronting Division street should be a popular rendesvous next season.

Mayor Impressed By Beauty, Cost Of Japanese Exhibit

New York World's Fair sprawling over the once vacant acres of Flushing, a daily hive of industry and bustle, is one of the most interesting highlights of the American scene and visitors who have attended this great show are struck by the immensity of preparation and panoramic beauty, it was reported today by Mayor Jamieson Bone who has returned after a week's visit spent at the fair and in New York and adjoining States.

'Much against my will, I was particularly impressed by the beauty and cost of the Japanese exhibit. I was thrilled, also against my will, by the Russian building and the careful, methodical manner in which they present to the public their side of the picture. It is a system of the most insidious propaganda imaginable, and to say that these daily free shows are not making a strong effect on the average visitor would be to admit blindness to the real facts," declared the Mayor.

Though Grover Whalen and executives of the Fair have admitted that so far it has not been a paying proposition, the fair has been an immensely valuable show for residents of the Continent. Every department of human ingenuity and endeavour is represented. Every exhibit is calculated to impress and astonish and the visitor may have his choice of any show he may desire, it was stated.

ARMED CAMP

There are several factors which monthly grow more important in swinging Europe away from war and their cumulative effect may be decisive. One is Britain's expanding might in the air, on the land and on the sea. Another is the determination of European nations to club together. A third is the internal solidarity of France.

Repetition Impossible

Finally there is evidence Hitler is beginning to realize he cannot repeat his Austrian, Czech or Memel bloodless conquests without precipitating a general war in which Germany would be forced to fight on two frontiers—tactics which some military leaders of the Reich tell him would be fatal.

Europe has been operating for months on a purely negative policy, just drifting along. What Europe needs in the view of most observers is a long-range, comprehensive plan, positive in its nature and explicit in its terms, to bring about a reversal of today's condition, a division of raw materials and markets and a solution of boundary and racial problems.

That is impossible in today's atmosphere of mutual suspicion, hatred, mendacity and constant agitation of racial passions.

BABY CROWN PRINCE IN EXILE

A charming picture of the wide-eyed little Crown Prince of Albania as he was pictured in the arms of his nurse, Johanna Schmoll when they went for an airing in Stockholm, Sweden, with Mrs. Atagalein RIGHT, companion to former Queen Geraldine. King Zog and his queen are remaining in Stockholm before proceeding to England. The child was born, it will be remembered, just as Italy was completing her conquest of Albania.

Alleged Bank Robber Claims to be McGill B. A.

Captured at gun-point shortly after the robbery of the Bank of Montreal at Bala, Ont., Edward Davies, of Montreal, is seen here shielding his face with his sweater shortly after his capture. Davies, claiming to be a B.A. of McGill University, refused to give police the name of his accomplice in the robbery. The two men, armed with a revolver and a shot gun, robbed the bank of $1,900 and then fled in a stolen car which was later found abandoned a short way from Bala.

GUARDSMEN RUSHED TO STRIKE AREA

Three hundred National Guardsmen with full battle equipment were rushed to the town of Green Mountain, Colorado, to put down an armed strike at the $4,000,000. reclamation project. Bridges were blown up, telephone lines cut and barricades built by the strikers and their sympathizers who defied the non-strikers, neighboring ranchers and law officers. Four men were killed in an exchange of shots between the strikers and a band of vigilantes.

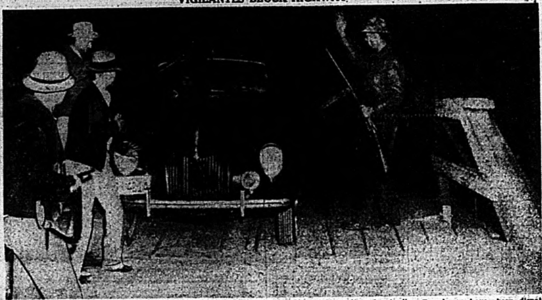
VIGILANTES BLOCK HIGHWAY



Vigilantes are shown here stopping a car near Kremmling, Colorado, after six men were wounded in pitched battles between striking workers and non-strikers and farmers of the Green Mountain region. The strikers quit work on the $4,000,000. reclamation project and cut telephone lines, barricading themselves against attempts by vigilantes and law officers to oust them. Three hundred National Guardsmen have been dispatched to the scene.

Tourist Camp Arrangements, Officials, Merchants, Praised; Visitor Offers Suggestions

Charles E. McCurdy of York, Pa., Lauds Courtesy of Canadians and Spirit of Canada

How Belleville colud better attract and entertain the visitors at its gates is told in a letter received by Mayor Bone this morning from an appreciative resident of York, Pennsylvania, a recent guest of the city tourist camp.

The letter in full is as follows:

York, Penn., U.S.A., Aug. 2, 1939.
The Mayor of City of Belleville,
Ontario, Canada.
Dear Sir:

On June 28th a party of three of us (in Canada for a week) camped on your City Camp ground for autoists. May I congratulate you on the nice ground, the splendid equipment, and the very efficient and courteous caretaker Mr. Wilder. This gentleman did even more for us that his position would seem to require. He brought a bottle of water from a fine spring a couple of blocks distant and later took me to it. The storekeeper on the corner to the north east, was very courteous, among other things called an ice man who delivered ice to us inside of 20 minutes. We stayed until late in the next day because we liked the looks and spirit of your town. Merchants were usually polite and helpful wherever we went.

May I sugest three things to you: (1) Continue the window cards calling attention of people from the States to the customs, rules, etc. This is a good business. If the spring referred to is to be available to campers find some way to call attention to it. (3) A sign east and west calling attention to the camp.

Your charge is ridiculously low, considering the camp. Pardon the presumption in these suggestions.

We found Canada polite and helpful everywhere, and plan to return next year, covering possibly the route from here to Ottawa and west through the forest, perhaps down through your town again. We shall continue to advise our friends your way. I am a public school teacher in York.

Yours sincerely,
Charles E. McCurdy.

CZECH MOTHER,

She was Mrs. Karl Langer, 43, and the boys were her sons, Karl Tommy, six, and Jan Michael, four. The husband and father, a 46-year-old former textile manufacturer in Prague, was found in his basement apartment on the west side.

No One Saw Plunge

No one in the hotel saw the plunge and the police said it was difficult to determine whether Mrs. Langer pushed the youngsters out the window and jumped after them, or gathered them in her arms and leaped. Her left wrist was slashed and a blood-stained razor blade was found in the hotel room.

Stunned by the tragedy, his unfamiliarity with the English language adding to his anguish, Langer was taken to Central Police Station by sympathetic officers. He clutched his throat as he gave a statement, with the aid of an interpreter and friends. Then police placed him in a cell because, they said, they feared he might harm himself. He was not permitted to view the bodies during the night.

Tells Story

The police said they obtained this story of his recent misfortunes:

He had owned a textile company in Prague, the Hynek Marpeles Co., worth at least $1,000,000 and employing more than 200 persons. After the Germans invaded the country he was forced to surrender the business to the government.

Out of all his wealth he salvaged about $7,000 and came to the United States with his family July 1, entering on a six months' visitor's permit.

Langer said he and his wife, Adela, had been married 18 years. He said, sorrowfully, that since they arrived in the United States she was despondent and "constantly talking about wanting to commit suicide and also to take the children with her.

GRILLS FAMILY REUNION HELD

Program of Sports and Business Carried Out During Day

Ideal conditions greeted 176 of the Grills family and their friends at the 13th get-together family picnic held at Searles Crescent Beach, Oak Lake, Thursday. Dinner was served at 12 o'clock after which a short business meeting was held.

The President Mr. Charles A. Ostrom extended a very hearty welcome to one and all expressing his thanks and appreciation for the fine attendance and wishing them prosperity and good health for the future.

Election of officers resulted as follows:

Mr. Charles A. Ostrom, Belleville, re-elected President.

Miss Laura Hay, Campbellford, Secretary-Treasurer.

Mr. Ralph Rutherford and Miss Dunk Campbellford, Sports and Entertainment Committee.

Minutes of the preceding meeting were read and confirmed.

A vote of thanks was tendered Mr. Searles for the use of the grounds and co-operation and was presented with a suitable gift.

The date of next year's meeting was for Thursday, Aug. 2nd, at the same place.

The following were presented with a new 1939 Canadian silver dollar.

Attendance Draw: Mrs. W. M. Stephens, R.R. No. 3, Campbellford

Oldest person present: Mr. Joseph Grills, Oshawa, Ont., age 87.

Youngest baby: Master Ivan Phillips, R.R. No. 2, Belleville, age 4 months and one day.

Miss Mary Oldham, Detroit, Mich., U.S.A., for longest distance travelled.

At the conclusion of the business meeting a very fine sports program was carried out by the sports committee ending up with a peanut and candy scramble.

All together this year's gathering was one of the best as everybody entered into the spirit of the occasion.

FOOT WAS ON FIRE STEPPED ON A BEE

A bawling child, a boy of tender years who cried loudly and steadily at the top of his voice while he ran from Victoria Park early last evening caused consternation among park visitors, man of them hurried to the edge of the park, fearful of a drowning or other accident .

To the eager questions of those he passed regarding his trouble, the crying child remained oblivious until stopped determinedl by one elderly gentleman.

"What is the matter?" asked the resident shaking the lad slightly.

"I stepped on a bee," finally explained the boy between further loud yells.

Not Many Transients On Road in States Says Mayor Bone

Ragged, pack-burdened hitch hikers thumbing their way in hundreds on the highways across the country, beating back and forth in aimless fashion, have given United States visitors to Canada the impression, that this country contains a preponderance of unemployed transients begging rides on roads and free sandwiches from back doors.

This was the impression carried back to the city today by Mayor Bone after a week's visit through the eastern United States where the contrast in ride thumbers was reported decidedly strong.

"I've had many a resident over there tell me that on a short visit through Canada about all they saw were men standing on roadsides begging rides. Roads through the United States are singularly free from these transients, and in Canada the contrast is great. No sooner had I crossed the border back into this country again than the hordes of unemployed starting waggling their thumbs for a ride.

"Over there I was told that the C.C.C. camps have absorbed much of this population of younger men, and that there is comparatively little hitch hiking on highways or back door begging", stated the Mayor.

HANDSOME DOOR PRIZE DONATED BY ROTARIAN

WORK FIGURES RISE FOR CITY DEPARTMENT

Employment figures for the City Works Department took an upturn this week with the start of construction work on a new road on West College street. Today the department listed a total of thirty workers being given employment on the new road and on the raceway at the rear of upper Front street stores, counting also other routine work of the department.

AT THE BELLE

"Second Fiddle"

Irving Berlin's new songs, Sonja Henie's sunny brilliance, Tyronne Power's gay romancing, Rudy Vallee's singing and Edna Mae Oliver's fun—one of the greatest combinations of talent ever gathered, making Irving Berlin's "Second Fiddle" the sensation of the preview critics who have lavished on the 20th Century-Fox film a chorus of praise.

It's something new in screen entertainment, this film which will open next at the Belle Theatre and it's filled with romance, dazzling spectacle, fresh comedy, six new Berlin songs and surprises galore, including sensational tangos on ice, snow rhumbas, ice ballets, and the new ballroom dance craze, the "Back to Back."

Bearing evidence throughout of the magic touch of Darryl F. Zanuck, 20th Century-Fox production chief, the screen play by Harry Tugend is a highly realistic story of filmdom's long search for a girl to play the heroine of a best-selling novel and what happens when she is found.

This is right in line with the new trend, set by Zanuck in his production of Irving Berlin's "Alexander's Ragtime Band" of combining music with a story of real dramatic worth into perfectly blended entertainment.

"Second Fiddle" introduces, also, new-star Mary Healy, lovely young actress whose first screen appearance finds her in a romantic role opposite Rudy Vallee. The producers expect great work from this newcomer and her performance is hailed as fulfilling every expectation. Included with her in the cast are Lyle Talbot and Alan Dinehart.

For the first time on the screen Sonja Henie has a skating partner on the ice, young Stewart Reburn. The handsome Toronto, Canada, athlete appeared with the ice star during her triumphant personal-appearance tour of the country last winter.

Sonja also hangs up her skating shoes temporarily to join Rudy on the ballroom floor in the "Back to Back" a new dance created by Harry Losee from the song written by Berlin for the film. Other tune hits are: "I'm Sorry For Myself", "An Old Fashioned Tune Always Is New", "Song of the Metronome", "When Winter Comes" and "I Poured My Heart Into a Song," all by Irving Berlin.

A gorgeous new fashion reel all in technicolor, Walt Disney's latest cartoon, "Donald's Cousin Gus" and the popular Belle newsreel will be presented on the same program. A thrilling chapter of "The Ranger Returns" serial will be presented this week-end on the same program.

Two Hits

Bob Hope, Gene Krupa and his orchestra and Shirley Ross are featured in "Some Like It Hot", a singing, swinging jamboree of fun closing at the Belle with those likeable Dead End Kids in "Hell's Kitchen" featuring Margaret Lindsay and Ronald Reagan.

FALANGISTAS DECREED SPAIN'S ONLY PARTY

Thirteen Persons Killed on Liner Near Barcelona

German Air Liner en Route from Madrid to Barcelona at Time of Accident Says Report

NO DETAILS GIVEN

Lieut.-Colonel Von Scheele, German Air Attache in Spain One of the Victims of Crash

Berlin, Aug. 5 (C.P.-Havas) — Thitreen persons were killed today when a German liner en route from Madrid to Barcelona crashed at Hospitalet, four miles southwest of Barcelona, the German news agency announced here.

Among the victims was Lieut.-Colonel Von Schelle, German air attache in Spain. All passengers and members of the crew perished in the crash.

Wholesale News Agents in Britain Agree Not to Handle 'Time' Magazine

London, Aug. 5 (CP)—W. H. Smith and Son, English agents for "Time" Magazine, said last night notice had been received from the wholesale news agents federation that it "has been agreed" the federation would not handle the publication after the July 31 issue.

An official of Smith's, Britain's largest retail magazine distributors, declined further information.

Perry Prentiss, vice-president of Time, Inc., said in New York no direct word had been received from the federation but that the British distributor said there were reports the action was based on an article in the July 24 issue of "Time" dealing with activities of Countess Edda Ciano, daughter of Premier Mussolini.

Prentiss said the action "comes as a complete surprise" since there had been no hint of a move to ban the magazine since it was threatened with suppression during the British abdication crisis in 1936.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Aug. 5—(CP)—Showers have occurred in northern districts of Ontario, Quebec and the Maritime Provinces also in southern Saskatchewan. The weather has been decidedly warm in the Prairie Provinces with moderate temperatures over Eastern Canada. Pressure is high over the lake region and eastern states and low over northern Quebec with a fairly deep disturbance centred to the northward of Alberta.

Lake Superior: Light to moderate winds; fair and warm today and part of Sunday; probably followed by scattered thundershowers.

Manitoba and Saskatchewan:—Partly cloudy and decidedly warm today and Sunday; probably scattered thundershowers.

Alberta: Partly cloudy today and Sunday with scattered thundershowers; continuing warm over southern districts.

Convection! This is a fundamental phenomenon which explains the very beginnings of atmospheric circulation or movement. The main convectional current is, of course, over the great central hot belt, called the Torrid one, which current upon rising flows away overhead becoming a nearly west wind at about 35 degrees north and 30 degrees south latitude. These upward currents are moderately gentle; but some of the convectional currents having a local origin may be furiously violent as those of a tornado whose

Military Missions From France, Britain On Way to Moscow

London, Aug. 5 (CP)—Great Britain and France sent their military missions off to Moscow today to talk strategy with Soviet army and navy leaders in conferences designed to speed conclusion of a British-French-Russian pact.

Official circles were optimistic for ultimate conclusion of a mutual aid accord which they regard as essential to solidify the Anglo-French front.

Sailing today in the liner City of Exeter, the two missions are to arrive Wednesday in Leningrad.

Official circles studied the latest report from Ambassador Sir William Seeds on the Moscow talks—still snagged as far as conclusion of a pact is concerned on a definition of "indirect aggression."

The Foreign Office was said to be sending fresh instructions to Sir William which it hoped would clear the way for agreement by the time the military talks are concluded.

RUNAWAY YOUTH HELD FOR MURDER AND NINE HOLDUPS

Tired of Working as a "Printer's Devil" Turns to Alleged Life of Crime

MAKES CONFESSION

New York, Aug. 5—(AP)—Working for his father bored Leonard Nugent, 20, a high school graduate, so he ran away—and today police charged him with having killed a man, wounded his sweetheart and staged nine hold-ups in one crime-filled week.

The curly-haired, neatly dressed youth fainted when police told him of the death of Isadore Cohen, 40, a button broker who police said was shot under the heart while grappling with Nugent.

Inspector John Gallagher said the frightened boy had made a complete confession and gave this version of his week's activities:

Tiring of working as a "printer's devil" in the engraving plant owned by his father, he left his Staten Island home after a family quarrel.

He rented a furnished room, then found his funds running low and turned to robbery to make some "easy money." Working alone, he pulled off eight holdups successfully, in one of them robbing eight men in a washroom.

EXTORTION NOTE SEARCH FAILS

Windsor, Ont., Aug. 5 (CP)—Receipt of an extortionist's note a week ago demanding $400 on pain of having his two-year-old daughter kidnapped was revealed today by Ulric St. Pierre, Windsor bank teller. St. Pierre went to police with the note but investigation so far has been futile.

Although they think the note the work of a crank, St. Pierre and his wife are worried and take special precautions to see the child is not left alone. The note, scribbled in pencil on white wrapping paper, was left in the baby's buggy.

THREE DROWNED AT HEALEY FALLS AS BOAT CAPSIZES

Two Bodies Recovered and Third is Being Searched Today

BOAT TOO SMALL

Father Gave Life in Trying to Rescue Six-Year-Old Son

Healey Falls, Ont., Aug. 5—(CP)—Dragging operations resumed at daylight today for the body of six-year-old Adrian Beaver, drowned in the River Trent with his father and another man when a shallow duckboat, built to accommodate only one person, capsized in rough water.

The bodies of the father, 38-year old Frank Beaver, and of Frank Bayes, 29, a cousin, were recovered a few hours after the accident last night. They were taken to an undertaking establishment at Campbellford, six miles south of here, when Coroner Dr. A. E. Stuart decided an inquest was necessary.

A strong wind whipped up a choppy sea as the party of Indians set out across the river in a flat-bottomed punt that was only 12 inches in height. Residents of the summer resort said later the gunwale of the little craft was only two inches above the water after the men and the boy climbed aboard.

Equipped With Sail

The boat was equipped with a home-made sail, but whether it was in use at the time of the accident was not known. The party had spent most of the afternoon on the river, sailing about a half-mile below Healey Falls. The boat capsized about mid-stream, 200 yards from shore.

George Dunsmore of Hamilton, a summer visitor at the resort, was the first to attempt a rescue. He pushed off quickly in a rowboat, when he heard cries from the men in the water and was within a few feet of the struggling trio, when they sank in 20 feet of water.

Frank Beaver apparently gave his life in an unsuccessful attempt to rescue his son. He was a strong swimmer and could have reached shore easily. He is survived by a widow in Smith's Falls. The tragedy was witnessed by Frank Beaver's sister, Irene, who was walking along the river bank.

SAFETY CATCH DOES NOT WORK

Gun Pointed at Youth Accidentally Discharges and He is Killed

Kansas City, Aug. 5—(CP)—Misplaced confidence in a rifle safety catch brought death to John Vandersloot, 16.

Vandersloot took the rifle from his father's gun cabinet and was examining it with John Irlanc Wood, 15.

"It won't go off," he assured his friend. "The safety catch is on."

He pressed the trigger, there was only a click.

"Now you try it," Wood said Vandersloot urged him. "Point it at me."

Wood pulled the trigger. The gun discharged and Vandersloot fell.

SECOND DAUGHTER BORN TO PRINCESS

Amsterdam, Aug. 5 (AP)—Crown Princess Juliana of the Netherlands presented the House of Orange with another daughter early today.

The child was born at 1.09 a.m. (8.09 p.m. E.D.T. Friday) at Soestdy' Palace.

'No European War', Say School Girls 'Because Peoples Don't Want Any'

Quebec, Aug. 5—(CP)—Sixty-three British school girls who arrived here yesterday aboard the liner Duchess of York for a tour of Canada think there will be no European war and that the "boops-a-daisy," England's latest dance craze, won't last long.

The girls whose Canadian visit is under the auspices of the overseas education league said there wouldn't be a war because the "peoples of Europe don't want any."

But they didn't know why the "boops-a-daisy" won't last, though they all dance it.

Asked if they "liked" Canadian boys, the girls glanced about Wolfe's Cove steamship dock at what samples there were before replying they hadn't made up their minds "yet."

All knew, however, what would interest them particularly during their Canadian visit—the Plains of Abraham, Niagara Falls, the prairies, the Rockies and the Pacific Ocean.

Giant Flying Boats May Patrol Routes By Ocean to Canada

New Secret Type of Craft Known as 'Lerwick' With Range of 4000 or 5000 Miles May be Patrol in Event of War

By J. F. SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Aug. 5—(CP)— North Atlantic sea routes between Canada and Britain may be patrolled in wartime by giant flying boats of a new type which has been placed in production by the Air Ministry.

The new type, which will be called the Lerwick, will be faster, bigger and with a decidedly longer range than the Sunderland, which is the Air Ministry's number one flying boat at present.

The Lerwick is on the "secret list" and its performance figures have not been made public but its range may be as high as 4,000 or 4,580 miles, perhaps even higher. It probably will weigh about 25 tons and carry a crew of eight men.

Official secrecy surrounds the plan to patrol the north Atlantic from the air but there is no question here of its feasibility in co-operation with the navy. The flying boats would act as aerial spies for naval vessels, scanning thousands of square miles of the Atlantic for enemy commerce raiders.

The plan would necessitate a year-round seaplane base in Canada, possibly Halifax or Saint John. Imperial Airways' base at Botwood, Nfld., can be used only in summer months.

A flying boat of the Lerwick type could be used not only to spot enemy ships but to destroy some of them from the air. With its great range it could cover a zig-zag course across the ocean and still make Canada with safety.

A flying boat could be used against submarines by dropping depth charges.

The feasibility of air patrols for the Atlantic was demonstrated a short time ago when the American Consolidated flying boat was flown across the ocean in delivery to the Air Ministry. When it arrived at Felixstowe from Botwood, air officials were careful to point out it had ample gasoline in reserve.

MOE ANNENBERG ALLEGED HEAD OF RACING SHEET

U. S. Publisher Faces Arrest in Canada for Keeping Gaming House

SIX NOW CHARGED

Toronto, Aug. 5—(CP)—If Moe Annenberg, publisher of the Philadelphia Inquirer and head of a continent-wide news service, ever wants to visit Canada he will have to face a charge of keeping a common betting house, police said last night after the largest series of raids on alleged gambling centres in Ontario's history.

Seven men were released on $2,000 bail each following simultaneous raids on three Toronto houses. Six were charged with keeping a common betting house and the other with contracting to supply information to assist in betting.

Police said Annenberg owned the Canadian Racing and Financial News, raided yesterday, which employed 18 telephone girls and had private leased wires to New York and Chicago. Value of confiscated equipment was not readily estimated, but police said installation alone must have cost thousands of dollars.

Police claimed to have struck the focal point of information for bookmakers in the Toronto district. The raids were staged after two months of investigation, during which police visited Montreal and Chicago to consult with police authorities there.

Arrested during the raids were Sammy Roher, David Bossin, Alex Hill, Louis Cohen, Louis Hershoff, Jacob Zipper and Harry Dessinhouse, who, police said, was a contact man for the collection of fees from bookmakers subscribing to the service from headquarters, allegedly owned by Annenberg.

NAPANEE FARMER INSTANTLY KILLED

Fenton Reid, Walking from House to Barn When Struck by Truck

Empey Hill, Ont., Aug. 5 (Special)—Fenton Reid, sixty-eight year old farmer, residing six miles east of Napanee, was instantly killed early today when struck by a truck near his home.

According to meagre details received, the deceased man was crossing the road from his house to his barn, when the fatality occurred.

Surviving besides his widow are four daughters, Mrs. John Hagerman, Bath; Mrs. William Hunter, Morvin; Mrs. Harold Winter, Empey Hill; and Mrs. Dorland Jackson, Selby.

The late Mr. Reid had resided in the neighborhood all his life.

U. S. CITIZENS PREPARING FOR HURRIED FLIGHT

Japanese Exerting Anti-American Pressure at Shanghai

ATTACK PROPERTY

Shanghai, Aug. 5—(AP)—United States citizens are preparing for hurried flight from Kaifeng because of Japanese anti-American pressure there, it was reported reliably today. Britons and Canadians already have left the north central China missionary centre.

United States officials were unable to learn details of the situation in Kaifeng because telegraphic communications were broken. But available reports said the Americans were arranging to flee immediately.

First advices of a new turn in Japan's anti-foreignism in China, directed originally against Britons only, were sent from Kaifeng by a courier who passed the Japanese lines and reached Chengchow where he telegraphed the United States Embassy at Chungking.

New Vigor Indicated

New vigor in the anti-British drive was indicated. The Japanese-controlled press at Tientsin quoted Japanese army officers there as threatening to "exterminate" British interests in China. It said Japanese commanders were considering measures to tighten their restrictions on the blockaded British and French concessions at the first signs of collapse in the Tokyo negotiations over the Tientsin episode.

British, French Committees Watch World Scene

London ,Aug. 5—(CP)—Representatives of Anglo-French committees in the British and French parliaments met yesterday and decided upon close and constant contact between the two bodies in the current international crisis.

The executive committees of the groups have been meeting for the past two days under the chairmanship of Brigadier General Edward L. Spears, Conservative member of the House of Commons, and Yvon Delbos, former French Foreign Minister.

A regulation was unanimously adopted expressing "profound satisfaction at the close and confident collaboration which has been established between the two countries to safeguard peace and defend the rule of justice against doctrines and acts of violence which menace the independence and integrity of all countries."

Regular meetings were arranged for, to be held alternately in London and Paris. The French group numbers 400 deputies and the British group 300 members of parliament.

MALNUTRITION IN BRITISH COLONIES, REPORT CHARGES

Majority of 55,000,000 Inhabitants Suffer from Semi-Starvation, Reported

PROPER DIET NEEDED

Low Wages, Lack of Resources Blamed for Hunger and Disease

By FRED BACKHOUSE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Aug. 5—(CP)—The great majority of the 55,000,000 people in the British colonial empire are suffering from semi-starvation, says the report of the government committee on nutrition in the colonies.

Inside the formal blue covers of the official publication is unfolded a dismal story of hunger and disease.

The committee, headed by Earl de la Warr, President of the Board of Education, began work in April, 1936, and has considered material drawn from 48 different territories covering 2,000,000 square miles.

Says the report: "In almost every part of the colonial empire the income of a very large proportion of the population is a long way below the minimum required for satisfactory nutrition.

Tribute to Settlers Slain in 1689 Paid at Lachine

Lachine, Que., Aug. 5 (CP)—In the flickering light of huge bonfires on the St. Lawrence river bank, thousands of persons stood silently last night in tribute to the memory of the French-Canadian settlers who died in the Lachine massacre slain by the dreaded Iroquois on a storm-ridden night in 1689. It was the 250th anniversary of the massacre, Mason Anatole Carignan re-told the tale of the massacre. The settlers were slain in their beds or bound to stakes and tortured before flaming bonfires.

BELGIAN EMBASSY BADLY DAMAGED

Bombs Rain From Skies as Japanese Stage Moonlight Raid

Chungking, China, Aug. 5 (AP)—The Belgian Embassy was badly damaged early today in the fourth Japanese moonlight air road within the week of this temporary Chinese capital.

Bombs fell in residential areas but no foreigners were known to have been injured. The French and German Consulates were damaged by Japanese bombs yesterday.

Reports in Hong Kong indicated an intensification of Japanese air attacks on Chinese cities. Nine cities in three Southern Provinces—Hunan, Kiangsi and Kwangsi—were reported raided yesterday. Chinese officials said Kweilin, an important South China political and military centre, suffered heavy property damage.

Order of Franco Hailed as Assuring Unity in Nation

Falangists (Fascists) Transformed Into One Political Party on Model of Nazi and Fascist Parties — All Groups Under One Flag

ARMY, FASCISTS, ONE

'Now Whole World Can See That Union is Complete Between Falangists and Army' Observers Declare

Burgos, Aug. 5—(P-Havas) — General Franco's decree confirming the Falangistas (Fascists) as Spain's permanent and only political party was hailed by Nationalist observers today as assuring unity of the country's military and political factions.

"The Falange Tsianola," transformed into one political group on the model of the Nazi and Fascist parties, has become a real single party bringing under the same flag the political and military youth, civilians, war veterans, representatives of the party of Jose Antonio Primo De Rivera, and the army officers, observers said. Franco is supreme chieftain of the party.

Henceforth foreigners can on longer charge that differences exist between the army and Fascists, it was argued.

"It will no longer be possible to claim that nomination of this or that personage to an important military or civil poet constitutes either a 'victory' or 'defeat' for the Falangistas," these sources said.

"Now the whole world can see that union is complete between the Falangista party and the army," it was added. "All the reins are in the hands of a single chief."

CAPTAIN MOLLY IN COLLISION

Woman Mariner Thrown from Scow as Steamship Strikes It in Fog

Saint John, N.B., Aug. 5.—(CP)— Captain Molly Kool, one of the two women in the world to hold Master Mariner's papers—the other is in Russia—was spilled into Saint John Harbor Friday when her lumber-laden scow collided in dense fog with a steamship. The 23-year-old captain was rescued by a fishing boat.

Standing beside the wheel-house as the scow was coming up from Martin Head, N.B., Cap'n Molly Suddenly saw the towering sides of the liner Yarmouth, inward bound from Boston, loom up.

She called to her father, with whom she is engaged in coastal trade, and three crew members to get on deck. Impact of the collision threw her into the water. Life preservers were tossed to her from the scow but a fishing boat drew near and she clung to two pieces of lumber until the boat picked her up.

Landed at Partridge Island, at the harbor entrance, she telephoned for a tug which picked her up. The tug towed the scow, smashed on one side and listing badly, into port.

Machiavelli, Boccaccio, Nick Carter And Others Banned for Fascists

Rome, Aug. 5—(CP)— Machiavelli and Boccaccio, two Italian classical writers, figured yesterday in a list of Jewish, French and English writers, whose works have been pronounced unsuited to the Fascist spirit.

While Machiavelli and Boccaccio may still be heard at home, certain of their works will no longer be purchasable in bookstores.

Machiavelli, whose book "Il Principe" (The Prince) has at various times been spoken of as Premier Mussolini's bedside book because it contains explicit suggestions on how a monarch may maintain dictatorial power, was frowned upon, incongruously enough, along with the Nick Carter series and the "Life and Adventures of Buffalo Bill."

BBoccaccio, whose stories inspired some of Chaucer's Canterbury tales, is no longer for general reading apparently because his Frank Mediaeval spirit is counter to the strict Fascist moral code.

Boccaccio, whose stories inreceived the list. It included books that have already been seized and destroyed and others the sale of which has been forbidden.

Figuring in the miscellaneous list were Voltaire, Edgar Allen Poe, Edgar Wallace, Thomas Mann, Arnold Zweig, Emil Ludwig, H. G. Wells, Franz Werpel, Jacob Wasserman, Axel Munthe and Arthur Schnitzler.

Agatha Christie, detective story writer figured beside George Sand, French woman novelist whose stories of high romance and passion dominated early French 19th century literature.

Robert Graves, whose books about ancient Rome such as "I Claudius," have been attacked by Fascists, was among the banned authors.

Pastures Improved and Milk Production Up

Pastures of the Central Ontario district have turned green almost overnight as the result of recent freshening rains, it was reported today by J. L. Irwin, Dominion dairy grader. Though the southern section of Hastings County has not shown the remarkable improvement noted through the Peterboro and Lindsay areas, where the grass again appears lush and green a decided improvement has been noted in this immediate section, also, it was stated.

Cheesemakers of the Kingston district also report milk production on the decided increase, according to the latest word we have received from that section," stated Mr. Irwin.

CAMPBELLFORD MAKERS HOLD OPEN MEETING

Cheesemakers of Campbellford district, who gathered in the Campbellford grading station last evening, held a full and informal discussion on many matters connected with the dairying and farming industry.

As guest speaker of the evening, Mr. H. B. Sandwith, chief dairy instructor of the Province, gave a full discourse on the defects complained of in Central Ontario cheese during the past period. He warned makers to concentrate on better quality and urged increasing care in cheese make in order to take advantage of the premiums offered on higher scoring cheese.

Mr. J. L. Irwin, Dominion Dairy Grader of the local office, explained in full detail the workings of the New Cheese and Cheese Factories Act, and devoted some time to an explanation of the new point scoring of cheese.

About seventy-five makers and others were present.

RULE ON WATERFRONT RIGHTS OF PUBLIC

Lansing, Mich, Aug. 5 (CP) —The Michigan Attorney-General's department held today that owners of waterfront property on the Great Lakes must not prevent the public from bathing in front of their holdings. The ruling rose from complaint that a hotel on Lake Huron had fenced off the water front to keep outsiders from bathing with patrons.

The department ruled property owners have no claim to exclusive use of any portion of the lake provided the general public can gain access without trespassing but said the public has no right to use a private dock even though the water alongside can be gained without trespass.

SHARP INCREASE IN EGG PRICES ON CITY MARKET

Jump 3 Cents the Dozen—Heavy Offerings of Other Produce Displayed — Berries Still Plentiful

OTHER PRICES FIRM

Vendors of the city and district were out in full force today offering produce for sale on the city market where a good variety of farm, garden and dairy products was displayed.

Dairy produce dropped to an all-season low for quantity, with a scarcity of chickens being noticeable.

Eggs, the prices of which shot sharply upwards over last week's quotations were not as plentiful as before. Extra quality "A" selects were offered at 28c per dozen, a 3-cent rise over last week's quotations, while inferior qualities sold at 25c and 26c. Mediums were offered at 23c and 24c.

Broiler chickens were scarce and what few were available moved to a slowly buying market at between 75c and 95c a pair. Six months' old birds were offered at from 90c each, while fowl was quoted at from 60c each.

Berries Slightly up

Raspberries took a slight rise in price in some quarters with reds jumping to two boxes for 25c, although the majority of vendors sold their stocks at last week's quotations of ten cents each. Blues were steady at three boxes for 25c, with a slight reduction made for crate-lots.

Imported stocks of peaches sold at 45c the basket while canteloupe from the Niagara district were offered at from 5c to 10c each.

Cherries were scarce with a few choice Montmorencies offered at 50c the six-quart basket. Red and white currants were quoted at 10c the box and gooseberires at four boxes for 25c.

Yellow Harvester apples were more plentiful than usual with good quality stocks offered at 20c per six-quart basket. Red Astrachans were selling at 35c the half peck. Huckleberries were popular and moved well at three boxes for 25c and eleven-quart containers selling at 70c each.

Tomatoes Lead Parade

Homegrown tomatoes led the vegetable parade with some choice quality stocks selling at 10c the berry box and 25c the basket. Potatoes were steady at 30c the peck, with good varieties offered. New beets, onions, radishes, carrots and other spring vegetables moved briskly in bunchlots at 5c each.

Sweet corn, showing a little better quality and slightly larger ears than heretofore sold at 15c the dozen. Cucumbers could be got anywhere from 5c each, while good samples of new cabbage and cauliflower sold from 5c the head upwards according to size and quality.

Fresh whitefish and lake trout headed the fish offering, the former selling at 16c and 18c the pound and the latter at 20c with a slight additional price for filleting and slicing.

MANY TO MAKE PILGRIMAGE

Belleville Resident to Attend Ceremonies at Shrine at Midland

Many Belleville residents will be among the thousands of pilgrims who will visit the Shrine of the Canadian Martyrs at Midland tomorrow, a special excursion train being provided to carry visitors from this city and district, the first Belleville pilgrimage to the famous Shrine. A former Belleville resident, Rev. Father Thomas Lally, S.J., is in charge of the Shrine and will welcome the delegates from his home town, tomorrow.

The pilgrimage is particularly significant at this time, for tomorrow is celebrated the tercentenary of the historic Fort Ste. Marie at Midland. Dignitaries of the church will be present on this special occasion including Enrico Cardinal Gasparri, who will celebrate Solemn Benediction at the Shrine, Archbishop McGuigan of Toronto and Bishop Dennis O'Connor of Peterborough.

It is expected that many thousands of pilgrims from Canada and the United States will be present, arriving by train and motor car to be present at the anniversary ceremonies.

The train from Belleville, arranged by St. Michael's Parish, will leave the North Station at six-thirty a.m. (standard time), arriving in Midland at eleven-thirty (standard time). Mass will be celebrated for the pilgrims on their arrival. The return train leaves Midland at six o'clock (standard time).

Don't Go on Water If You Can't Handle Boat Say Officials

Executives of the South End Yachting and Athletic Club, anxious to co-operate with the Belleville Rotary Club in the holding of an accident-free holiday at Massassaga during Monday's regatta, voiced a warning this morning against the used of small boats by inexperienced handlers on the bay which is expected to be crowded with craft of all kinds.

All sorts of small punts and skiffs are expected to be pressed into service, especially by the youngsters and usually on a day of this nature, narrow escapes are invariably reported. It is pointed out that the distance to Massassaga from Belleville is a lengthy one, and that considerable rough water may be encountered by the smaller boats. With inexperienced handlers accidents are bound to occur.

Lately members of the club have been forced to warn small boats from the waters repeatedly for fear of drowning in the bay.

Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Tufts, Madoc, Celebrate 50th Anniversary Of Wedding at Downey Rapids

Madoc, Aug. 5—(Special) — On Saturday, August 5th., Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Tufts of Madoc village celebrated their golden wedding anniversary. Just fifty years ago, Mr. Everden Coppins Tufts, a son of the late Robert Tufts and Sarah Ann Coppins of London, England, was married to Edith Eleanor Whittaker, a daughter of the late Josiah Whittaker of England and the late Margaret Kelly of Ireland, in the little church at Glen Lewis or Downey's Rapids by the Reverend Smith, now retired in Trenton. Mr. and Mrs. Tufts were the only couple ever married in this church.

Settled in Hungerford

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Tufts, the parents of Mr. E. C. Tufts, came to Canada in 1861 and settled in Hungerford Township between Downey's Rapids and Tweed on a farm next to that of the family of the late Sir Mackenzie Bowell. This was not a coincidence as the Tufts family and the Bowell family were friends in England.

After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Tufts lived on the old McCaffrey homestead in Madoc Township and farmed for fifteen years.

They moved to Madoc, 35 years ago and Everden Tufts has been a well liked and highly respected citizen of this village ever since. He has been in the furniture and undertaking business since his coming to the village.

Belong to Anglican Church

In religion they are members of St. John's Anglican Church and in politics Mr. Tufts has been a staunch Liberal all his life. He has served in the town as councillor, reeve and hydro commissioner. He was first elected as councillor in 1906. For three terms, Mr. Tufts was entrusted with the care of the village affairs as Reeve and for the past ten years has been a member of the Madoc Hydro Electric Commission, resigning this position at the end of 1938.

Belongs to Forresters

Everden Tufts is a member of the Independent Order of Forresters belonging to Madoc Lodge 195W.

Mrs. Tufts is a staunch church woman and has been actively connected with the work in the church societies.

In their family are three sons and three daughters.

Garnett Tufts, connected with the Canadian National Railways in Saskatchewan, married Irene McLaren of High Gate, Ont., with three children, Helen, Patricia and Jack.

Manly Tufts, with the Dominion Government, located at the Corbyville branch of the Canadian Industrial Alcohol Company, married Ruby Dafoe of Gilmour with two children, Florence and Clancie.

Kenneth Tufts, with the C.N.R. at Belleville, married to Eva Rupert of Madoc with one daughter, Beverly.

Marguerite, married to Mr. Hector Thompson, now connected with the Bell Telephone Company located in Ottawa, has three children, Lois, Edith and George.

Marian, married to Mr. Adam Yearwood, living in Port Hope, have two girls, Shirley and June.

Mildred, married to James Bird of Madoc, with one boy, James.

Mr. Tufts has three sisters, Mrs. S. Stapley of Rawdon Township, Mrs. Charles Nixon of Chicago and Mrs. Elizabeth Allwik in Saskatchewan.

Mr. Tufts has one sister, Mrs. Margaret Jackson living in Watertown, N.Y., and one brother, Thomas living in Simcoe, Ont.

To Mr. and Mrs. Tufts the best wishes of their many friends go forth and sincere hopes for many more years of happy married life.

OBITUARY

CHARLES H. GEEN

(Formerly of Fuller)

Charles Henry Geen, a former resident of Fuller, in Huntingdon Township, died at Hawkesbury, Ont., early this Saturday morning.

The late Mr. Geen resided at Fuller, where he was born 62 years ago, until he removed to Hawkesbury about thirty years ago. His parents were the late Mr. and Mrs. Charles Samuel Geen. His mother's maiden name was Miss Elizabeth Mouck. He was a farmer and was held in high esteem in the community. In religion he was a member of the Presbyterian Church. Old friends in this district will regret to learn of his death.

Surviving him are his wife, who prior to her marriage was Miss Emma Lighthall; one son, Mr. Edward Geen, Hawkesbury; one daughter, Mrs. George Bulliss, Hawkesbury; two sisters, Mrs. Allen Morton, Belleville; Mrs. Edward Carter, Thomasburg two brothers, Mr. John Geen of Fuller and Mr. Albert Geen of Atlin, B.C.

The funeral will take place at Hawkesbury on Monday.

3rd Sidney

3rd Sidney—The ice cream and pie supper held at Aiken's on Wednesday evening August first, was attended by residents of the surrounding district and a few from Belleville availed themselves of the opportunity to meet old friends and enjoy the supper supplied by the Aikens' ladies. Following the supper, a fine musical program was presented in the church with the ever-popular Bruce Sills of Belleville making music with his handsaw and piano accordion. An accordeon duet by Mr. Sills and Miss Mary Pigeon delighted the audience and brought prolonged applause.

The popularity of Master George Sheppard was evident as the young artist appeared for his first number when the asesembled gathering gave went to enthusiastic applause. It will be remembered George had received favor from the Aiken's audience with his fine tenor voice some few weeks ago at a similar gathering.

Another talented artist on the program was Mr. Don Henderson from the front of Sidney whose delightful renditions of favorite numbers on the electric guitar was fully appreciated. Mrs. Vealey of Belleville, was the piano accompanist for Mr. Henderson.

Mr. Stanley Spafford, superintendent of Aikens' Sunday School, acted as chairman and on behalf of the Sunday School, under whose auspices the social was held, moved a vote of thanks to those who had assisted on the program, and to all who had helped to make the affair a success. The proceeds were over forty dollars. The young ladies with Miss Ruth Spafford in charge, conducted a booth which proved very popular during the evening.

Belleville Youth To Be Tried in City

Kingston, Ont., Aug. 5—(CP)—William Roy Thompson, 17-year-old Belleville youth, was charged before Magistrate Ambrose Shea here with reckless driving and with operating a car without a licence. Two boys, one 15 and the other 13, were charged with vagrancy.

Magistrate Shea dropped the vagrancy charges against the boys, but Thompson will be tried in Belleville.

The boys told an elaborate story of hitch-hiking from Belleville to Seeley's Bay where they said they met a traveller, who asked them to drive his car to Belleville and give it to a man named Bews. On the way they had an accident and eventually were arrested.

After telling the story, the boys admitted that it was "phoney." They admitted they took the car in Belleville and drove east.

Police Blotter

Current police investigations looking into the recent thieving of bottles of milk left by delivery proved somewhat prolific early today when local police tracked down teen aged boys camping out in tents on the west hill only to add warnings against the practice of taking delivered milk.

When confronted with the theft the lads naturally denied the thieving, but police are convinced they have arrived at the basic conclusion of the trouble in their warnings of today. Prior to the investigations, however, police were of the opinion that transients were responsible.

P.C. Wright apprehended two local lads prowling in the vicinity of the Belleville Metal and Waste Company premises early this morning. There were four lads seen by the officer on the property, but two escaped his apprehension. The two apprehended were taken to the police station for questioning.

Although no arrests of mature aged persons were recorded on the police blotter, local authorities were busied investigating minor occurrences in and about the city last night.

ELECTED PRESIDENT

E. A. Conway, chief of the Toronto staff of the C.P.R. investigation bureau, was elected president of the Ontario Police Association at its annual convention in Ottawa.

Moral Rearmament Seen As Key to Solution of World's Problems in Peace

Canada Seen as Bridge Builder Between All Nations Through Program of Moral Rearmament — How Business Would Improve

Del Monte, California— It was "Canada Day" at the second world assembly for Moral Re-Armament. The four hundred Canadians attending the Assembly presented the picture of an entire nation morally rearming. It was the first time that the session was completely taken over by the representatives of one nation. French, Danish, Norwegian, German, Japanese and Icelandic Canadians were among the speakers.

Brigadier W. G. Beeman of Kingston, who served Canada as a soldier for thirty years, termed Moral Re-Armament. "A new form of preparedness, available either for peace or for war." He said, "A fresh future will open for the veterans of both Canada and the United States when they become enlisted members of these spiritual shock troops. Moral Re-Armament gives the veteran a chance to prove again his courage and his loyalty in this battle for his country's life."

Canada as Example

The keynote of the session was sounded by Eric Bentley of Toronto, leader of moral rearmament work in Canada, who quoted King George's farewell message on the occasion of his departure from Canada. "By God's grace, your country may yet be the example that all the world will follow." Mr. Bentley declared—"Our task is to make, these prophetic words a reality, and to build a hate-free, fear-free, greed-free nation."

How Canada, the melting pot of the nations, could become the bridge-builder between all the nations through a program of Moral Re-Armament, was demonstrated strikingly by half a dozen "new Canadians."

A Danish-born garage owner from London, Ontario, Dick Jensen, who has sold a cow to help pay for his travelling expenses to the Assembly, and a young Icelandic-Canadian waitress, who said that in her home town of Winnipeg there were more Icelanders than in Iceland's capital city, were also strong in their conviction that the new Canadian's task was to identify himself fully with the country of his adoption.

A United Canada

"I realize now," said John Kumagai, a Japanese carpenter from Vancouver, "that we Japanese-Canadians can make a united Canada and, at the same time, become bridge-builders between Canada and Japan, thus bringing about a God-controlled pan-Pacific. Now I have committed myself to morally rearming Japanese-Canadians."

French - Canadian speakers included Madame Ritchie of Montreal and Roger Belanger of Ottawa, son of a French Canadian member of the Ontario Legislature, who were outspoken in their conviction that no real chasm separated the two races, but merely "a shadow lying across the broad highway" and that true unity would come only through sacrifice. "Because I love my country, and because I love my race, I must serve both. Moral Re-Armament has taught me to strip myself of selfishness and surrender my prejudices, so that the best qualities of both races can be given to Canada," said Belanger.

Portrait of Family Life in Canada

A portrait of Canadian family life was presented by four families who stood together at the front of the platform before the 1,500 delegates, while some of their number took turns in proving that in this "battle for peace" it wasn't only "fathers that enlist, but families."

"Moral Re-Armament began for my school," said the 12-year-old son of an Edmonton newspaperman, "when I apologized to my master for playing hookey. Now when I am absent I don't have to bring a note, as he takes my word for it."

Speaking as a father and as a policeman who had served for 29 years on the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, Colonel Mark Vernon of Toronto said that when men and homes become morally rearmed there will be a decrease in crime and law-breaking, and correspondingly in the cost of law enforcement.

Moral Rearmament and Business.

Leading a group of business men, which included the president of the Vancouver Stock Exchange, large and small industrialists from many provinces, Andrew Webster, vice-president of a Montreal building supply company, outlined the meaning of moral rearmament in business:

"It will bring about four things," he said:

"Stimulation of business through a return of confidence.

"Reduction of taxes and a flow of new money into businesses and enterprises generally.

"Elimination of price wars and the replacement of competition with co-operation.

"Simplifying of the complex Canadian business life."

Peace Through Moral Rearmament.

A telegram from A. R. Mosher, president of the All Canadian Congress of Labor, and president of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees, was read to the Assembly by R. J. Lecky of Vancouver. The message said:

"I am deeply impressed with the effort being made by those engaged in the battle for peace and a new social order through moral re-armament, and I am confident that Canadian delegates at the World Assembly will discharge their responsibilities with credit to themselves and advantage to their country and the world. Sorry I am unable to be with you and share in the responsibility of the Canadian meeting today."

Pictures of crops being lost through grasshoppers and drought, of the struggles of farming families on relief, were brought by a group of Saskatchewan farmers who said that having gone through all these hardships, "their greatest hardship would be to be out of touch with God."

"I have been mining the land," said William Wake of Borden, 24 years in Canada. "We farmers must make restitution to the land. Moral rearmament means the beginning of a new type of farming for me and the farmers in my district."

Guidance In Education.

Speaking on behalf of the many educationists present, Mrs. E. A. Bott, of the University of Toronto, said that the guidance of God must become the foundation stone of education.

The climax of today's meeting was reached when Paul C. Nanton, of Winnipeg, son of the late Sir Augustus Nanton, read a message sent by the mayors of sixteen of Canada's larger cities, which said:

"The World Assembly for Moral Re-armament in California is an event of significance and hope for the nations. We are grateful in these days of crisis and danger that there are people who are persistently fighting in the battle for peace.

"Moral Re-armament provides a constructive program for a mayor, a city council, a community, and a nation, in which all can participate, and in which we for our part must lead. It is a searching call to sacrifice and action which no man who loves his country can overlook."

Tweed

TWEED — Tweed defeated Havelock on Wednesday evening in a play-off softball fixture by the narrow margin of 18-17. The visitors outhit the locals 24 to 21. Every man on both teams made at least one hit and scored at least one run with the exception of S. Meraw, the Tweed pitcher who failed to cross the plate. Voyer, Matheson, Brunton and Hunter were the heavy hitters for Havelock with Brunton the pitcher once again capturing the batting crown with five hits and a walk in six trips to the plate. Matheson, Jones and Brunton each scored three runs with Brunton getting a homer.

Burrows, G. Wagar and Tummon were the leading batters for the locals with the first securing four safeties in five trips to the plate. Courneyea, Orr, Burrows and Wagar all scored three runs each. Orr pounded out a double and a homer, the latter coming with two on. Marsh and T. Meraw secured the only other extra base hits, the former's being a triple.

Meraw pitched a good game for Tweed after getting by the first inning when eleven men went to bat and scored seven runs. The visitors secured only two additional runs off his delivery until the eighth inning when they pushed three runs across. Davidson replaced Meraw in the ninth without having a chance to warm up and allowed five hits and five runs including a homer by Jones.

Tweed scored all their runs in clusters, getting four runs in the first, fifth and ninth frames and six runs in the seventh, their big inning.

WINS RECOGNITION

Lord Sinha, 2nd Baron of Raipur, recently established his claim to a seat in the House of Lords, and is the first Hindoo to be admitted to that body. Lord Sinha's father died in 1928 without ever having been able to win a seat in the Lords. The present baron began his fight for recognition in 1937.

Burr's

Burr's— On Tuesday, August first Burr's Sunday school held their annual picnic at Crescent Beach, Oak Lake. The long tables placed beside the lake with a background of cedars and a refreshing breeze blowing off the lake all contributed to the comfort of the picnickers.

The weather was fine; the day was ideal and all were in the best of spirits. The tables were laden with good things to which all did ample justice. When everyone's hunger had been satisfied the men gathered in groups to discuss the crops or other matters of interest while the ladies washed the dishes, after which the following sports were put on.

Young boys' race, six years and under won by first Glenn Brooks, second Allan Werden; three-legged race, boys any age first Bill Soble and Clare Campbell, second Floyd Huffman and Burton Osterhout; boys running race, first Douglas Harnes, second Don Osterhout; necktie race, first Bill Soble and Mrs. Murney Parks; second Floyd Huffman and Lillian Anderson; potato race, first Jean Hubble, second, Mrs. Murney Parks; ladies' kicking shoe, first Eleanor Nash; second, Mrs. Murney Parks; boys left hand throwing ball, first Bill Soble, second Douglas Harnes, third Ross Burr; girls left hand throwing first Lorraine Huycke, second Eleanor Nash.

The water sports were the next attraction and swimming, diving, boating were indulged in for some time, but one of the chief attractions was the toboggan slide beside the lake. A number of men went down the toboggans skimmed over the water and sank to come up puffing and gasping, ready to try it again.

Tea was then served and all returned home feeling that Crescent Beach was an ideal spot for a picnic.

Misses Eleanor Nash and Jean Hubble, Toronto, are visiting Mrs. Frank Osterhout.

Mr. and Mrs. Merritt Adams, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Osterhout went to Kingston on Sunday via Glenora ferry.

Adolf Hitler National Hero In Germany Says Student

G. MacGillivray Viewed Situation at Close Quarters

AT MUNICH

Stirling, Aug. 5 (Special) — G. Macgillivray, graduate of Queen's University, Kingston, who recently returned from a two years post-graduate course at Bonn University, Germany, describes prevailing conditions in that country. Continuing his academic training at this famous German College this brilliant student lived for two years within six miles of Godesberg, scene of the world famous Hitler-Chamberlain conference for world peace. During the crisis he was called upon by a famous London newspaper to act as interpreter and while fulfilling his duties in that capacity keenly observed the results of each step, its effect upon the great gathering of leading newspapermen as well as the general public in and around the conference city. By virtue of his position as press interpreter he was given access to the international press rooms where news gatherers from all parts of the world discussed freely the possible outcome of the meeting and its results. The reaction upon the people of Germany and the reporters was one of the most interesting things he had ever witnessed.

As word came from the conference hall it was relayed to the interpreters and reporters and then telephones buzzed all around the world as the news was rushed to all parts of the globe. In those anxious hours the nations were closer to world conflict than anyone on this side of the Atlantic will ever realize. Disruption of the conference brought near panic to all, women wept and stout-hearted men portrayed anxiety as they waited for the expected declaration of war.

Desire For Peace.

In Germany as in all other parts of the world there was an earnest desire for peace but at the same time an apparent spirit of patriotism portrayed by the German people. They would willingly rally to the cause if war came. The masses of people in the Reich dread the thought of war but fear of other countries, created by propaganda, had been so built up in their minds that they were willing to sacrifice everything to suppress the "menace" their land.

Even the quiet landlady expressed sincere fear of the invasion of the Czech hordes, that would march into Germany and destroy the land. Such was the general attitude of the people brought about by the thoroughness of German propaganda.

Hitler Is Hero of All.

The receptions and ovation tendered Chancellor Hitler in all parts of the land are not the results of instilled fear or organization work, but entirely sincere. Here was the man who had removed the menace of street fighting, rioting and machine guns from the streets and the terror in which all people were forced to live until he gained sufficient power to end it. So smoothly and efficiently has he conducted things since coming to power that he is accepted as their hero.

German people are much different from us, their idea of perfect freedom is having things done for them by an efficient group of government committees leaving them free to enjoy themselves in simplicity. The influence of this man Hitler is so great and so skilfully exercised that the people accept his offerings as the highest type of personal freedom and enjoy it.

Danger of Collapse.

The apparent strength of the Hitler regime, with the people solidly behind it, is faced with tremendous problems however, there is a constant threat of economic upheaval brought about by each step of its expansion. Austria's gold reserve is exhausted, and that country is only a burden on Germany. Czecho-Slovakia has become a white elephant and the Reich has little wealth left in its treasury.

Fear of Germany has kept the Baltic States trading on a barter system until they are flooded with such goods as cameras and harmonicas, toys, etc., just how long the same system can continue is hard to say, and when this traed fails off Germany will be in an economic position which may lead to anything and possible collapse of its present regime.

Mr. Macgillivray who is a native of Port Arthur, Ont., is a graduate of Queen's University, Kingston, and has just completed a two-year post-graduate course in Germany. Since his return to Canada he has taken up residence in Toronto. A cousin of Mrs. (Dr.) E. A. Carleton of Stirling, he presented the above word picture of his findings in Germany in a recent letter to his Stirling relatives.

THE ONTARIO INTELLIGENCER

THE DAILY ONTARIO INTELLIGENCER is published every afternoon (Sunday and holidays excepted) at The Ontario Intelligencer Building, Front Street, Belleville.

A DEATHLESS HOLIDAY

On Monday, we shall, in common with all other cities in Ontario, enjoy a provincial holiday. The measure of our collective enjoyment will, in one sense, depend on the accident toll reported in the daily newspapers the following day. On July 1 and 4, only one day of which was a recognized holiday, the province of Ontario lost fifteen people, all killed in accidents. In proportion to the population, that is a very small total ... . .. but it is still fifteen. Some people were bereaved; some lost their bread winner; some children lost a parent.

Ontario's accident toll is something which can definitely improve, but the individual might well ask . . . "What can I do about it?" It is a perfectly proper query and one which is answered by the Canadian Underwriters' Association in a memorandum which appeals to the individual ... . not the masses . .. ... to take extra precautions during the holiday so that the accident toll shall be reduced.

In this modern era the automobile has come to be recognized almost as part of our every day life. As such it has manifold uses. Unfortunately, it has become one of the major factors in accidents, not because it is a machine, but because some drivers take chances and endanger not only their own lives but those of others. So, on Monday, can we not, as individuals, where the use of cars is concerned, drive safely and sanely, remember the rules of the road, give thought to the other parties on the road . ... .. in other words, drive like rational beings, and enjoy our holiday to the limit without taking a chance on the consequences of dangerous driving.

Of course there are other contributory causes to the accident toll . ... . drownings, common accidents in the home, or in the country ... . .. but the same rule applies to all these. It is still better to be "safe than sorry". And so, the implied inquiry, "a deathless holiday" is one which the individual can and should answer before starting out on Monday, by resolving to "be careful". The extent to which that carefulness is practiced will be determined by the accident reports after the holiday.

A record of holiday and week-end highway deaths and accidents shows the need of impressing the public with the absolute essential of careful sane driving. Here is a story in figures of the last thirteen months:—

Week-end July 1, 1938, 3 days, 3 fatalities, 177 accidents.

Week-end August 1, 1938, 3 days, 10 fatalities, 184 accidents.

Week-end September 5, 1938, 3 days, 11 fatalities, 198 accidents.

Week-end October 10, 1938, 3 days, 5 fatalities, 146 accidents.

Christmas Day, 1938, 2 days, 10 fatalities, 153 accidents.

New Year's Day, 1939, 2 days, 0 fatalities, 83 accidents.

Easter Week-end, 1939, 4 days, 2 fatalities, 141 accidents.

May 24, 1939, 1 day, 1 fatality, 26 accidents.

IN THE EAST AND IN THE WEST

The strongest language yet used by Prime Minister Chamberlain on the Japanese situation yesterday placed before the British people the Japanese problem. Warning that the Government did not want to imperil 20,000 British subjects in various parts of Japanese-controlled China and that Britain had a momentous task in Europe, he declared that he hoped no one should think "it absolutely out of the question for such circumstances to arise" as would necessitate the sending of a fleet to the Far East.

Mr. Chamberlain's words that incidents in the Orient cause his blood and that of every Britisher to boil will find echo through the sane, sober world, that large part of it which is not mad with the lust for wealth and territory and which has not adopted reactionary policies.

ROTARY'S GOOD CAUSE

Rotary clubmen in bringing speedboats for the regatta on Monday have done much to stimulate interest in inland waters, in motorboating and all sorts of aquatics in this portion of Ontario, which is blessed with lakes and bays.

Everyone wishes them abundant success in their efforts for the causes of Rotary which are essential services. Their main cause is the interest of crippled children.

RETROSPECTION

If you and I could live our lives again
We would avoid the pitfalls and the tears,
The sorrows we have met along the years,—
Armed with a wisdom once beyond our ken.

But would we then be richer for our gain?
Are not our spirits, like well-tempered steel,
Made finer by the cleansing flames they feel
When tested in the searching fires of pain?

So—since amidst the sorrows and the strife
Were interwoven threads of purest joy,
Moments of gold, untouched by pain's alloy,—
Thank God for all the bitter-sweet of life!

THINGS YOU NEVER KNEW 'TILL NOW, and are not sure you know now, are generally interesting. There are so many things a person can learn about mostly everything we are not familiar with that the sum total of man's knowledge seems unlimited. F'r instance there is much to learn about fish and fishing that the layman never knew.

x

An ardent fisherman friend informs us that young maskinonge are cannibalistic inclined and will eat each other. Place six in a tank and one by one the young lunge will disappear until only one remains . .. .. the survival of the fittest.

x

Then we learned that in stocking a lake or stream care must be taken to ascertain if the lake or stream is inhabited by trout, or bass, or pike, or pickerel, or what have you, so that fry, fingerlings or yearlings put in will receive a friendly welcome instead of a cannibalistic one, for game fish eat each other with gusto, and without.

x

We also learned that each lake and stream in Hastings County has been placed under charge of an enthusiastic angler, as a rule, a member of the Belleville and District Fish and Game Protective Association. Hence that particular stream or lake is studied to ascertain the right kind of fish to obtain for stocking.. It might be mentioned that membership in this association numbers 250, so deep is the interest taken in protecting the good fishing in Hastings and surroundings. For this season 104 applications for stocking various streams and lakes have been received by this association, investigated, endorsed or otherwise and passed on to the Ontario Government Game and Fisheries Department for action.

x

It is interesting to know that this association has been successful in having the Ontario Game and Fisheries Department this season supply the following:

Speckled Trout, 105,000 yearlings 4 to 6 inches long.

Lake Trout, 350,000.

Pickerel, five million fry.

Maskinonge, 170,000.

Brown Trout, 18,000 yearlings, 4 to 5 inches long.

Herring, for feed, three million.

Bass, 275,000 fry and fingerlings.

x

It should also be interesting to know that these fry, fingerlings and yearlings were all produced by hatcheries in the Bay of Quinte District at Thurlow, Glenora, Codrington, White Lake, No. 7 Cordova.

x

Applications for stocking fishing waters received and acted upon this season by the Belleville and District Fish and Bame Protective Association included 29 for speckled trout, 21 for lake trout, 9 for pickerel, 10 maskinonge, 6 brown trout, 1 rainbow trout, 4 herrings, 24 bass.

x

Hence from the above information readers will learn that there is much to know about fish and fishing not generally known by the general run of folks, as is true about most things. Hence no apology to the Sidelight Family is required for taking up this space with a dissertation on fish.

Belleville and District Fish and Game Protective Association has a membership of 250. J. E. Shortt is President; Dr. Van Blakslee, Vice President; I. G. Hefkey, Secretary Treasurer.

European Situation Places Premier in Quandary

Federal Election Rests Upon Unsettled European Condition

By WILFRID EGGLESTON
Central Press Canadian Writer

Ottawa, Aug. 5 — The political leaders of the country are nervously watching Ottawa, to see whether the election traffic signal is going to flash "Go" for a fall election.

A few weeks ago, everybody was sure an election was coming, in October . Now, nobody is sure about anything.

The answer rests with one man, Premier Mackenzie King. But he himself doesn't yet know the answer. For once the decision about a Canadian election will be made across the Atlantic.

There has been a lot of idle comment, wide of the mark, about this indecision of Premier King's. Though the situation before election time is always complex, with many forces making for an early appeal and other forces urging delay, there is no mystery about the European angle.

An election means a dissolution of parliament. Parliament goes out of existence for seven weeks or more. It cannot be got together within a week or so after polling day. The M.P.'s cease to be members of parliament any longer. They revert to the status of private citizens.

What Mr. Mackenzie King is thinking about, these anxious days, may be guessed with some assurance.

Suppose, just after dissolution, a European crisis breaks out, and ends in war?

Don't forget that the policy of the Liberal leader and of the Liberal party, about Canadian participation in another war, has been stated and reiterated and engraved into the policies of the party.

It is this: "Parliament will decide."

That is a pledge of policy to the Canadian people, it has not been made and repeated without deep and careful consideration and there is no sign that the leader wishes to repudiate it.

Now think of the awkwardness of the situation should a war break out between the dissolution of the eighteenth parliament and the formation of the nineteenth.

How could parliament decide? There would be no parliament in existence.

Governments, like the crown, never die. There would be no practical difficulty about taking the steps required to participate in a European conflict.

Problem Deeper

But the problem is deeper than that. It involves the theory and practise of democratic government and of Liberal policy. If parliament were dissolved with a European crisis brewing and it became necessary for a cabinet to make such momentous decisions as to the nature of Canada's participation in another conflict, what would be said about the violation — unconscious, possibly, unintentional, but still a violation—of the pledge that "parliament would decide" before Canada took part in another war?

Those who say that such considerations are academic, and that all would be forgiven in such an emergency, do not know the present Canadian prime minister and they forget how these bogeys return to life again after a crisis is past.

Therefore, until the European situation clears, the Liberal leader is in a grave quandary.

PREMIER MACKENZIE KING

Though his advises from Europe probably do not tell very much more than is known to the average newspaper reader, it is reported that the government fears a Danzig "coup d'etat" either late in August or early in September, with Danzig declaring itself a part of Germany, and placing the onus on Poland and her allies to commit "an act of aggression" by forcing it to return to its present political status.

If September passes without such a crisis, the decision in Canada—assuming satisfactory reports from Downing St.—might be to hold an election forthwith.

Election in October?

Most guesses so far have predicted an election early in October. If it is not held before the 15th of that month, it is pretty safe to say that it will not be held until after the fifteenth of November.

The reason is that there is an "in between" season in the north, between boats and sleighs, between hydroplanes and airplanes on skis, when ballot boxes cannot be got into the far north polling areas.

There is a sort of unwritten law among the politicians that voters must not be disenfranchised by calling elections at times when it is physically impossible for them to vote.

The prospects of an election between November 15th and the end of the year are not as slender as some commentators believe. The Liberals scored a big swing in December, 1921, and they might think it was luck to hold a vote again on their "lucky" day. The weather, after the freeze-up, is sometimes just as favorable for getting around late in December as it is around the middle of October.

Meantime the party organizations are held guessing, all geared up to strike, but uncertain whether to relax a bit or keep on the qui vive.

Suppose the European tension continues, what then? Will Premier Mackenzie King consider the extreme moves being discussed by England and France, the extension of parliament by a year? Only an extreme situation would justify such a step, and a man of Mackenzie King's shrewdness would only seek such a solution in time of extreme peril, as the lesser of two evils.

The Wonders of Sheep Dogs

Have you ever seen a sheep dog trial

It is a most remarkable display of canine intelligence and cannot fail to stir deeply any one who has the smallest claim to be a lover of dogs.

It is about seventy years since the first sheep-dog trial was held in North Wales. Since that time the trials have grown in popularity year by year until now they attract almost embarrassingly large numbers of people besides being listened to by thousands of people at home and abroad by means of wireless broadcasts.

They begin in the spring with the local trials; in August the national trials are held to select the twelve best dogs to represent England, Scotland and Wales, the international trials being held in the last week of September.

Those wonderfully intelligent dogs are collies—little black and white wonders of the hill farms. Unlike the bigger, long-nosed brown, fawn or white collies of the show bench, the champions of the sheep dog trials are all workers. In frost and heat, drought and blizzard, snow or gale, they take their daily share of the work on the farms.

Their working life is about eight years, though some have been known to carry on for another four years. Training begins at nine months and is gentle and gradual. The young dog is taught that it must not bark at work, nor touch the sheep, nor get excited. It is taught to crouch, not to make any unnecessary movements of paw, nor, when two dogs are working together, to cross or "poach" on the other's side. Style as well as speed gains the necessary points at the trials.

The tail of a sheep dog tells you what it is thinking about. The curl in the tip shows his increasing excitement, but a dog whose tail curls right over his back is rarely of much use. The big, bushy, white-tipped tail frightens the sheep and should trail out behind and curl only just at the tip.

Command is maintained by whistles, calls or waves of the stick, but no successful sheep dog is ever domineered. He must work with a complete understanding between his master and himself, a synchronization of thought rarely attained between man and any other animal.

When the dog is being trained he is taken into a barn or field on a leash or cord. As he walks round he is taught to lie down at a whistle or a word. Then he is taught to approach his trainer, being drawn gently by the cord should he fail to obey the signal. The young dog learns with surprising rapidity. Some are taught by simply working with the older dogs, but this method has the disadvantage that any faults the latter may have are transmitted.

The next step is to give the young dog a few sheep to handle. The sheep are used to dogs and as they move forward in front of him the dog soon begins to understand what it is you are teaching him to do. Sheep dogs seem never to cease trying to please their masters. You can almost see the effort to understand in their eyes, and you can certainly see their sorrow when they make a mistake.

I know of no dog which exceeds the sheep dog in intelligence and "thinking for itself". One I owned discovered that a kitten had the habit of bolting out of the house and making us hunt for it everywhere. Without being told he took upon himself the task of retrieving the disobedient one. He was also glove-finder-in-chief. When he saw us about to go for a walk he would fetch us our gloves.

On one occasion, when left at the home of a friend, he found his way across London during a busy rush hour of a winter's evening along the main roads and through traffic all in a few minutes. I can understand a dog finding its way across country, but the feat in the distracting noise of town and where scents cannot lie longer than a few minutes, seems to suggest a sixth sense of which we know nothing.

One morning in a beechwood I could hear a spotted woodpecker tapping somewhere, but could not see it in the dense foliage. Then I saw my dog stop suddenly and gaze intently into the tree-tops. I followed the line of his vision and soon picked out the woodpecker. How did he know what I was looking for?

On another occasion early in March I was searching a common for the first wheatears, and his keen eyes beat mine ,for he would quarter 100 acres of grass as if he were rounding up sheep ,then stop suddenly and commence to "stalk". Watching closely, I soon saw the tell-tale white rump of the wheatear bob up and down ahead of him.

This dog is a model to some ramblers, for he has learned not to walk on bluebells and other wild flowers, not to chase rabbits and squirrels and never to give tongue. The collie—I do not mean those of the show bench—has more brains than any other dogs; he is a silent worker, quick to learn and of unlimited affection for his master. He is the ideal nature-lover's companion.—By Anthony Field in Hamilton Spectator.

Superfluous Hair — Cause Unknown

Just what causes superfluous hair is not known although the general belief among physicians is that it is due to some gland disturbance.

There is no question but that this condition seems to run in some families but whether it is because of some gland condition handed down from parents to children or just a family characteristic, as is the color of the hair, is unknown.

There is also a racial tendency to superfluous hair; the Latin peoples show more cases than do other nationalities. Too much exposure to the sun may cause growth of hair.

There are various methods of removing superfluous hair, as recorded by Dr. A. P. Niemoeller in his book "Superfluous Hair and Its Removal", three of which are: to take it off (at the surface of the skin); to take it out (by plucking it from its follicle or root; or to kill it (so that it grows no more and therefore stops being a problem). An ideal hair remover is one that is safe, painless, and the hair will not grow back.

"In order to remove hair permanently by stopping its growth, the lower part of the hair—root—must be destroyed or rendered inactive. There are, at present, available three methods for removing hair: electrolysis, diathermy, and Xrays. Of these only electrolysi and diathermy are considered safe. Other methods —waxes, plucking, rubbing with pumice stone—may give satisfactory results for a time but do not remove the hair permanently."

"In removing hair by electrolysis the active electrode is made very small. It is made in the shape of a fine needle that can be inserted into the hair follicle or root so that its whole effect is located in the root and no effect is felt elsewhere in the body. Only a tiny amount of current is used—about a milliampere, more or less. The time the current is allowed to flow—from twenty seconds to a minute—is so short that any effect upon the body as a whole is impossible. The whole effect is felt in the hair root, one hair at a time."

Electrolysis is to date the best and safest method of permanent hair removal. However, even in skillful hands "misses". are made and these missed hairs must be treated again.

I have spoken before about the importance of absolute cleanliness and antiseptic precautions in the treatment of superfluous hair by electroylsis.

PICTON

STOLEN CAR IS RECOVERED

Homer White's Car Found Near Perth and an Arrest Made

Picton, Aug. 4 (Special)—The car stolen from Homer White several weeks ago, has been recovered, Mr. White has been informed, but he stated yesterday that he had not seen the car yet, it being taken in charge by insurance agents, and he did not know the extent of the damage, if any. The car was recovered at Perth, and it is stated here that an arrest has been made. The car was taken from Mr. White's garage after the lock on the door had been forced.

Members of C and D companies of Prince Edward and Hastings Regiment returned from camp at Barriefield on Wednesday. They report that it was very hot there. A sham battle was held and there was practise with the Bren machine gun. The regiment won the softball tournament, while Trenton boxers took the majority of events in that class. An amusing incident occurred. A picture of the local band appeared in the Kingston paper, but it carried a caption underneath that was the Glengarry Highlanders. The local boys did not like that and after camp was over they went to the Kingston newspaper office, marched in on the managing editor and forced him to come outside where they put him on trial. It turned out later that they had the wrong man, but the editor suitably appeased them, especially when he took the hint when the band played "How Dry I Am."

The R.C.A.F. and Picton Intermediates played a tie game here on Wednesday evening, the game being called at the end of the seventh. The locals secured five runs in the sixth inning and for the other six they were held scoreless The Airmen got a run in the second, three in the third and one in the seventh. Ferrier was pulled from the mound in the sixth after two runs had been scored and Dole replaced him. Errors beat the Airmen as they committed two costly ones in the sixth. Dainard went the route for Picton, allowing six hits and striking out 4. Picton got 7 hits off the two visiting hurlers.

Mr. Albert Case will teach at Doxsee's School again this year, he stated yesterday. Mr. Case had applied for a position on the staff of the School at Campbellford but did not accept as the requested salary was not granted.

Miss Kathryn Hadden and Miss Freda Healy were hostesses at the Golf Club tea on Wednesday afternoon. They were assisted at the social hour by Mrs. Morley Currie and Miss Lillian Boulter. Lovely flowers decorated the lounge. Among the out-of-town guests were Miss Vera Lerch of Detroit, Mrs. E. R. Frankish, Miss Hilda Carson, Miss Margaret Harper of Toronto.

Constable Eugene Rose of Brantford, accompanied by Mrs. Rose and daughter, are the guest of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Rose this week, and will later visit her mother in Belleville.

Rev. and Mrs. J. B. Creggan, who have been holidaying at Bancroft for a month returned to town late this week. Mr. Creeggan will take charge of services at the Church of St. Mary Magdalene on Sunday and will also take the services on the Marysburg charge for Rev. A. J. Anderson, who has supplying in Picton during the past month.

Miss Vera Lerch of Detroit, is a guest of Mrs. Walter S. Fraser for the summer months.

Enjoy Picnic

The pupils of the Roman Catholic Catechetical school, which was conducted for several weeks at three centres in the county, were entertained at a picnic at Stella Maris, Waupoos Island, by the Oblate Fathers of Ottawa, who are there for the summer, on Wednesday. There was a program of sports and an enjoyable picnic dinner.

Mr. and Mrs. Buff Cooper have returned after spending a month's holiday on Main Duck Island.

H. E. Pettingill, tourist agent with the C.P.R. office at Montreal for the past twenty-five years, with his wife, are holidaying with his mother, Mrs. S. W. Pettingill.

See County Scenes

There was an especially large crowd at the Regent Theatre on Thursday night when an added attraction was the showing of movies made in the county by the Frank Carlton Productions. Many of the scenes were very amusing, while those of county beauty spots were lovely. A pre parade held last Saturday in town was a feature. Some of the scenic parts are to be included in a film of country life to be shown in England.

Mr. and Mrs. Pat Hodgson are spending the week-end in Toronto as guests of Mr. and Mrs. R. Nelles.

C. H. Burr and Gordon Reed returned on Wednesday after spending several days in New York, where they attended the World's Fair.

Dr. McIntosh and Dr. Kingston of the Ontario Veterinary College, Guelph, were visitors of Dr. and Mrs. C. E. Goodwin, this week.

Mr. and Mrs. William Watt and small son of St. Catharines will be week-end and holiday guests of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Hollingsworth.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Weaver, who reside on the Ridge Road, in Hallowell Township, are celebrating their Golden Wedding anniversary on Monday next. There will be a family gathering to mark the occasion.

A group of young people from Cherry Valley and Point Petre held a weiner roast at the Outlet Beach on Wedneday evening. This is an ideal spot for such outings and many such have been held this season.

Beneficial Rain

This district enjoyed another beneficial rain on Wednesday and as a result of the recent rains there has been an improvement in pastures and growing crops. Farmers state that the rain will mean thousands of dollars to them as the tomato crop, the chief source of revenue for the county, needed moisture badly.

Mrs. Ernest Ward entertained at tea Tuesday afternoon in honor of Mrs. Frank Kenny of New Westminster, B.C., who is visiting here. Mrs. Kenny has been much entertained during her stay in town.

"The Biggest Regatta In Eastern Canada"—Say A. P. B. A. Officials

The stage is all set.

The actors are gradually taking their places behind the scenes. Properties are in position and that master scenic artist Mother Nature has dipped her magic brush into a pot of glowing colors and provided a setting that is second to none in this district.

In an orchestra seat, sits one of the most welcome guests, the Weather-Man, who has given his word of honor that a brilliant sun and warm zephyr-like breezes will be in evidence long before the first act unfolds.

And all is in readiness for the nautical panorama of thrills spills and probable chills, the Belleville Rotary Yacht Club Regatta, that will unfold at Massassaga Park on Monday August 7th, Civic Holiday.

A large number of the boats are already here. Many passed through the city yesterday, enroute to the Muskoka Lakes where they race today, but as they drove through the city, handsome racing craft drawn on trailers, they shouted a cheery greeting, with the added "We'll see you tomorrow."

Officials of the American Power-Boat Association who will supervise this, the first annual regatta of the Rotarians, will arrive tomorrow and with many famed international race drivers will be guests of Commodore R.G.E. Graham at an informal reception at the Bay of Quinte Country Club tomorrow night.

The attractive sports program has been arranged. Concession booths, manned by Rotarians and Rotary Anns, assisted by members of other service clubs of the city are ready to cater to the hungry.

Posters and indication arrows are in position to direct motorists to the scene of activities. The pits where the slim, streamlined speedsters will get the final touches before flashing down the two and one half mile course are in readiness, but no spectators will be allowed.

Official timers, scorers, judges, have been selected and allotted their positions on the official barge which will be located near the Massassaga shore opposite the start and finish line.

Softball squads of the district are keyed to a high pitch in anticipation of the tournament which takes place on Monday. Two games are scheduled for the morning while the battle for the Rotary Trophy between the surviving squads will take place in the afternoon.

So make it Belleville's and your day.

Get that picnic basket out, load it with groceries, hie yourself to Massassaga Park on Monday and enjoy the time of your life. It will be thrilling to say the least. You won't regret it, and it will go down in history as one of the best outdoor events this city has ever seen.

Enquiries from outside points for reservations and other information are pouring in to the committees. From as far east as Smith's Falls and Montreal, they come, as well as from many outstanding points in the United States.

Indications at present point to a red-letter day in the history of Belleville, so get out and swell the ranks. It is a holiday and the members of the Belleville Rotary Club are leaving no stone unturned to imbue the city and district with a real holiday spirit.

And by attending you will not only show your appreciation of the efforts of this fine service club to provide the best of outdoor entertainment for your benefit but the many crippled children who will receive free treatment and other vital necessities from the funds derived from the venture will bless you and remember you in their prayers.

Don't forget the place, Massassaga Park, on Monday. The fun starts shortly after nine o'clock in the morning and lasts until the early hours of Tuesday. It's an all day event which you won't forget in a hurry.

YOUNG ADVISED TO GO ON FARMS

Man of 100 Years Thinks This is Only Solution of Unemployed Youth

Edmonton, Aug. 4—(CP)—David Conroy, a smiling, white-haired pioneer who celebrate his 100th birthday today, thinks the only solution to the unemployed youth problem in Canada is for young people to get out on farms and stick it."

Born in Peterborough, Ont., Mr. Conroy is of Irish parents. He resides here with his son and daughter-in-law, Dr. and Mrs. J. Herbert Conroy, and he is looking forward with keen anticipation to the birthday cake decked with 100 candles which will be cut in his honor tonight.

"The only message I can give to Canadian youth", he said, "is for them to get out on farms— not homesteads—and live on them. Even if there are a few crop failures don't give up; stick it, stick it. . . ."

Bridges and Dams as Memorials

Many of the bridges and dams which the successful contractor constructed in the "old days" stands as a living memory to his philosophy of "stick to it". The Buckhorn dams in the Peterborough district and the Smith Street bridge in Peterborough are two structures still in daily use.

One thing he wants to do is to meet Joseph Haire, another old-timer who a few months ago was 103. "I'd like to talk to him and exchange a few memories." Plans were being made by his family for him to meet Mr. Haire in the near future. 'He must be pretty spry to be able to take an airplane ride", the centenarian said, with a smile.

He still reads the newspapers diligently, without using glasses. 'I've never used glasses in my life," the old man declared. "And another thing, no man has ever upset me in my life. My nerves are perfect."

Reads Sports, Politics

He likes to read the sport pages best of all, but then "politics and business are pretty interesting, too". It is easy for him to talk on current matters, which he does with gusto.

He is the father of eleven children, and has 31 grandchildren and 11 greatgrandchildren. Five of his sons and two daughters, live in Edmonton. They are Edward, David, Frank, Fred and J. Herbert, and Miss Josephine and Eleanor, who married two years ago.

Others are Mrs. P. J. Doris at Peterborough Mrs. Daisy McRorry at Seattle, Wash. and Mrs. M. Leahy at Alcomdale. A son, Dr. Robert J. Conroy, died a few years ago. Mrs. Conroy died eight years ago.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage

Two Years Older and What of It?

Dear Miss Fairfax

I think something should be done legally, if there is no other way, to keep girls from looking like near-children. The girl to whom I am engaged and I are fellow-students in the same state university. I fell head over heels in love with her and assumed an elder brother, not to say fatherly air, protecting her from things I felt she was too immature to know about. I even made her promise not to read certain books included in one of our courses. I read the books and expounded to her.

We became engaged. She wasn't very serious at first. Now she is, and we expect to be married after we graduate in another year. As the result of her changed feelings, she has confessed to being two years older than I am. I did feel such a fool when she told me. I'm still very much in love, but a good many of my convictions seem melting like a cake of ice, forgotten, on the basement steps, with the thermometer at ninety.

Simple Simon

If you haven't anything more to worry about than the fact your fiancee is two years older than you are, please forget it. The girl just had a sense of humor in allowing you to tell her about thing when she probably knew twice as much as you did.

A Job Before Marriage?

Dear Miss Fairfax

We just about mean the world to each other, and often talk of getting married. But everytime we figure out where we're going to live, we strike a snag. he lives with his mother who owns the house, and while I like her very much she does not seem to like me at all.

He gives his mother so much a week to run the house and keeps so much for himself. Do you think I ought to get myself a job, just so I would be independent, and not get in his mother's way? Eventually she will have to spend the rest of her life with us. She's a widow and very jealous of me.

J.

It seems to me it would be an excellent idea for you to get a job while waiting for your fiance's mother to become more accustomed to you.

She Asked Him to be Her Boy Friend

Dear Miss Fairfax

This girl and I were in high school together, and I liked her a lot at first, and we used to go to school dances. I'm rather a shy sort of fellow, and she's not at all shy, so it was good teamwork for us. She asked me to be her boy friend and "steady", and I agreed, but now she's begun to be a good deal of a pest, calling me up on the phone and getting me bawled out by my mother and father. And I hate the awy she chews gum every minute.

She really seems sort of common to me. We've never suggested being engaged or anything like that. I want to fade out of the picture.

Willie

Go right ahead and fade, Willie. These high-school flirtations aren't binding, and you tell me that positively there has been no word of an engagement. You're lucky. So many youngsters do become engaged, and have difficulty getting out of the arrangement.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Manners in a Dining Car

A dining car is for the convenience of all passengers, Pullman and day-coach. On most trains a waiter or porter goes through the train announcing that "Dinner (or 'lunch') is now being served."

When we enter the dining car, the dining steward, like the headwaiter in a restaurant, meets us at the door and show us to our place at table. If we have our preference as to seat, we tell him our choice as to which side of the car we wish to sit, and so forth. The first arrivals are usually assigned to the seats facing forward. If there is a line waiting at the door of the dining car we patiently and politely wait our turn.

In a dining car either the dining steward or the table waiter gives us a pad on which to write our order. Otherwise what we do in a dining car is what we do in a restaurant.

We should be polite to those at table with us . . . but we should not interpret the simple request of our table-companion, "May I have the salt, please?" as an opportunity to develop an acquaintanceship. If the other person is an experienced and well-bred traveller, he or she will not welcome our conversational efforts or obvious lack of social poise.

Most fastidious women wear their hats to the dining car, even on a long journey. They would no more appear in a dining car without their hats than they would appear in any other public restaurant without their hats. Many women provide themselves with fabric gloves to wear comfortably in their places in the Pullman as well as to and from the dining car.

Under no circumstances should a woman permit a stranger to pay for her meal.

Even on a long journey we tip the table waiter at the end of each meal. Twenty-five cents is the usual tip for a meal costing from one dollar to two dollars and a half. Fifteen cents is the minimum tip for a meal of a dollar or less. If the check is for over two dollars and a half, the rule of ten per cent of the amount is usually applied. Additional, if we have requested extra service. On a short journey, we usually do not tip the dining steward, but on a long trip, if the steward has, for example, had special foods prepared for us, or has reserved the seat that we prefer, we give him a dollar tip at the end of the journey.

When we start to leave the dining car, we nod a pleasant "Thank you" to the waiter as he draws out our chair, and say a pleasant "Thank you" too to the dining steward as we pass him on our way out of the car.

Tip the Maid?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman

Will you please tell me whether or not it is correct to tip a maid who does general housework, such as cooking, serving, dusting and so forth, and who does nothing personal for you, in a friend's home where you are either a day guest or a week-end guest?

Reader

If you were just "spending the day" in a friend's home, it would not be at all necessary to give a tip to the maid.

But if you were a guest for the week-end, you would appropriately give her a dollar, or, if your inclination prompted you to, two dollars. This is considered the usual fee to be given by an average guest in an average house with one maid. Of course if the maid does any extra service for you. . . . laundry, pressing, errands, for example . . . . the tip is increased proportionately.

Courtesy Tip

There are two fundamental rules for all sports. When you are watching a game, be quiet. When you are playing the game, be fair.

It Pays To Advertise

Fashion Flashes

THE SHOPS are featuring furs already. Good for day or evening wear is a big sleeved bolero of sable dyed squirrel, the skins worked in spirals on the sleeves and vertically on the body of the coat.

Pick out a comfy hat for travel wear. Soft, easy to wear and pretty, is a hat of violet-toned felt with soft high crown and visor brim. Trimming is a band of fuchsia satin.

Lots of looks of admiration for the girl who was seen recently wearing a full skirted white tulle gown topped by a jacket of geranium red faille.

Nice way to learn geography is to get one of those place scarfs. One model in silk is made up of all of the 48 States of the U.S. in outline holding fauna, flora and scenes associated with the different states Colors are lovely.

One girl, who likes plenty of clothes but has to practise economy got herself yards and yards of narrow black dotted net and made it into a handsome bolero which she wears over her evening frocks.

Arms out for those elaborate evening gloves. A shoulder high glove in black suede has embroidered pink roses and green leaves outlined with black sequins.

AT THE BELLE

"SECOND FIDDLE"

One of the greatest combinations of talent ever gathered for one show makes Irving Berlin's "Second Fiddle" a production to which all Belleville has been looking forward, according to Manager Forhan of the Belle Theatre, who reports many inquiries for the opening date.

Just imagine, screen fans, Sonja Henie romancing with Tyrone Power to the melodies of Irving Berlin's six new songs with singing Rudy Vallee cutting in and Edna May Oliver cutting up and new-star Mary Healy and Lyle Talbot and Alan Dinehart all in it too, and Sonja skating her sensational ice tango for the first time on the screen—no, never mind your imagination, for that's the "What-what" of "Second Fiddle", 20th Century-Fox production now playing at the Belle.

Abounding with the entertainment surprises typical of Darryl F. Zanuck's musicals, "Second Fiddle" shows Sonja with her first screen skating partner Toronto's Stewart Reburn, and introducing a new ballroom dance craze the "Back to Back". This step was evolved by Harry Losee, who staged Sonja's skating ensembles, from the tune hit by Irving Berlin. Other Berlin hits in the film are "I'm Sorry for Myself", "An Old Fashioned Tune Always is New", "When Winter Comes", "Song of the Metronome" and "I Poured My Heart into a Song".

The screen play by Harry Tugend based on a story by George Bradshaw, is a realistic tale of what happens when Hollywood at last finds the girl deemed worthy of portraying the heroine of a great best selling novel.

A beautiful fashion reel all in gorgeous technicolor, Walt Disney's newest color cartoon, "Donald's Cousin Gus", and the popular Belle newsreel with its best of important world news events.

Midnight Show

Presenting the lucky seventh Hardy Family hit, "Andy Hardy Gets Spring Fever" comes to the Belle Sunday Midnight, for a special preview presentation with the family back home in Carvel.

Again Lewis Stone is seen as Judge Hardy, Mickey Rooney is Andy and all the rest of the family are present, Fay Holden, Cecilia Parker, Sara Haden, Ann Rutherford. Two new members are Terry Kilburn, fresh from his triumph in "Goodbye Mr. Chips", enacting an annoying friend of Andy's and Helen Gilbert, Hollywood's newest discovery, who plays the school teacher.

The director is W. S. Van Dyle II one of the filmdom's outstanding directors and who numbers among his successes such pictures as "The Thin Man", "San Francisco" and "Sweethearts".

The story is said to be the most amusing and the most dramatic of the Hardy pictures.

A great surrounding show of vaired screen treats precede the feature attraction.

HALLOWAY W.M.S.

The regular monthly meeting of the Halloway W.M.S. was held on Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Coleman Townsend. A hymn was sung. The Roll Call response word was "Obey" and ten members and visitors gave Scriptural verses containing this word. A poem was read by Mrs. Herbert Townsend. A letter from Mrs. Annie Townsend expressed thanks for flowering plant sent to her at the Belleville General Hospital.

Another letter regarding the approaching conference was left for discussion. A reading entitled "Tell-Tale Marks" was given by Ruth McMullen followed by a hymn.

A missionary topic was given by Mrs. Leonard Prest in her usually capable manner and was intensely interesting and much enjoyed. A reading, "So Much to do at Home" was given by Mrs. E. Emerson. A hymn was followed by a closing prayer by Mrs. Don Rose.

ROYALTY ON THE ROCKS

While their parents are on the continent, Prince Edward and Princess Alexandria, children of the Duke and Duchess of Kent, are spending a seaside vacation at Kay's Bluff, near Dover. They are shown on the rocky beach. Prince Edward favors a spade and pail. While his sister apparently is a rock-thrower.

Get Out-of-Doors Every Day of Your Life

By HELEN FOLLETT

CIRCULATION is an interesting subject. Beauty specialists talk a lot about it when the cash customer is getting her facial treatment; they know that their work will show better and quicker results if the beauty seeker gets to be a fresh air drinker, is sufficiently active to keep blood streams stimulated.

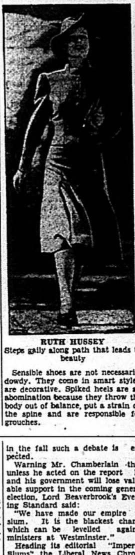
Poor circulation is responsible for many beauty griefs. How do you know that your blood streams are sluggish? Cold, moist hands will tell you. Wan cheeks testify. Sometimes a red nose is the messenger that brings the bad news.

Get out-of-doors every day of your life, rain or shine. If you don't play golf or tennis, row or swim, clip off your three miles. Do we hear protests? They come from girls who find transportation all too convenient; the car is at the door, so they hop in. They'll pay for their laziness. The one who motors and never walks is the one who gets hippy, develops large thighs and thick ankles.

Coming in from the walk, take a cold shower, lie down and relax. Relaxation is a necessary as exercise; it clears away troubling thoughts, puts a jumpy nervous system to sleep.

A mean trick to play on one's little footies is to wear shoes that are too short or to narrow. The insulted trotters develop corns, calloused spots, ingrowing nails, maybe a hammer toe.

If one toe is crowded by its neighbors, forced to a higher level, there is plenty of grief ahead of one. When the condition is of long standing, it is sometimes necessary to amputate the toe. Fancy being one to shy just because attention has not been paid to the proper fitting of shoes.



RUTH HUSSEY

Steps gaily along path that leads to beauty

Sensible shoes are not necessarily dowdy. They come in smart styles, are decorative. Spiked heels are an abomination because they throw the body out of balance, put a strain on the spine and are responsible for grouches.

MALNUTRITION

"This must result not only in the prevalence of specific deficiency diseases but in a great deal of ill-health, lowered resistance to other diseases, and a general impairment of well-being and efficiency."

Biting Editorials

Publication of the report has been followed by an outbreak of biting editorials even in government-supporting newspapers. Colonial secretary Malcolm Macdonald did not have to face a full-dress debate on the report before yesterday's adjournment of parliament but when the House resumes in the fall such a debate is expected.

Warning Mr. Chamberlain that unless he acted on the report he and his government will lose valuable support in the coming general election, Lord Beaverbrook's Evening Standard said:

"We have made our empire a slum. It is the blackest charge which can be levelled against ministers at Westminster."

Heading its editorial "Imperial Slums" the Liberal News Chronicle described the report as a shocking picture of the neglect of a great imperial heritage and cried for a reconsideration of the whole economic position of the distressed territories.

Increase in Wealth Necessary

The committee says malnutrition will never be cured until the peoples of the colonial empire command far greater resources than they do at present.

In a reference to paid labor, the report accuses some firms working in the colonies of adopting towards their employees an attitude 200 years behind the times.

"We consider that governments should themselves lead the way by providing a well-balanced diet for their laborers."

The West Indies case is particularly cited, while there is "a steady and continuous increase" in development in many parts of the empire, there is the problem, such as in the West Indies, of 'an increasing population without any obvious prospect of an increase in wealth.

Low Wages Blamed as Factor

Low wages paid to laborer, says the committee, is one of the chief factors of malnutrition.

A report received from the Barbadoes says it is known that the average weekly wage of parents is insufficient to feed the whole family for a week and many children have no regular meals after Wednesday in each week, and go to school hungry on Thursdays and Fridays.

Similar instances could be given for Jamaica, Grenada and most other West Indian Islands, it is added.

Other revelations from the lengthy report are

"One of the most striking features has been the almost complete absence of milk . . . from most tropical diets." The abolition of all tariffs of dried milk, especially cheap skimmed milk, is urged.

In St. Helena: "Disease, malnutrition, physical and moral weakness are concomitant with poverty, which is almost at starvation level. Many have never tasted cow's milk, butter, cheese or eggs."

Sierra Leone: "In the 17th. Century the natives were healthy, Now there are outbreaks due to vitamin deficiency manifested by glazed tongues, sore mouths and affected eyes, with lids gummed down by the discharge."

Plots of Land for Natives

The committee urge governments and employees to develop local agriculture, to give natives plots of land to grow vegetables on so that they can vary their diets and protect themselves from failure of the main crop of the colony.

The also urge propaganda by newspapers, leaflets, broadcasts and lectures to give natives the most elementary points on good feeding.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

How Would You Treat a Sprained Ankle?

One of the most common injuries which your child may sustain this summer when you are out camping is a sprained ankle. The usual sprain occurs when the foot turns under so that the weight of the body strains the ligaments of the ankle. As a result, a swelling appears almost immediately on the outer side of the ankle, and the unfortunate victim will suffer intense pain every time the foot is placed on the ground. If you examine the ankle shortly after the sprain, you will notice that the usual bony outline of the ankle has disappeared in the swelling. A finger placed just below the ankle bone on the outside of the leg will show this area to be excessively tender.

Unfortunately we can never be sure whether or not the end of the bone on the outside of the ankle has been pulled off or not. If it has, then the ankle must be put up in a plaster cast and kept that way for several weeks. Because of this danger, a doctor should always be called to attend an ankle sprain.

If you are at a place where no doctor is available for a day or two, then the ankle should be securely bound with adhesive tape.

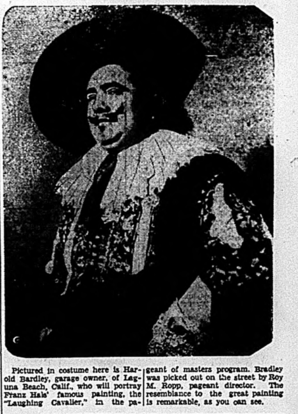
To do this, cut four strips of adhesive, each 20 inches long, and two strips ten inches long. The foot should be bent so as to relax the ligaments on the outside of the ankle that have been strained. Attach one of the long pieces of adhesives by one end to the inside of the ankle from four to six inches above the foot. The remainder of this piece should then be swept down around the instep and back along the outer side of the leg. In doing this, the ankle will be pulled so that the ligaments on the outside will be relaxed and those on the inside will be stretched. If the adhesive is the right length you will find that it reaches half way to the knee on outside of the leg. The other three long pieces of adhesive will be placed on the leg in the same manner. When all four are in place there will be a solid band of adhesive about three inches wide extending around the foot and up the leg.

The smaller two pieces will be used to surround the leg at the ankle and at the calf to prevent the long strips from slipping. Adhesive used should be about one inch wide.

A sprain in which the weight is thrown so as to strain the ligaments on the inside of the ankle isn't as common as that described above. In such a case the swelling will be on the opposite side of the leg and the adhesive will have to be applied so as to relieve the inner ligaments. In other words, the manner of placing the adhesive should be reversed.

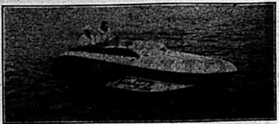
However, when a sprain like this occurs there is grave danger that a bit of bone has been pulled off the lower end of the shin bone. Since this requires the application of a plaster cast at once, it is wise to get the patient to a doctor just as soon as possible.

"LAUGHING CAVALIER" COMES TO LIFE



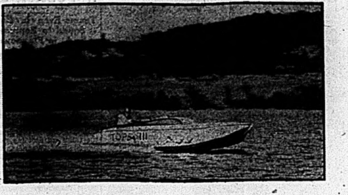
Pictured in costume here is Harold Bardley, garage owner, of Laguna Beach, Calif., who will portray Franz Hals' famous painting, the "Laughing Cavalier," in the pageant of masters program. Bradley was picked out on the street by Roy M. Ropp, pageant director. The resemblance to the great painting is remarkable, as you can see.

Ready and Rarin' To Go on Monday, August 7th



"Aquila" crack 225 cubic inch flash owned and driven by Don Forman of Buffalo. Don is one of the entries in the feature event at the regatta here on Monday and willbe going "all out" in an endeavor to wrest the handsome Belleville-Sargent Gold Trophy.

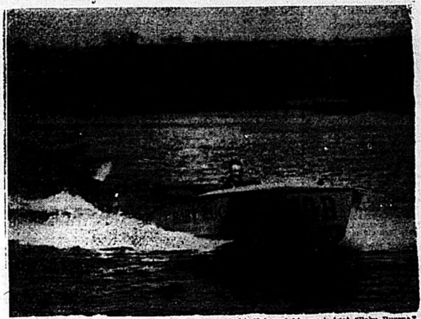
Jackie "Pops" Cooper, Kansas City, grand old man of the water speedways and one of the grandest sportsmen that ever jerked a throttle. "Pops" is so convinced that he can take the measure of the younger men, that he wired Regatta officials yesterday that he is bringing an outboard motor job and will race it against anything that floats in its class.



Jackie "Pops" Cooper Kansas City, Mo., veteran speedboat driver and holder of the world's record over a measured mile course for 225 cubic inch hydroplanes. "Pops" and his crack flyer, "Tops 3rd," will be here to defend the title on Monday.

Here he is, ladies and gents, that rip-snorting, tootin' shootin' son-of-a-gun from Ohio, the seventy-nine year old youngster, "Bob" Jaite, of Jaite, Ohio. The stern look on the "kid's" face was registered before he took off in the final heat of the Gold Cup race at Picton this year. Incidentally Bob won the trophy and will be here to take back the Belleville-Sargent Gold Trophy to keep it company. If he wins, Bob says, he is going to take up dentistry, figuring he'll have enough gold to last him for years.

The two grand old men of the speedboat stakes. On the left, ladies and gentlemen is "Kid" Pops Cooper, 64, 225 champion of Missouri and holder of the world's title, and his opponent "Bob Jaite" the Terror from Ohio, aged 79. They'll be in there battling for the title on Monday and will in all likelihood provide thrills such as never before experienced by the local public.



Vice-Commodore Lloyd Hicks of the Belleville Rotary Yacht Club and his crack boat "Baby Rugene." The genial commodore of the local club will be out to break the existing world's record of 44.232 miles per hour for 210 cubic inch boats.

Walters of Cincinnati Reds Scores 19th Win of Season And Also Eighth Straight

Converted Third - Baseman Great Ballast for Winning Club

CARDS ARE CLOSE

Senators Extend Winning Streak to Five by Beating Chicago

By JUDSON BAILEY

Lots of people have been waiting for Cincinnati Reds to crack but by now it ought to be clear the only cracking the Reds care to do is crack a whip over the rest of the National League.

With the durable Bucky Walters in the saddle last night the Reds ripped through Brooklyn Dodgers, 5-3, and quickly rinsed away the bad taste of a pair of losses to New York Giants earlier in the week.

It was Walter's nineteenth victory, his second within a week and his eighth straight. With this kind of a pitching rock for ballast it's hard to conceive of Cincinnati capsizing.

The second place St. Louis Cardinals coursed from behind to beat the Phillies, 9-8, in 13 innings, for their sixth successive triumph. After spotting the rail-enders a seven-run advantage, the Redbirds finally flew into action. Ducky Medwick doubled home the tying run in the ninth inning and then pounded the winning tally across with another double in the fourth extra stanza.

Pirates Beat Giants.

Another extra-inning contest was the 11-frame affair which the Giants gave to Pittsburgh Pirates, 3-2. After Mel Ott had hit his twentieth home run of the season with a mate on board in the first, Harry Gumbert lost control in the seventh, walked in one run and left the bases filled for another to score on a double play.

Claude Passeau bested Lou Fette in a tight pitching battle at Chicago with the Cubs nosing out the Bees, 1-0. Passeau gave only four hits and no bases on balls.

New York Yankees greeted Cleveland with a 5-4 victory, thirteenth in fifteen games with the Indians this year. Oral Hildebrand and Marius Russo gave the tribe a five-hit diet, but three of these were home runs and except for two errors which made all but one of the Yankee runs unearned, the story might have been different.

Extend Win Streak.

Washington Senators extended their winning streak to five games with a 6-5 10-inning triumph over Chicago White Sox. The winning run was scored when a couple of the Sox outfielders lost a fly in the run.

Opening a series at Philadelphia, St. Louis Browns broke their losing streak with a 3-1 victory at the expense of the Athletics. The Red Sox-Tigers game was postponed to make a Sunday doubleheader.

LEAD SNIPPED TO THREE POINTS

Hamilton Tigers Close on Heels of St. Catharines Athletics

(By The Canadian Press)

Hamilton Tigers snipped at St. Catharines' five-point Senior "A" Ontario Lacrosse Association lead to three points during the week. The leaders broke even in their two games played during the week while the runners-up added a pair of victories.

Most startling form reversal of the season was seen at Brampton at the start of the week when the Excelsiors, bottom-placed club in the six-team group, whipped the Athletics 15-3. The 1938 Canadian champions were never close as Excelsiors chalked up their third victory of the season.

The same night Hamilton edged out Mimico Mountaineers 11-7 and last night both St. Catharines and Hamilton turned in victories. The Athletics made it 22-9 over Fergus and Hamilton whipped Brampton 18-11. The other scheduled contest of the week was played Monday night at Fergus when Orillia Terriers, under the direction of their new manager, Eddie Powers, surged to a 27-11 victory over the Thistles.

Bill Isaacs, the league's leading sharpshooter, stood out in both Hamilton matches. Monday against Mimico he got four goals and three assists and last night bagged four goals and one assist against the luckless Brampton entry.

St. Catharines scored almost at will against the visiting Fergus Thistles. The champions had had a 6-0 edge in the first period and booster it to 14-3 in the next chapter. Fergus scored the only two goals in the third period but the Mann Cup holders outscored the fourth-placers 8-4 in the closing epriod.

CO-OPERATIVE SYSTEM IS EMPHASIZED

Ste Anne de Bellevue, Que., Aug. 5—(CP)—Opportunities and possibilities of the co-operative system in the economic and social spheres were discussed yesterday by Prof. J. E. Latimer of Montreal at the annual Macdonald Summer School for Clergy.

J. G. Sparling, Brockville, Ont., was elected president at the annual meeting. In session for two weeks, the school reaches the halfway mark this Sunday.

Year's Best Rookie

Best major league rookie of the year. That's the description Ted Williams, ABOVE, has carved out for himself by his feats this year. Only 20 years old, Ted patrols an outfield post for Boston Red Sox, but it's his potent bat rather than his efficiency in the field that has made him so valuable. He hits the ball fairly consistently, but more important, his drives really travel, and come with runners on base. He's leading the majors in batting in runs and is not far from the top in two base swats and home runs.

There is Harmony At Ball Game

But Rhythm Comes from Plane Floating Over City

There was "music in the air" last night at the Coleman Flats where Corby's and Shell Oil Softball squads were battling in the fourth game of their play off series.

Between the roar of the excited crowd, the crack of the bat on ball, there came sounds of sweet melody. Curious spectators gazed about them. No cars apparently had their radios "tuned in". No versatile instrumentalist was in sight.

Overhead a plane circled the field and as it dropped lower, the music became louder. Then the secret came out. Enterprising officials of a neighbouring town had taken to the air for a novel advertising stunt, and between selections of a Hawaiian electric guitar, broadcast activities of a future holiday date.

The music however was appropriate, as Conny Harris, Corby's pitcher, left the mound in the third innings, the soft strain of "Farewell to Thee" could be heard, while Art (Killer) Cole who whiffed on a third strike slowly walked to the bench to the strains of "O How I Miss You Tonight".

CANNIFTON WINS AT SHANNONVILLE TO EVEN SERIES

Only Run of Game Scored in Sixth by Bunching of Two Hits

GAME WELL PLAYED

Cannifton Held Off by Snappy Fielding of Homesters

Foxboro, August 5 (Special) — Having at last apparently shaken the playoff "jinx" which has dogged their team right out of the playdowns for the past seven consecutive seasons the Cannifton "Sluggers" last night redeemed themselves for the drubbing they received on Wednesday evening and playing heads up ball behind the three hit hurling of Lorne Jarrell shut out the Shannonville "Hawks" 1-0 and thus evened the series at one game each.

Fielding a revised lineup considerably turned around since Wednesday's poor effort on the diamond the Cannifton lads snapped abruptly out of their doldrums to afford Jarrell airtight support in the pinches and bunching two of their three hits in the sixth inning, managed to shove across the only run of the game and pull out a win. In putting his team right back into the running for South Hastings playoff honors, Jarrell limited the Shannonville nine to three small hits, while he fanned three and walked two. Although eventually returned the losing pitcher, Juby, on the mound for the Shannonville nine, rather outpitched his rival as he also held the opposition to three hits two of which were of the scratchy variety, while he fanned ten and gave free transportation to only one.

Losers Load Bases

Jarrell pitched himself out of a nice hole right in the first inning, when the homesters loaded the bases after two were away, when Juby singled to be followed by a base on balls to Coutts and a wild throw by the pitcher, but Spencer was the victim of a strikeout to end the frame. Again in the second Shannonville loaded the bases without a score when a base on balls, a single by Barberstock and an error by the first sacker put Jarrell in a hole. Reid however hit to Collins at third who tossed home with Maracle being out when he missed the plate. Cook popped out to first and Juby was out at first unassisted to end the inning.

Cannifton were held off by snappy fielding by the homesters in the second, when a single by Curley and a hit batsman put Juby momentarily in a hole but Reid came to his aid with a nice play of Smallhorn's roller to force Farquharson at second. Cook made a nice stab of Empson's line drive to start the fourth and Shannonville kicked in with a double killing in the fifth when after one was gone Smallhorn was safe at first when Barberstock dropped the ball only to be doubled off when Maracle took L. Jarrell's lifter to right. Collins started the sixth off with a single and after stealing second rode home on E. Jarrell's one base blow for the only score of the game. Jarrell was advanced to third on an infield out, Empson made a mess of things when he stepped across the plate to hit the ball and was called out by Umpire Thomas for batting illegally and Jarrell was sent back to third. Shannonville made one last desperate effort to knot the count in the last inning when pinch hitter Hill, batting for Barnhardt, singled, to be followed by a hit batsman and a base on balls, but Coutts failed to get the needed hit, and was out Collins to first to end the game.

One Handed Stab

Collins at third and Gannon at second for the winners stood out in the field with Smallhorn making a nice catch of Coutt's drive in the fifth to pull Jarrell out of a hole. Reid, at second for the losers, went well with Cook making the feature play when he made a one-handed stab of Empson's liner in the fourth.

Although it is only a co-incidence, nevertheless, it is a rather odd feature that the home team has yet to win a contest in the current playdowns. This rather unusual feature began with the first game of the Shannonville vs Latta series and has continued right up to the game played last night. Owing to the counter attractions on Monday (Civic Holiday) the next game will be postponed until the following Wednesday when Shannonville will visit Cannifton for the third game of the finals.

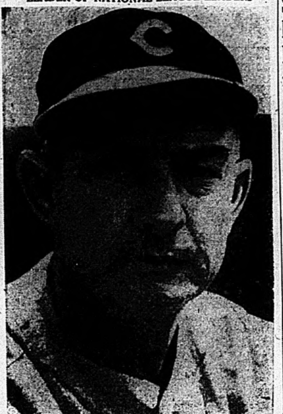
LEADER OF NATIONAL LEAGUE LEADERS



Here's the man who's leading Cincinnati Reds to their first National League pennant in 20 years . . . it is confidently expected, even outside Cincinnati. Nobody has ever doubted the abilities possessed by Bill McKechnie as a baseball leader, and if the Reds keep moving at their present pace it will be the third flag for Bill, each with a different team. He led Pittsburgh to the top in 1925 and St. Louis three years later. A few years ago he moved to Boston and revived a dormant team, and from there to the Reds, also in a semi-somnolent condition when he took over. Bill gets a fine salary, needless to say, plus a bonus for drawing a stipulated number of customers, something he has never failed to earn.

BELLEVILLE INTS. LOSE TO PICTON

Abbott Whiffs Thirteen of the Opposition in Winning 13-3

With a patched up lineup Belleville Intermediates were defeated in Picton on Friday evening 13-3 and will have to hustle the remainder of the way to make a berth in the play-offs. "Kityy" Abbott, selected for mound duty by Roly Rorke coach of the Picton Club, simply coasted to victory and was at all times master of the situation, while Ellis laboring on the mound for the losers was continually in hot water if nia through his own efforts then by the miscues of his teammates. Abbott whiffed 13 in eight frames which is somewhat of a record, while Ellis could only get two by the same route.

Belleville had only three scoring chances in the game and made each of them count, while Picton secured their tallies in bunches counting four runs in each of the fourth, sixth and eighth. Hudgins, Fraser and Burley were the heavy stickers for the winners, the first two names having doubles and Burley secured a triple and only by fast fielding by Riggs in centre and an alert play by Churchill at the plate was the hit kept to that proportion. It was a lusty clout past the scoreboard in centre field made the fielding feature of the game, when he started a double play on a hard hit ball.

Breaks Hurdle Record

Canadian hurdling champion and a Canadian competitor at the last Olympics, Larry O'Connor, ABOVE, lowered the Canadian record for the 110-metre high hurdles with a time of 14.8 at the Ontario track and field championships held in Toronto. His time lowered the mark set 19 years ago by Earl Thomson by 4-5 second.

LOU BOUDREAU'S HIT FOR BISONS DECIDING BLOW

Saves Team from Slipping Into Fourth Place in Standings

(By The Associated Press)

If it hadn't been for Lou Boudreau and his game-winning single in the 12th inning, Buffalo would be in fourth place instead of second in the International League scramble today.

There's only a matter of three games separating first and fourth place in the tight race, and that's why Lou's blow was so important to the Bisons.

The Bisons had already lost the first game to Syracuse by 5-3 and were locked in a scoreless struggle when in the 12th with two mates aboard, Lou cracked out his single for a 2-0 win. And that must have been sweet music too, to the Cleveland Indians who have recalled Lou and teammate Rossmack, an infielder. Jersey City Giants sneaked out of a three-game losing streak by beating Montreal Royals, 9-3, as southpaw Roy Joiner kept 12 hits well scattered. The Giants emerged from their batting slump and pounded three Montreal pitchers for an even dozen blows, Woody Jensen's double and two singles featuring the attack.

Newark Bears made last night's victory their eighth in their last nine starts and their fourth in a row when George Barley paced them to a 5-3 victory over Rochester. He held the Red Wings to five hits, one of which was a homer by Dusty Cooke.

The League's other game was a wild swinging affair, with 33 blows raining on Oriole Park as the Baltimore team clubbed out a 12-9 win over Toronto Maple Leafs.

Art Graham and Red Howell belted homers for the winners, and Clifton hit one ofr the Leafs. There were six doubles during the fray, three by each team. Baltimore used three pitchers and Toronto sent Walkup and Pezzulo to the pitcher's mound.

SHELL 'OILERS' DEFEAT CORBYS IN FOURTH GAME

Teams Even in Contest for Squad to Represent O. A. S. A. in Playdowns

SCORE 19-5

Bawden Effective With Seven-Hit Effort but Corby's Field Miserably

They're all even in Belleville's intermediate O.A.S.A. play-offs between the Shell-Aajmaa and the Corbys A.C. with two wins each and the final and deciding game will be played next Wednesday at the Flats. With their backs to the wall and facing elimination in defeat the Shell "Oilers" drove back into the city softball picture with a vengeance vanishing, Chuck Barnett's Corbys A.C. in a triumphal 19 to 5 victory, as the "Oilers" pounded the offerings of three Corbys' hurlers in a most prolific manner and cinched the piece with a third inning nine run rally that proved sufficient for victory.

Defensively the "Oilers" played sterling ball behind Johnnie Bawden's seven-hit pitching, Bawden never being in serious trouble after his team mates gave him those nine big runs in the third inning. Bawden struck out 10, only allowed one extra base blow, that coming from the bat of Corby's catcher, Alex Simpson in the initial frame as outfielder Amo misjudged the speroid in flight. Connie Harris, who had subdued the "Oilers" on two previous play-off occasions, was Skipper Barnett's choice for mound duty, but his offerings were pounded hard from the initial frame, when he yielded three runs, until he was derricked under a barrage of base hits in the third with Eddie Schrieder taking over. Schrieder fared little better at the hands of the driving "Oilers" and failed to last the inning, with "Lum" Carson being rushed to fill the breach and finish the piece for the losers.

Many Extra Bases

Extra base clouts spelled victory for the "Oilers" as O'Neill had a home run and three base hit to his credit to lead all hitters with five hits in six tries. Moon and Sero came through with four base clouts as the "Oilers" collected 17 safe blows. Bawden yielded up seven hits, Simpson with a home run and a single leading the losers, while Cy Barriage followed with two one base blows. The Corbys kicked in with seven costly errors as the "Oilers" pounded the apple to all corners of the playing field.

Coupling good pitching with splendid fielding the Shell-Aajmaa "Oilers" evened the city O.A.S.A. finals with their Corby rivals last night and the fifth and final tussle will be played with outside and neutral umpires, we have been informed, on Wednesday next. Last night's game was just about the reverse of the previous game when the Corbys won. Last night the "Oilers" pounded three of Corby's hurlers for a total of 17 hits, while the losers were booting the ball for seven costly errors. In the meantime Johnnie Bawden pitched seven-hit ball and his teammates only miscued once that hurt. Bawden only gave one extra base hit, a homer to Alex Simpson, while the "Oilers" whacked out three homers, O'Neill, Moon and Sero hitting for the circuit, while they added a triple and three doubles for good measure. Bawden returned to pitching prominence by striking out ten as Skipper Barnett was forced to use Harris, Schrieder and Carson, his entire hurling staff to halt the slugging Shell.

George O. Tice, Belleville's veteran harness horse starter, was in Bracebridge yesterday officiating as starter for the horse races held in conjunction with Bracebridge Old Boys' Reunion.

The stage is all set for the biggest sport event ever staged in this part of Ontario—the Belleville Rotary Club Regatta off Massassaga Point on Monday. About everything that could be written regarding this speed event has already appeared before the public, but we can assure the sporting-loving fraternity of this district, that the largest field of 225 and 135 class boats ever to face the starter's gun in Canada will be on hand here Monday. Frankly all that is needed to asure a perfect day of sporting thrills is ideal weather. Besides the lengthy list of events as sanctioned by the American Power Boat Association of New York City, several attempts to shatter existing world's mile speed records are going to be made by individual drivers. The Belleville Rotary Club, in conjunction with the A.P.B.A., have spent no end of effort to assure the greatest day of speed boat racing ever attempted in this country. And don't forget the big dance frolic at the Hume Arena on Monday night to culminate the day's fun.

The standing of the Bay of Quinte League today reads:

	W.	L.	T.	Pts.
Picton	13	3	0	26
Napanee	9	6	1	19
Belleville	5	11	0	10
R.C.A.F.	2	9	2	6

Games next week: Monday, Air Force at Napanee: Thursday, Belleville at Air Force.

A new kind of golf game has been designed by Fred Haney, manager of the St. Louis Americans, for baseball players who wish to strengthen their legs. After a foursome has teed off all four race down the fairway, and the fastest man is allowed to choose his ball for the second shot.

Picton and the Air Force were the only clubs to gain ground in the Bay of Quinte League this week. The "Flying Men" played Napanee and Picton to tie games this week, while Picton beat Belleville last night 13 to 3. Skipper Bud Wilkins took a patched-up squad to Picton last night and as was expected they assumed a trouncing. The Bay of Quinte loop standing is far from decided and if Belleville's baseball players are at all interested in getting into the league playoffs they should become vitally interested in winning against the Air Force, the only club they can nose out of a play-off berth. Incidentally Kitty Abbott, Picton's steady right-hander, limited the locals to four one base blows yesterday, while Picton knocked Sam Ellis for all 11 safeties.

Sport Spice — Johnny Ferraro says he knows nothing regarding being selected as coach of the Queen's University football squad.. The only runs the Cleveland Indians scored against the Yankees yesterday were circuit blows, four of 'em, but they weren't enough to win as the men-of-McCarthy won 5-4.... Bucky Walters won his 19th game for the Reds yesterday as Cincinnati beat the Dodgers 5-3 yesterday.... Warning to all softballers... Oshawa had three men suspended for falsifying their certificates, so beware ye guys.... Another question —why was Connie Harris given the starting role against the "Oilers" last night after a tough assignment on Wednesday?...... We can't figure it out either.... The Oilers and Corbys clash in an exhibition tussle at Massassaga on Monday morning, but their big meeting will be next Wednesday in the O.A.S.A. finals.... And now for a large, refreshing and lengthy week end.

THEY CONTINUE RECORD FLIGHT

These two brothers, one a seasoned pilot, the other just licensed, are adding hours to their newly won endurance flight record for light planes, flying above Springfield, Ill., Humphrey Moody, 20, LEFT, and Hunter Moody, 25, RIGHT, who live in Decatur, Ill., officially shattered the old record of 218 hours 43 minutes of sustained flight when they surpassed that mark by one hour. They have announced that they are now shooting at the 653 hour large plane record.

The Stars Say—

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Sunday, August 6

SUNDAY'S HOROSCOPE holds testimony of much stirring about, with matters pertaining to travel, entertainment or intellectual pursuits under particularly exciting stimuli. Much might be accomplished under this rule providing there be not too much tempest and turmoil. Subdue the impulses and be advised by elders or those of cool judgment, as reckless conclusions menace.

Those whose birthday it is are confronted by opportunity for productive and progressive achievements, particularly in new matters and in all pertaining to writings, publicity or commercial promotions. Be advised by older heads. Some changes are beneficial.

A child born on this day will have outstanding talents and versatility, with much originality and initiative. But tendencies to reckless and over aggressive conduct may prove detrimental unless given early discipline.

For Monday, August 7

MONDAY'S astrological forecast is for an exceedingly lively and ambitious state of affairs, with old and stagnant matters under indomitable urges to movement by grim effort and persistency. These combine to give stability to important ambitions, with those of prestige and standing ready to help on demand. Seek this friendly support but be alert to doubtful schemes.

Those whose birthday it is are assured a year of great activity, with much moving toward high achievements in ambitious personal and business aims, with those in power ready to assist in giving stability and place, where industry, fidelity and perseverance merit.

A child born on this day, while having many sterling qualities and sound ambitions, may be stubborn, overbearing and hypercritical, thus arousing opposition to its business success and inharmony in it private affiliations.

AGREEMENT MADE TO SETTLE STRIKE

C.I.O. Board Urges Employees to Accept Terms Offered by Company

Detroit, Aug. 5 (AP)—An agreement to settle the walkout of General Motors' skilled workers went before the strikers themselves today for approval or rejection.

It bore the endorsement of the Executive Board of the C. I. O. United Automobile Workers, which urged the strikers to accept the terms. The Board and delegates from each of the 12 plants where 7,500 employees walked out a month ago approved the agreement last night.

Ratification by the Union members was expected, with the likelihood it would be initialled tonight by the Union and the Corporation and the men would begin returning to work Monday.

Terms of the agreement were not announced but James Dewey, Federa Labor conciliator who composed the differences between General Motors and the U.A.W.-C.I.O., said it would be written memoraneum and not a contract.

COPIES OF MAGAZINES SEIZED

Montreal, Aug. 5 (CP)—Police said tonight that more than 500 copies each of the United States magazines "Look" and "Coronet" were seized yesterday by officers operating under instructions from Alderman J. M. Savignac, chairman of Montreal's executive committee. Savignac described the covers as "positively indecent."

Morality squad officers said seizure of "Look" resulted from an article in the magazine on birth control by Margaret Sangster, prominent advocate of birth control.

United States Consul-General Clarence Spiker in Hankow protested to the Japanese Consulate General against anti-Americanism in Kaifeng. Latest reports listed about 20 American missionaries in the Honan Province city.

Besides their own work, the missionaries have been caring for British and Canadian missions since British subjects were compelled to take flight from Kaifeng lat month.

Attack Property

Unconfirmed reports said demonstrators also had attacked property of the Sochow mission of the Reformed Church in the United States.

(A Chinese official central news agency report at Hong Kong said the mission buildings were wrecked at Yochow and the missionaries driven away. The report mentioned both American and British missionaries but it was believed in Hong Kong there were no longer any Britons at Wochow.)

May Refuse Permits

Japanese Consulates were reported intending to refuse further permits to Americans to travel in Japanese-occupied areas in retaliation for the United States' abrogation of the 1911 trade treaty.

Japanese newspapers said a British protest against the sacking of the Tientsin offices of the British International Export Corporation had been rejected.

The Japanese command was said to have replied it was a mistake to protest to the Japanese over a spontaneous movement by the Chinese masses for which the Japanese were not responsible.

Britons said that a mob of Chinese, which smashed all movable equipment in the office and threw it into the Hai River, was Japanese-instigated.

RUNAWAY

Grabbed For Gun

Yesterday Cohen entered a washroom in a building where Nugent had just taken $22 from Charles Getzel. Cohen gave Nugent some small change in his pockets, then grabbed suddenly for Nugent's gun. Nugent stepped back and fired three times, two of the bullets going wild.

Panic-stricken, he fled to the office of Dr. A. M. Mulholland, where his girl friend, Elizabeth Collins, 18, worked as a receptionist. Shaking with fear, he told her of the holdups and babbled:

"It's the first time I've seen blood."

Nugent tried to pull the gun from his pocket but it accidentally discharged in his fumbling fingers. The bullet ripped through the girl's jaw. She dropped, seriously wounded.

Doubly terrified, the youth ran from the office but was pursued and captured by passers-by and police before he reached the corner. Led away, he said wearily:

"I'm glad it's all over."

WEST AMATEUR IS TITLE HOLDER

First Time in 17 Years an Amateur Has Won Canadian Open

Burlington, Ont., Aug. 5—(CP) —The Ontario Open Golf Championship, for the first time in its seventeen year history, was held today by an amateur and a westerner, Edmonton's Henry Martell, who's been burning up the courses since he came east a few weeks ago.

Martell, runner-up in the Canadian amateur at St. Bruno, Que., last week, put together a first-round 72 and a sparkling three-under-par 69 in yesterday's second round for a 36-hole total of 141 to lead the record-breaking field of 124. He won the tournament's gold medal and the new General Motors Trophy.

The tournament's first-prize money went to Herb Samways of London, Ont., and Reg Sansome of Toronto, tied for second place with scores of 143. Samways and Sansome each received $87.50 and will play off for the Silver Medal at Hamilton next Wednesday.

Behind Martell were some of Canada's best professionals and amateurs, among them Ottawa's Bobby Olston who had held the title for the past two years. Alston took 74 in Thursday's first round and did worse yesterday, scoring a 78 for a total of 152. Four strokes back was C. R. (Sandy) Somerville of London, former Canadian and United States amateur titlist who had been among the pre-tournament favorites.

Sports Roundup

(By Eddie Brietz)

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, Aug. 5—(AP) —Just suppose the Yanks could be had for seven or eight millions, who'd be interested? . . . Al Munro Elios, the baseball statistician, was buried with a copy of the National League averages in his pocket . . . Henry Armstrong must be slipping, at that —he lost the dart shooting championship at Pompton Lakes to a 12-year old Harlem boy yesterday. . .

The Giants, who had the inside track, have lost interest in young Dominic DiMaggio . . . The National Baseball League seems to be the place where Medwick doesn't speak to Blades and French speaks only to Wrigley . . . .

The Michigan Boxing Commish is on record that a Michigan man will referee Pastor vs Louis . . . . Denny Shute gave Corn Belt golfers something to talk about this week by breaking course records at Kansas City and Des Moines on consecutive days . . . Man Mountain Dean will come out of retirement to play the part of the cop in Atlanta's cavalcade of baseball.

Mercer Beasley, the tennis coach, says if the Australians had seen Bobby Riggs play at Southampton Thursday they would have hoisted a few to celebrate the future winning of the Davis Cup . .. Greyhound and Rosalind, the 1935 and 1935 Hambletonian winners, tangled in a "shooting match" at Goshen late Thursday and Rosalind clipped off the mile in 1.59 1-4 to beat Greyhound by a head. . .

Coach Steve Owens left today to open the pro football Giants' training camp at Superior, Wis. . . He has given Mel Hein six-time all-pro centre, until Tuesday to sign or go on the retired list . . . Wonder if the Messrs. Ambers and Armstrong are listening to what some of the sports casters are saying about their August 22 lightweight fight these evenings?

Produce Markets Still Dull

Toronto, Aug. 5—Butter, eggs, and cheese closed the week on an easier note yesterday on the Toronto open produce market, according to the Dominion Department of Agriculture. Trading in all lines was light.

Buyers displayed little or no interest in butter offerings, and while supplies were light, demand was too slow to keep them moving. In the afternoon, the market dragged almost to a standstill, and No. 1 creamery solids eased to 21¾c a pound. No sale of Western butter was reported.

Although firm during the week, the egg market was inclined to easiness at the close yesterday. Demand diminished as the weather grew warmer. Heavier receipts yesterday also helped to weaken the market. Trading was light, with buyers showing caution. In the graded section, A-large sold at 27c, A-medium at 26c, B-grades at 18c, and C at 14c.

Cheese prices declined slightly on a quiet market. Wholesalers bought new, large paraffined current make at 11½c.

Montreal Eggs Steady

Montreal, Aug. 5 — Eggs and butter were steady and quiet on open produce markets here yesterday, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported. Quebec No. 2 potatoes lost yesterday's gain of 5 cents, while Quebec No. 1 held unchanged. Cheese again leaned toward the easy side.

Creamery butter prints to retailers sold for 22½-23 cents a pound and solids for 22-22½c. Western butter delivered in Montreal was unquoted. Quebec No. 1 pasteurized in wholesale jobbing lots made 21½. Receipts, 10 boxes.

Ontario white and colored cheese were both quoted at 11½. Quebec white was quoted at 10⅝ and colored at 10¾. Receipts, 2233 boxes.

Graded egg shipments in used free cases sold at 28-29 cents a dozen for A-large, 26-27 for A-medium, 20 for A-pullets, 19½ for B-large, 15 for C. Receipts, 729 cases.

Market Grain Through Live Stock Channel

Another crop is in the process of being harvested and again all farmers will be feeding home grown grain to their hogs. The prevailing low prices for grain particularly wheat will encourage the practice of marketing grain through the channel of live stock.

An excessive amount of wheat in the ration will produce over-finished carcasses, which will be a disappointment to the farmer. Wheat should not constitute more than 70 per cent of the finishing ration.

Some good lots of hogs received during the week of Aug. 4, 1939, are as follows:

TORONTO STOCKS CLOSE

Toronto, Aug. 5 (CP)—Bids were stronger than on Friday in today's two-hour session but turnover was decidedly small with only about 125,000 shares changing hands. Both mining share indices marked up narrow gains while the industrial and western oil indicators of price adjustments showed practically no change over night. The exchange will remain closed on Monday — (Civic Holiday).

Gains of 2 to 5 cents were showing at the close for Central Patricia, East Malartic, Toburn, Lamaque. Aunor and Preston and among the penny issues the tone was stronger for Francoeur, Naybob, Gold Eagle and Lapa Cadillac. Pamour dipped to 215 and recovered.

International Nickel firmed a half point and minor gains were netted by Normetal, Aldermac and Sherritt. Noranda was unchanged to slightly higher. Silvers held unchanged.

Industrials staged a dull session with the foods showing strength in spots and the steels, utilities and building shares general firmness. Canadian Car pfd. dropped a point and B.C. Packers added 2⅝. Bell Telephone recovered ½ and Brazilian lost ¼.

The extended week-end closedown was undoubtedly a factor in trimming the volume of business, many customers and brokers having departed for summer resorts for a three day relaxtion. Gold shares received the main attention in the thin demand and a few of the secondary and junior issues firmed narrowly.

Trading will be resumed on Tuesday.

WALL ST. CLOSE

New York, Aug. 5 (AP)—Selling dried up in today's Stock Market and, under the leadership of Steels selected issues regained fractions to around a point of Friday's losses.

While the move back lacked vitality—the turnover for the two hours was in the neighborhood of 250,000 shares—recovery forces inclined to interpret it as a sign yesterday's tumble was more of a technical happening than a real reversal of trend.

Settlement of the General Motors' strike and a contra-seasonal bulge in July sales of new cars kept stocks in this division moderately firm during the greater part of the proceedings.

Some coppers achieved a following on word Japan had placed orders in the United States for between 2,000 and 3,000 tons of the metal at prices of 10.77 to 10.75 cents a pound, or a shade better than the recent export rate.

Prominent shares on the upside at one time or another were U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors, U.S. Rubber, J.I. Case, American Telephone, Kennecott, Phelps Dodge, J.C. Penney, U.S. Gypsum, Loft, Great Northern, Douglas Aircraft and Glenn Martin.

Hears of Possible Jap-Soviet Clash

Paris, Aug. 5 (CP-Havas)—Genevieve Tabouis, Foreign Affairs Commentato for L'Oeuvre (Radical-Socialist) reported today that Chancellor Hitler had been advised by his ambassador at Tokyo that Japan plans to go to war against Soviet Russia within the next five or six weeks.

The information was contained in a note addressed to the Fuehrer Wednesday by Major General Eugen Ott, the German Envoy, according to Mme. Tabouis.

"The note says further that since Tuesday Japan has been mobilizing its reservists and is proceeding to ship the necessary munitions to the Manchoukuo-Russian border," she wrote.

Upon receipt of the note, Mme. Tabouis said, Hitler sent Japan several hundred pilots, air mechanics and radio operators. The Fuehrer demanded conclusion of Italo-German negotiations as to the number of planes Premier Mussolini would send to Japan, she reported.

ROBLIN—Rev. E. N. Grant and Mrs. Grant and boys of Wellington were dinner hour guests of Mr. and Mrs. William Gillespie on Tuesday.

Donald, Walter and Clare Chisholm left on Friday for New York and the World's Fair. While in the city they will be guests of their aunt, Miss Clara Delyea.

Rev. F. C. Beazer is spending his vacation at Macdonald College in Quebec.

Rev. D. C. Hill and Mrs. Hill and family of Exeter were recent visitors in this district. Rev. Mr. Hill assisted with the service in the Presbyterian Church on Sunday.

Miss Annie Stirk of Ottawa and Mrs. Ledlow of Brampton are visiting Mrs. Stirk.

Mr. W. Wannamaker has started threshing in this neighborhood.

EXTREMES MEET IN EQUINE WORLD

He may be much smaller, but "Midget", smallest thoroughbred Percheron stallion in the world, is not overawed by Marceau, who is the biggest, as they meet at Venice, Calif. Midget is 36 inches high and weighs 220 pounds. He has sired eight colts, some of which weighed 1000. Marceau, grand champion Percheron, weighs 2,100 pounds. Both horses will be shown at the National Percheron show in St. Paul, Minn.

EXPEDITION SURVIVORS LUCKY TO BE ALIVE.

Attempting to sail the northwest passage around North America, the Cruiser Pandora under the command of Dr. Homer Kellems was wrecked at Cape St. Elias. The members of the expedition are shown here in the crude camp they made while waiting to be rescued. Coastguardsmen discovered their plight and took them back to Seattle from whence they commenced their adventurous voyage.

"MISS VENUS" — 1939 STYLE

Eighteen-year-old Grace Reilly, of Brooklyn, is pictured holding the winner's cup, after she took top honors in the annual modern venus contest held at Steeplechase Park, Coney Island. The judges were unanimous in their decision.

WARRIORS OF PEACE INVADING ENGLAND

Six high-ranking officers of the Salvation Army are shown aboard the S.S. Aquitania just before they sailed from New York to attend the high council of the army in London. They will help elect a successor to General Evangeline Booth who has reached retirement age. LEFT to RIGHT here: Commander Edward J. Parker, of New York, national secretary; Commander Alec M. TORONTO STOCKS CLOSE

Toronto, Aug. 5 (CP)—Bids were stronger than on Friday in today's two-hour session but turnover was decidedly small with only about 125,000 shares changing hands. Both mining share indices marked up narrow gains while the industrial and western oil indicators of price adjustments showed practically no change over night. The exchange will remain closed on Monday — (Civic Holiday).

Gains of 2 to 5 cents were showing at the close for Central Patricia, East Malartic, Toburn, Lamaque, Aunor and Preston and among the penny issues the tone was stronger for Francoeur, Naybob, Gold Eagle and Lapa Cadillac. Pamour dipped to 215 and recovered.

International Nickel firmed a half point and minor gains were netted by Normetal, Aldermac and Sherritt. Noranda was unchanged to slightly higher. Silvers held unchanged.

Industrials staged a dull session with the foods showing strength in spots and the steels, utilities and building shares general firmness. Canadian Car pfd. dropped a point and B.C. Packers added 2⅝. Bell Telephone recovered ½ and Brazilian lost ¼.

The extended week-end close-down was undoubtedly a factor in trimming the volume of business, many customers and brokers having departed for summer resorts for a three day relaxtion. Gold shares received the main attention in the thin demand and a few of the secondary and junior issues firmed narrowly.

Trading will be resumed on Tuesday.

WALL ST. CLOSE

New York, Aug. 5 (AP)—Selling dried up in today's Stock Market and, under the leadership of Steels selected issues regained fractions to around a point of Friday's losses.

While the move back lacked vitality—the turnover for the two hours was in the neighborhood of 250,000 shares—recovery forces inclined to interpret it as a sign yesterday's tumble was more of a technical happening than a real reversal of trend.

Settlement of the General Motors' strike and a contra-seasonal bulge in July sales of new cars kept stocks in this division moderately firm during the greater part of the proceedings.

Some coppers achieved a following on word Japan had placed orders in the United States for between 2,000 and 3,000 tons of the metal at prices of 10.77 to 10.75 cents a pound, or a shade better than the recent export rate.

Prominent shares on the upside at one time or another were U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors, U.S. Rubber, J.I. Case, American Telephone, Kennecott, Phelps Dodge, J.C. Penney, U.S. Gypsum, Loft, Great Northern, Douglas Aircraft and Glenn Martin.

Hears of Possible Jap-Soviet Clash

Paris, Aug. 5 (CP-Havas)—Genevieve Tabouis, Foreign Affairs Commentato for L'Oeuvre (Radical-Socialist) reported today that Chancellor Hitler had been advised by his ambassador at Tokyo that Japan plans to go to war against Soviet Russia within the next five or six weeks.

The information was contained in a note addressed to the Fuehrer Wednesday by Major General Eugen Ott, the German Envoy, according to Mme. Tabouis.

"The note says further that since Tuesday Japan has been mobilizing its reservists and is proceeding to ship the necessary munitions to the Manchoukuo-Russian border," she wrote.

Upon receipt of the note, Mme. Tabouis said, Hitler sent Japan several hundred pilots, air mechanics and radio operators. The Fuehrer demanded conclusion of Italo-German negotiations as to the number of planes Premier Mussolini would send to Japan, she reported.

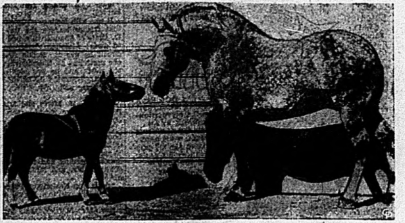
EXTREMES MEET IN EQUINE WORLD



He may be much smaller, but "Midget", smallest thoroughbred Percheron stallion in the world, is not overawed by Marceau, who is the biggest, as they meet at Venice, Calif. Midget is 36 inches high and weighs 220 pounds. He has sired eight colts, some of which weighed 1000. Marceau, grand champion Percheron, weighs 2,100 pounds. Both horses will be shown at the National Percheron show in St. Paul, Minn.

EXPEDITION SURVIVORS LUCKY TO BE ALIVE.

Attempting to sail the northwest passage around North America, the Cruiser Pandora under the command of Dr. Homer Kellems was wrecked at Cape St. Elias. The members of the expedition are shown here in the crude camp they made while waiting to be rescued. Coastguardsmen discovered their plight and took them back to Seattle from whence they commenced their adventurous voyage.

"MISS VENUS" — 1939 STYLE

Eighteen-year-old Grace Reilly, of Brooklyn, is pictured holding the winner's cup, after she took top honors in the annual modern venus contest held at Steeplechase Park, Coney Island. The judges were unanimous in their decision.

WARRIORS OF PEACE INVADING ENGLAND

Six high-ranking officers of the Salvation Army are shown aboard the S.S. Aquitania just before they sailed from New York to attend the high council of the army in London. They will help elect a successor to General Evangeline Booth who has reached retirement age. LEFT to RIGHT here: Commander Edward J. Parker, of New York, national secretary; Commander Alec M. Damon, New York; Commander George L. Carrpenter, Toronto, Canada; Commander Benjamin Orames, San Francisco, and Commander William C. Arnold, Atlanta, Ga.

MOON ON THE WATER

by Ruby M. Ayres

"I think it's just coming," Jane told her.

Dulcie gave a little scream. "Look at your muddy shoes"

Jane glanced downwards. "Yes: I came through the fields by the stream," she said, and wondered whether Gavin would remember that walk, or whether to him it had not been worth remembering.

"I've been telling Gavin that Josh wants to take you to a show," Dulcie said.

She looked across at Gavin with a mischievous smile. "He hasn't shown any signs of raving jealousy—but he's probably keeping it all in reserve for you."

"Why should I show signs of raving jealousy?" Gavin asked a little irritably.

Dulcie shrugged her shoulders. "Aren't people jealous — when they're in love?"

He did not answer, but in her heart Jane answered for him: "I'm not in love."

For she knew that was the truth: she knew that he was probably far happier talking nonsense to Dulcie than he was when he was with her.

Tea came and Jane poured out.

"You've spilt the milk," Dulcie said. 'Jane always spills things," she told Gavin. "Years ago, if anything got broken in the house, mother used to say, 'Of course, that's Jane,' and it generally was."

Jane suddenly turned on her sister. "At any rate," she said in a stifled voice, "when you want anything done, you know who to come to."

"What a nasty little temper," Dulcie said serenely.

She stretched out a slim hand. "Give me that pink cake, please—I see it's the only one, and nobody else can have it."

There was an uncomfortable silence when Jane suddenly snatched up the little cake and flung it with all her force into the fire.

"Get it if you want it," she said passionately.

"Well!" Dulcie said blankly.

Gavin flushed and groped in his jacket pocket for a cigarette.

"Will you smoke, Jane?" he asked.

"No, thank you."

"I will," Dulcie said; she leaned towards him for a light, her fair head very close to him. "Nice cigarettes," she said.

"Aren't they the same as those Gavin gave you the other night?" Jane asked.

"Are they? Yes, I believe they are," Dulcie answered, and she and Gavin exchanged smiles.

Mary came to the door. "You're wanted on the telephone, Miss Dulcie."

The girl sprang to her feet. "I expect it's Josh," she said, and the door closed behind her.

"Will you have some more tea?" Jane asked.

"No, thanks." Gavin rose, put his cup down on the table beside her, and then said, gently, "Isn't—all this—rather foolish, my dear?"

The unexpected kindness in his voice brought the tears to Jane's eyes and forced the passionate admission from her lips. "I hate her. She aways makes fun of me—I hate her. Why can't she leave me alone—and you, too. She's got her own friends."

She dashed a shaking hand across her eyes.

"I'm sorry," she said at last. "I suppose I behaved like a fool. Are you very angry with me?"

"I'm only sorry," Gavin said.

"Sorry?" She looked up at him, her lips quivering. "Sorry for me?" she asked.

"Sorry, because I know you're not happy," he answered, and then after a moment, "I warned you, Jane, didn't I? I told you that you were making a bad bargain."

She gave a hard little laugh. "I shan't keep you to the bargain if you want to be free," she said.

Dulcie came back.

"It wasn't Josh—it was Mary Lawson. She wants me to go to a dance in town on Saturday night, and she wants me to take a man."

"Take Gavin," Jane said, and instantly she felt as if she could cut out her tongue. Why had she given Dulcie the satisfaction of seeing that she was jealous? Why had life suddenly become such an ugly, twisted affair? What was the matter with her that this dreadful hatred of her sister should have arisen in her heart?

"I'm the world's worst dancer," Gavin said calmly. "And I haven't a dress suit to my name." He glanced at his wrist watch. "Well, I think I must be off. I've some letters to write."

When the two girls were alone, Dulcie sat down on the arm of the big chair he had just left and looked at her sister.

"You must be the world's prize idiot," she said. "Don't you know that men hate scenes and jealousy? Can you wonder that he didn't want to stay?"

And Jane answered bitterly, though it was the last thing she intended to say, "No doubt he'd have stayed if you had asked him."

Dulcie laughed. "Are you jealous? Of me?" she demanded. "Don't be so silly, Jane. He's not my sort at all. I like him all right—just to talk to—and I think he's very good-looking, but as to anything more——My dear, I shouldn't care if I never saw him again."

Jane clasped her hands fiercely together in her lap.

"You've always wanted other people's property—all your life," she said tremulously. "You've never cared tuppence how much you hurt any one, or—or——you've never cared for any one but yourself, and I don't believe you when you say that you don't like Gavin— I don't believe you. And it's only because I'm engaged to him that you want to show him how attractive you are—you want all the attention and —and——" Her voice failed.

Dulcie threw her cigarette into the fire.

"If I want a man," she said with deadly calm, "I get him, and nothing will stop me, but I don't happen to want your precious Gavin—at any rate not at the moment, so there's no need to look like a tragedy queen." And then suddenly she laughed. "What a silly scene," she said lightly. "I don't wonder Gavin discovered that he had letters to write." And she walked out of the room humming a little snatch of a song.

Jane sat very still, her eyes bent on her clasped hands, and then all at once a scared little thought arose in her heart.

"And—supposing I don't want him back?"

Wouldn't it be better—to let him go before the pain of uncertainty grew too unbearable? Wouldn't it be better to cut him out of her life before things got more impossible?

Was that what he wanted? Was that what he was trying to force her to do? That delay in the partnership—had that been purposely engineered because he knew that once it was settled she would expect him to marry her?

A sudden stifled scream broke the silence, and Jane started and raised her head, her color fading.

And then it came again—followed by running feet, and then before she could move, the bursting open of the door beneath Pamela's agitated hand.

"Jane! Jane! Father! Oh, come quickly—he's lying on the floor—and he won't answer when I speak to him—oh, come quickly!"

Jane rushed from the room to her father's study; it seemed that she could not think or breathe as she fell on her knees beside his still figure. Dulcie was there, too, and Mary, and Pamela, her usual calm all gone, sobbing passionately.

And then at last Jane took away the hand she had laid above her father's heart—and raised her eyes to Pamela's face.

"He's——dead," she said stiffly.

An ardent fisherman friend informs that maskinonge are cannibalistic inclined and will eat one another. He stated that if a half dozen maskinonge are placed in a tank, one by one the younger lunge will disappear until only one remains....the survival of the fittest. Then it is learned that in stocking a lake or stream, care must be taken to ascertain if the lake or stream is inhabited by trout, or bass, or pike, or pickerel or what have you, so that fry, fingerlings or yearlings put in, will receive a friendly welcome instead of a cannibalistic one. For game fish eat one another with gusto, and without; and whether there are pepper and salt available or not.

KING GEORGE REVIEWS BRITISH RESERVE FLEET

Germany Indexes Civilian Power of Young and Old

'Last Drop of Efficiency Squeezed Out of Nation' Says Nazi Official—Peak of Preparedness Will be Established by Mid-August

REGISTER OF 'TALENT'

Only Soldiers, Reservists and Children Under Five Years and Persons Over Seventy Excluded in Gigantic Card Index

Berlin, Aug. 9—(CP)—Germany today directed a comprehensive survey of her civilian power—men, women and children—to meet any emergency which may involve the Reich in the critical days ahead.

While the program to establish a peak of preparedness by mid August was stepped up, a gigantic card index of special talents of Germans was being prepared for the new civilian registration ordered last night for next week.

Only soldiers, reservists and persons less than five years old and more than 70 were excluded in the orders for a vast survey of the abilities and capacities of Germans.

"We are squeezing the last drop of efficiency out of a nation which already has attained an impressive degree of all round competence," one official commented.

Campaign Against Poland

"Should there be an emergency calling on the Reich to exert itself to the utmost, every German man, woman and child will be at the post where he or she can perform the most effective service."

The "registration of talents" was one of a series of preparatory measures being taken. A press campaign against Poland continued, consumption of gasoline was restricted, and German pride and sense of security was being stimulated by a country-wide showing of movies of the Siegfried line of fortifications on the western frontier.

Why the Weather !

Summer floods! Floods are normally expected in spring, late winter, or even in early summer in those regions whose rivers are fed by the melting of snow on high mountains. The summer flood is not a normal phenomenon; it is sometimes called a "flash flood", and may occur almost anytime in the summer. The cause is a fall of excessive rain, not for an hour, but for 24 or 48 hours. An instance was on July 7-8, 1935, when 7.90 inches of rain fell near Ithaca, N.Y. Under such circumstances the rise of creeks and rivers, whose flow is ordinarily insignificant, is so sudden that precautionary measures can not be taken.

Boat Capsizes Crew Reach Shore

Point Anne, Aug. 9.—While enjoying the other evening a sail in a boat owned by Austin Brant, Ken Butler and Roy Coxan had the misfortune to capsize when a squall of wind caught them. The boys drifted and finally managed to make their way to the Big Island shore, where on locating a telephone they got in touch with Mrs. W. Coxan and son Jack, of Belleville, who motored to Big Island and brought them home.

TWEEDSMUIRS VISIT PORT ON HUDSON BAY

Inspect Historic Fort Prince of Wales, See Cannon Never Used

VISIT SUPPLY SHIP

Churchill, Man., Aug. 9—(CP)—Lord and Lady Tweedsmuir are en route to Prince Albert, Sask., following a visit to this Hudson Bay port where they were reunited with their son, Hon. John Buchan, who returned aboard the supply ship Nascopie after a year in the Arctic in the Hudson's Bay Company's employ.

The vice-regal party reached here Sunday, the day of the Nascopie's arrival, and Their Excellencies left yesterday, accompanied by John and their other son, Alastair.

On Monday the party visited historic Fort Prince of Wales and expressed keen interest in the ancient buildings and the cannon that were intended for protection of the old fort but actually were never used.

The large government elevator, where grain from the prairies was being handled, was inspected. The party followed with interest the handling of the grain entirely by machinery.

On Board Ship For Tea

The party went aboard the Nascopie for afternoon tea as guests of Captain Thomas F. Smellie, veteran sailor of the Arctic and North Atlantic.

Falls Into River Obeys Scout's Order And Is Rescued

Meaford, Ont, Aug. 9—(CP)—Keith Wilson, seven-year-old Meaford boy, escaped drowning yesterday by obeying instructions of Joe Carter, 14-year-old Boy Scout.

Wilson fell into Big Head river after stumbling off a dam and Carter shouted to him to keep kicking. The boy thrashed about in the water until Carter reached him and both were pulled out, fully clothed by fishermen who rushed to the scene.

'Pen' Convict Atop 125-Foot Stack Sits Out Storm, Mysteriously Descends

Kingston, Ont., Aug. 9 (CP)—Sitdown strike of a Kingston penitentiary convict atop a 125-foot smokestack ended mysteriously today as dawn broke and the unidentified prisoner was absent from his precarious perch. Officials would not offer an explanation on when or how the man came down.

Warden Allen squelched a rumor the convict, believed to be a French-Canadian serving a 2-year term, had fallen. The warden said he was all right physically but would offer no further information.

It is believed the convict, who climbed the chimney late yesterday and refused to descend unless he was returned to a Montreal penitentiary whence he was transferred a few weeks ago, might have descended during an exceptionally heavy rain and wind storm that swept the area.

The convict threatened last night that he would jump if any of the guards gathered on the ground around the base of the big stack should attempt to scale the smokestack.

Floodlights were played on the figure during the night and guards shouted to the convict, who refused to yield to their demands he descend.

Penitentiary officials refused to state if the convict would be granted his demand to be returned to St. Vincent de Paul Penitentiary near Montreal, nor would they give his name or other details. All information, they said, must come from the Department of Justice in Ottawa.

The convict was reported to have slipped away from the gang he was working with at the powerhouse yesterday and started to climb up the side of the chimney. Apparently he climbed the small iron rungs to his high perch before he was missed.

When the alarm was sounded that he was missing, the smoke-stack sitter obviously enjoyed the search carried out for him before his position was spotted. He was easily seen from outside the high prison walls and his shouted conversations with the guards also could be heard.

Guards settled down at the base of the stack, figuring hunger and thirst probably soon would end the one-man strike. But the convict calmly produced sandwiches and a bottle of water which was a supply apparently large enough to tide him over a lengthy stay atop the stack.

EVERY 'EASTLAND' RAIDER SPOTTED IN MOCK BATTLE

1300 Airplanes Engaged in Manoeuvres Over England

ONE BOMBER FALLS

Half of England Will be in 'Blackout' Thursday During Air Manoeuvres

London, Aug. 9—(CP)— New waves of fighting craft took to the skies at dawn today to test the striking power and defensive ability of Great Britain's air force as King George arrived in Weymouth to inspect a concentration of 133 warships of the reserve fleet.

The high point of the manoeuvres—a gigantic blackout of half of England—was scheduled for tonight but was postponed for 2b hours due to heavy overhanging clouds. The blackout area includes London and estimates are that it will involve some 200,000 air raid precautions personnel, it was announced later in the day.

As the large-scale aerial manoeuvres entered their second day two destroyers, aided by launches, searched the Essex coast in a hunt for a plane reported missing and officials checked details of a crash in which a bomber fell with a loss of four men.

1300 Planes in 'Action'

The bomber—one of the 1,300 planes participating in the war games—fell and burned in a field near Tollerton, Yorkshire, early this morning.

Another bomber was landed with damage only to the undercarriage after Flight Sergeant R. McGregor ordered his four companions to jump with their parachutes and brought the big plane down himself.

Boat On Trailer Catches Fire Damage Is Slight

Point Anne (Special)—Mr. and Mrs. Allen Insley and Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Allore and daughter Marlene of Trenton, spent Saturday at the home of Mr. William Insley. Mr. Allore was towing a trailer holding a rowboat and on the way from Trenton in some unknown manner a small bunch of waste lying in the stern of the boat caught fire. The boat was scorched but no serious damage was done. It is thought that a cigarette thrown from a passing car might have caused the blaze.

PROVINCIAL OFFICIAL DIES

Toronto, Aug. 9—(CP)—Francis Lee Morton, 48, assistant solicitor of the Ontario Treasury Department, died here yesterday. MEDAL CAST IN GOLD FOR PREMIER

When 3,500 prominent Liberals sat down to dinner at the Royal York hotel in Toronto honoring Premier William L. Mackenzie King's 20 years of leadership of the Liberal party, each found attached to his menu card a bronze replica of the medal shown here. Cast in gold, another copy was presented to Mr. King. His picture is flanked by that of his famed grandfather, William Lyon Mackenzie, and the

2-PARTY RULE BEST

Mr. King Will Continue to Serve Canada to Best of Ability

By C. R. BLACKBURN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Toronto, Aug. 9—(CP)— Party leaders and supporters dispersed today after Liberalism's biggest banquet in Canada, as much in the dark as ever about the general election plans of Prime Minister Mackenzie King in whose honor they assembled.

Nearly 4,000 members of the party, including federal cabinet ministers, Provincial Premiers, members of parliament and various legislatures, crowded all available dining space in the Royal York Hotel last night at a banquet marking the 20th anniversary of Mr. Mackenzie King's selection as national leader.

It was an unprecedented tribute to the Prime Minister, praised for his contribution to Canada's welfare in more than 20 speeches by Liberal leaders from Charlottetown to Victoria. He heard many expressions of unbounded faith in the future of the Liberal party and its success at the polls when the general election is called.

Will Be No War Unless Hitler Makes War

London, Aug. 9 —(AP) —Winston Churchill said in a broadcast to North America yesterday that "If Herr Hitler does not make war, there will be no war."

"No one has ever dreamed of attacking Germany," the wartime First Lord of the Admiralty said.

"If Germany desires to be reassured against attack by her neighbors she has only to say the word and we will give her the fullest guarantees in accordance with the covenant of the League of Nations."

Auto Slides on Moss Into Deep Water

Point Anne—What might have been a serious accident happened when Mr. Nelson Burshaw took his car to the Bay behind Plant 4 to wash it. Mr. Burshaw blocked the wheels with a large boulder but the moss on the stones in the water made everything slippery and the car gradually ran into deeper water over the headlights. Mr. Burshaw was in front of the car and was nearly knocked down by the car. Mr. Dick Campbell of Belleville happened to be parked on the shore and hooked a chain onto Mr. Burshaw's car and hauled it to shore.

Dublin, Aug. 9—(CP Cable) — John Hearne, Eire's newly-appointed High Commissioner to Canada, left last night for Liverpool accompanied by Mrs. Hearne. They will sail from Liverpool for the Dominion next Wednesday.

WORLD TRADE IN WHEAT DOWN TO 40 PER CENT

Granaries Bulge With Grain and Production Tends to Increase

ECONOMIC MEASURES

By OVID A. MARTIN

Washington, Aug. 9 (AP)—A wide assortment of economic measures is being employed by the United States government to keep the full impact of a record world supply of wheat from making itself felt on domestic prices

Granaries throughout the world are bulging with grain and there is no ready market. Nations which once imported large quantities of the grain have stepped up their production. Power machinery has increased production in the agricultural countries.

As a consequence, world trade in wheat has shrunk almost 40 per cent since the Great War. Production, on the other hand, has tended to increase.

Prices Lowest.

Prices in Liverpool have slumped this season to the lowest level in modern times. Recent quotations have been about 55 cents a bushel. Under normal market relationships, the price in Chicago would be between 35 and 40 cents, and on the farm in the wheat belt 30 cents or less. Such prices have been described by farmers as "ruinous".

Chicago prices have been running about 10 cents above the Liverpool market. Economists explain that factors helping maintain American prices include governmental policies of price-pegging and supply control.

The governmental policy of making loans to growers on their wheat at rates above world levels tends, they say, to put a prop under those prices Thus, at the present time, many farmers are able to get more money for their wheat by storing it and obtaining a government loan than by selling in the open market.

Controlled Production.

The government also has sought to improve prices by controlling production. Because farmers produced a bumper crop last year, the government asked them to grow less this year. They responded by planting about 20 per cent less and producing a crop expected just about to equal the country's needs during the season ahead.

In another effort to reduce surplus supplies the government has been paying exporters a bounty on wheat sold abroad. The bounty was necessary because American prices were above those prevailing in foreign markets. During the past season, 118,000,000 bushels were exported under the subsidy program at a cost of about $28,000,000.

FIRE SWEEPS TWO FARMS

Apple Hill, Ont., Aug. 9—(CP)—Fire destroyed two barns, a garage, two horses and some poultry here last night. Damage was estimated at $5,000.

The fire started in the barn of Charles Benton and spread to buildings owned by Treffle Bayor. A heavy rainfall aided in putting out the fire.

DRENCHING RAIN HALTS SERVICES, FLOODS HOMES

Water Spouts Six Feet High from Flooded Sewers in Toronto

Toronto, Aug. 9 — (CP) —Toronto recovered today after a heavy rain last night halted street cars and motor cars, disrupted telephone and gas company services and forced scores of persons to flee from flooded homes.

Motorists were stranded in many parts of Toronto as water flooded subways. Even the lifesaving service received calls when motorists were trapped on top of their automobiles and the water kept rising.

More than a dozen street cars were lined up in one section of the city and cars had to be re-routed to avoid flooded subways.

Firemen rescued many persons from the second storey of their homes in low-lying sections as the two-hour storm brought 1,65 inches of rain.

Rain was general throughout the province, aiding crops and pasture. Damage caused by the storm amounted to $20,000 in Hamilton.

Fear For Sidewalks and Streets

The excavation for the Bank of Montreal building in Toronto was filled with water. The water ate away the sides of the excavation. Police fearing the sidewalks and perhaps even the streets at the corner of Bay ~~and King~~ might collapse kept traffic away from the district for more than an hour.

Today engineers examined the excavation and banned westbound street cars along the King Street line, the side close to the excavation, and banned street cars at that section of Bay Street.

Low-lying portions of the city were transformed into swimming pools and children in the old Weston Road district, in north Toronto, were diving from their balconies into the water.

The storm gave city Hydro men one of the busiest nights of their history. Power was cut off to the Royal York Hotel where a dominion-wide banquet was underway in honor of Prime Minister Mackenzie King. The hotel used its own steam power plant for power.

LIGHTING STRIKES CHURCH STEEPLE

Steeple Will be Taken Down at Sebringville Because of Damage

Stratford, Ont., Aug. 9—(CP)—A violent electrical storm which struck the district of West Stratford last night resulted in extensive damage. Lightning was responsible for a fire in the steeple of the Evangelical church at Sebringville and for the destruction by fire of a barn in Hibbert township owned yb Joe Hickey.

It was announced that the steeple of the church will be taken down in view of the extensive damage in the upper sections.

Two young residents of Sebringville, John Meyer, son of Rev. F. B. Meyer, pastor of the church, and a companion, Morris Hodgins, were overcome by smoke and fumes from chemicals when they attempted to fight the fire in its early stages, before assistance from Stratford arrived.

Man Dies in Michigan Tornado, Million Dollar Loss In State

Kalamazoo, Mich., Aug. 9—(AP)—Crews of workmen began clearing away debris today in the wake of tornadic winds which last night ripped through western and central Michigan, killing one man, injuring scores, and leaving hundreds homeless.

Estimates of damage to buildings and crops ranged up to $1,000,000 as the Red Cross mobilized its forces to dispense food and medical aid in the stricken areas.

Lester Baker, 31, was killed when the twister levelled a greenhouse in Scotts, 11 miles south of here. In nearby South Comstock more than two score persons were treated for injuries.

The storm tore its way in a northeasterly direction across the State, causing widespread damage in at least nine counties. Two factories were unroofed in Kalamazoo.

At Midland, a man and woman were carried 100 feet in a house which the wind plucked from its foundations and tossed into a schoolyard. Neither was hurt seriously. Mrs. Arla Belle Coon, 79, sat in a wheelchair in her South Comstock home while the house was blown to splinters. She suffered from shock.

Reserve Fleet Will Join Powerful Home Fleet for Manoeuvres in Connection With August-September British Preparedness Period

Weymouth, England, Aug. 9—(CP)—In a heavy mist stabbed by the fire of saluting guns, the King today boarded the royal yacht Victoria and Albert for a review of 133 warships—the reserve fleet which Great Britain is tuning to active service pitch.

A thin rain was falling as the King was joined aboard the yacht by Rear Admiral Jean Darlan, French naval commander.

The King spent the morning inspecting personnel and visiting representative ships. The first warship he boarded was the aircraft carrier Courageous where he passed down the lines of 1,500 men on the flight deck—part of the reservists called up to man the refurbished fleet.

The King on Royal Barge

A royal barke was ordered to take the King from the yacht at 3 p.m. (10 a.m. EDT) for the journey ~~down through the lines of ships~~ across Weymouth Bay.

After the review and two weeks of shakedown, the second-line ships will join the powerful home fleet for extensive manoeuvres in connection with the August-September preparedness period on which Britain has embarked.

All types of British fighting craft were drawn up for the passage of the King through the review lines—from the 29,150-ton battleship Revenge to small, highly manoeuvrable torpedo motorboats.

14,000 Reservists in Fleet

Manning the fleet were 14,000 reservists commanded by Vice Admiral Sir Max Horton, world war submarine officer who played bridge on his ship in the mud of Heligoland Bight while German destroyers were combing the surface for him.

FLIERS GRATEFUL TO AVIATRIX

Mrs. Noyes Runs Air-Marking Project of Civil Aeronautics

Washington, Aug. 9.— (AP) — Many a novice flier caught in stormy weather thanks Mrs. Blanche Noyes when he spots a big black and yellow roof-top sign that points his way to the nearest airport and a safe landing.

Mrs. Noyes, one-time actress who now is the United States government's only official woman pilot, runs the airmarking project of the civil aeronautics authority.

Mrs. Noyes criss-crosses the continent regularly in her plane. She confers with governors and speaks to government groups and civic clubs, emphasizing the need for marking each town to aid the thousands of private fliers who are without wireless and other safety aids of scheduled airline pilots.

IMPRINTS OF FERNS LEFT ON BODY BY LIGHTNING

Montreal, Aug. 9 (CP)—Perfect imprints of ferns and leaves were left on the chest, arms and legs of Ben Oliver, 17-year-old telegraph boy ~~killed when lightning struck near him~~ in a storm, Dr. Rosario Fontaine, medico-legal expert, said yesterday. "In all my 17 years of experience as a medico-legal expert I have never seen such marks," said Dr. Fontaine. "I have heard of them but never actually seen them."

CANADIAN OFFICER AMONG MISSING

Guelph Man in Command of Bomber, Believed Down in North Sea

London, Aug. 9.—(CP Cable)—A Canadian officer was among five men missing today in accidents attending Great Britain's greatest air exercises in which 1,300 planes took part.

Flying Officer Thomas Adam Darling of Guelph. Ont., was reported as in command of a Wellington bomber which is missing with a crew of five and believed down in the North Sea, 17 miles off Yarmouth.

The plane carried a rubber dinghy capable of holding all five men. Aircraft and destroyers searched the area as officers believed the men might still be afloat.

The machine was last reported by wireless at 1 a.m., heading seaward to join the "Eastland" or invading forces.

Flying for Three Years

Guelph, Ont., Aug. 9—(CP)—One of the first Guelph boys to leave to join the Royal Air Force, flying Officer Thomas Adam Darling, who with a crew of five aboard a bomber is reported lost over the North Sea, has been in the air force about three years.

Members of his family were notified today by cable of the disappearance of the plane which he commanded.

A native of Georgetown, he is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Adam Darling, Essex Street, but he has spent virtually his entire life in this city and is a graduate of the Guelph schools and collegiate vocational institute. He left for England to join the Royal Air Force about one year after his graduation from the collegiate here.

BROCKVILLE LIBS. ATTEND MEETING

A large chartered bus that passed through the city yesterday and paused here for lunch, contained members of the Brockville Liberal Association, enroute to the banquet tendered the Right Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King in Toronto last night.

The association were the guests of Mr. George Fulford, candidate for the Brockville riding.

"RAIL-SAW" NOW WORKING 2 SHIFTS

Reminiscent of the "good old days" when depressions were yet to be heard of, the Rail-Saw Department of the Canadian National Railways today went into "two shift" operation.

Additional men have been placed on the pay-roll with a day and night shift now working.

NEW BOAT SHIPPED BACK TO FACTORY

A sleek, streamlined mahogany and chrome fitted open cruiser built by a Gravenhurst firm of boat builders which attracted the admiration of hundreds at the Rotary regatta at Massassaga Monday, and reported yesterday sold to a local resident, was loaded on its trailer at the slip of the Wharf Street Debating Club this morning for shipment back to the factory. It is reported the local man has given orders for construction of another type of boat from the same firm.

SALVATION BANDS TO UNITE HERE SUNDAY

Kingston Salvation Army band will unite with the Belleville Salvation Army Corps this Sunday for week-end services.

Meeting at the city armouries on Sunday morning at ten o'clock the combined bands will hold two open air concerts, one at the corner of George and Bridge streets, and one at the corner of Victoria avenue and George street during the morning.

On Sunday afternoon the bands will take part in the Decoration Day services, and in the evening an after church service will be held at the corner of Bridge and Front streets, commencing shortly before 8:30 o'clock. Both bands will combine to render many of the favorite old hymns.

It is expected that Adjutant Bansey, the Corps officer at Kingston, will accompany the bands. He is a noted bass soloist and will be heard during the Sunday services.

ISLAND DEEP HOLES STILL DANGEROUS

Warning was issued today by the office of the city engineer to younger bathers that the deep holes on the south side of Zwick's Island are just as deep and dangerous as ever. It is recalled by the office that in the past lives have been lost at this location, and care is urged on the part of bathers frequenting the island evenings to escape the heat.

DEMAND FOR HAY SEEN IN EAST

Canadian hay will be in demand in the eastern section of the United States this year according to latest word received by local agricultural officials, due it is reported to a slim crop of the fodder through the New England States as the result of extended dryness. It is not expected that any considerable sales of hay will be made from this section, however, due to the fact that this year's crop has not been an exceptional one, though in most sections, an almost average cut is reported.

LANDS BIG 'LUNGE ON BORROWED GAFF

Fishing in the Trent River near Bailey's cottages over the holiday, J. Binns and A. Midgley, Peterborough, managed to hook a 22½ pound lunge on tackle that was meant only for light bass fishing. While one of the fishermen held the catch, the second hailed a nearby boat, and after borrowing a gaff landed the fine specimen which measured 44 inches in length.

BATTERY IS MISSING FROM ROAD GRADER

County road workmen returned to their labours near West Huntingdon early today, only to discover the gasoline engine driven county grader which had been parked alongside the highway all night, would not start. Workmen at first were of the opinion that the mechanism might have become affected during last night's heavy rain, but subsequently it was discovered that the large extra-plate battery used in starting the engine was missing. The theft of the battery was today reported to Provincial Police by the County Road Superintendent, W. L. Langlois. The county grader has been in use near West Huntingdon, levelling the highway, for some time and it has been the general practice of the operator to park the grader off the roadway at night. "The battery is a heavy duty one carrying extra plates and would be of no use in a motor car or tractor," Mr. Langlois assured the Provincial Police as they commenced their investigations today.

DISTRICT VISITED BY HEAVY RAIN

Belleville and environs were visited by the heaviest deluge of rain experienced this season early today. The precipitation broke with unabated fury shortly after midnight and continued in a torrential downpour for nearly five hours. The rain was most acceptable, insofar as the late farm produce and gardens were concerned and also served to relieve the intensity of the recent heat wave although the humidity continued today.

Farmers in the surrounding district stated this morning that the deluge of rain in no way affected their grain crops, the majority of which have already been cut and harvested, they said.

ARCHIE COOK'S HOUSE STRUCK BY CAR

The Rossmore residence struck on Monday by an automobile was owned by Archie Cook, and not William Little as formerly reported.

Damage to a large tree was incurred while a large metal tub at the corner of the house was also damaged. The car, according to reports today, struck the tree before rebounding to the side of the frame house.

12 POUND SALMON TROUT CAUGHT

Mr. Austin Peters of Kingston, while a guest of Major P. K. Ketcheson at Salmon Lake over the week-end, caught a salmon trout which measured 33 inches in length and weighed 12 pounds. It took a good half hour to land the gamey fish.

Jumps Into Water to Land Forty-Pound Maskinonge

Toronto Fishermen Get "Daddy" of District "Big Ones" Near Big Island

"TOO BIG FOR BOAT"

Picton, Aug. 9—A forty pound 'lunge gave two fishermen at Big Island a battle for more than half an hour before it was landed by Jack Coleman and Frank Babington of Toronto. It is the largest 'lunge of the season to be caught in district waters this season. The men were trolling with a small skiff equipped with an outboard motor when the big fish struck and the couple found it impossible to get the fish to the boat. They headed for shore, playing the fish into shallow waters where Mr. Babington jumped into the water and landed it with a gaff hook. A steel rod with a 30-pound test line was being used. The fish was brought to Picton where it was weighed and placed in the cold storage. The two men were holidaying at Clayton Sprague's farm home on Big Island and were fishing in the Bay of Quinte at the time.

A 20-pound lunge was caught by Buff Cooper and D. A. Fournia just outside of Picton harbor the same day. They were using a bamboo rod with a double buffalo spinner and copper line.

'Lunge and bass fishing is reported unusually good in Prince Edward county waters this season.

Police Blotter

Harry Boyle, 18 Olive Street, reported the theft of his bicycle to city police last night. Boyle left his bike parked near the Capitol Theatre on Front Street yesterday, but upon his return the two-wheeled machine had disappeared. As has been the case in several such incidents of late, bicycle joy-riders are believed responsible.

No session of police court was held in Belleville today, a postponement of cases to be heard was necessary due to the absence from the city of His Worship E. J. Butler, K.C., who is away on business.

Last night's heavy downpour of rain sent several transients skeltering to the police station seeking a dry night's lodging, nine putting in an appearance.

GUARDS NAMED FOR TRENT HYDRO SYSTEM

Forty special officers for guard duty at Hydro plants along the Trent River in Campbellford district have been appointed by the Provincial government and were sworn in as special deputies by Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., of Peterborough.

The men, the majority of whom are veterans have been given orders to stand by and be ready to take over duties in case of any emergency. They have been recruited through Campbellford and Havelock sections.

VANDERBILT LOSES RACE

London, Aug. 9—(CP)—Harold S. Vanderbilt's Vim lost its last race on its invasion of British waters today to W. R. Westhead's Blue Marlin in the Royal Yacht Club's regatta race for 12 metre yachts off the South Sea. Blue Marlin's time was 3:19:10 and Vim's 3:19:40.

An "Alarm Clock" That Grows Quills

When John Shalla moved into the section house at Oneongo Forks in the Madawaska district the other day, he discovered the place occupied by a strange visitor.

A porcupine had made its home in the cellar, and all inducements for it to leave failed.

However all's well that ends well and the little animal is now doing "alarm clock" duty for Shalla, wakening him in the early morning with a scratching noise that tells Shalla it is time to arise.

Shalla is making a pet of the animal.

Strange Message Found In Bottle

Whether it meant survivors, or merely companions of the container, is not known, but the note found by a Rednersville farmer residing near the bay front, in a small bottle that formerly contained "holiday cheer" bore the inscription: "This is the last of 24. Please communicate." A city address was included in the message.

The bottle was discovered floating in the bay at this point.

CUT BRIDGE TOLLS

A new evening toll rate went into effect on the Thousand Islands International Bridge on August 6th, it was announced by Grant Mitchell executive secretary of the Bridge Authority. The new rate is $1.50 round trip from 6 p.m. to 6 a.m. (daylight time) to accommodate visitors who want to just take an evening ride over the bridge. It is also expected that this will encourage more short excursions by Americans into Canada and Canadians into the United States. The former rate was $1.25 each way.—Brockville Recorder and Times.

OBITUARY

LATE HARRY G. ASHTON

The funeral of Harry G. Ashton, late residence Toronto and district, and a native son of Ameliasburg Township, took place Tuesday afternoon, August 8, from the Belleville Burial Company Funeral Home on Campbell street. The service in the chapel and at the graveside in Albury Cemetery, Prince Edward County, was conducted by the Rev. A. L. Geen.

The bearers were Messrs. James Wallbridge, James Currell, Edward Jackson, W. A. Woodley, Harry Thompson and A. H. Pulver.

LATE THOS. C. MALONEY
(Deseronto)

Deseronto (Special)—The funeral of the late Thomas C. Maloney took place from his late residence, College Street, to St. Vincent de Paul Church on Saturday morning, Aug. 5th, where Requiem Mass was celebrated by Rev. G. T. Martin. Very Rev. E. M. Leacy of Napanee, was present in the Sanctuary.

Interment was made in St. Vincent de Paul Cemetery, Deseronto.

The bearers were Messrs. Edward Roach, Francis McNiel, Leo Therrien, David Edwards, Martin Flood and William Gaulin.

MRS. MARY ANN THOMPSON

Mrs. Mary Ann Thompson, widow of Hercules A. Thompson, passed away at her late residence, 31 Everett Street, on Monday morning, August 7.

The late Mrs. Thompson had reached the advanced age of ninety-seven years, she having attained to this great age on July 24, last. She was born in Liverpool, England, in the year 1842 and came to Canada at an early age. For about eighty years she resided in this city and was well known and throughout her long life she occupied a high place in the affectionate regard of many friends. In religion she was a faithful member of Emmanuel Church. By those who were near to her, Mrs. Thompson will long be held in revered memory.

Surviving her are two sons, Mr. H. A. Thompson, Edmonton, Alberta; Mr. George H. Thompson, Los Angeles, California; six daughters, Mrs. J. Ellenor, Toronto; Mrs. R. H. Ketcheson, Belleville; Miss Doll Thompson, Belleville; Mrs. E. Blake Curlette, Calgary, Alberta; Miss Bertha Thompson, Calgary, Alberta, and Mrs. W. L. Reid, Edmonton, Alberta.

Work on Bata Model Town Soon to Begin

Trenton, Aug. 9—(Special)—Thirty-one Czecho-Slovakian "keymen" for the Bata plant at Frankford, some accompanied by their wives and families, arrived in Trenton and Frankford over the week-end, it is reported and the colony of expert workmen imported from overseas continues to grow. Some time ago a Bata official expressed a wish that newspapers of the locality print as little as possible regarding such importations, the reason being that some of this Canadian publicity has reached Nazi hands in Germany and is creating difficulties in the matter of emigration of Czech workers to Canada. However it is said that before many weeks the first steps toward the construction of the Bata model town south of Frankford will begin and the arrival of these keymen here has undoubtedly created a demand for extra-housing equipment.

A new tire and vulcanizing station is being opened this week on Elgin Street near the market square in the W. R. Bonter block.

Considerable damage was allegedly done to a westbound car owned by George Jordan and driven by Ken Mann on Saturday evening when a second vehicle backed suddenly from a driveway near the Hyde & Son repair shop on Dundas Street east into its path. Unable to stop in time the Jordan car struck the other with considerable force creating extensive damage. According to report Col. H. J. Smith, town solicitor, was a passenger in the Jordan car at the time of the accident.

SICILY TO BECOME SMALL FARMS

Large Estates Are to be Transformed Under Mussolini's Plans

Rome Aug. 9 (AP)—Paremier Mussolini conferred today with the Duke of Aosta, Viceroy of Ethiopia, on questions concerning the military defence of the Italian Empire.

It was announced that Il Duce had decided to inaugurate his plan for the transformation of large estates of Sicily into small farms on Oct. 16. He named Nallo Mazzocchi Alemanni director of the organization to colonize Sicily under the new settlement plan.

The plan announced July 21, calls for the division of 1,250,000 acres into small farms.

Il Duce spent a busy day at his desk in Rome while King Victor Emmanuel reviewed 50,000 troops who took part in the recent war games in northern Italy next the French frontier.

Tows Cow with Canoe, But 'Bossy' Changes Her Mind

Shannonville Resident Hits Upon Novel Ferry Idea, but Reckons Without Cow

TRIES TO RIDE

Shannonville, Ont., (Special)—An impromptu "ferry" service hastily inaugurated by a local resident ended more or less successfully here last night. But not before an exchange of ideas had been effected between the drawer and the drawee while enroute across the Salmon River.

The idea towing his cow across the river with a canoe supplying the motive power occurred to the resident. It would save him plenty of steps, and no doubt the immersion would assist in cooling off "Bossy".

Everything went well with Madame Cow swimming quietly behind the frail craft, until the party got one-third of the way across. Then "Bossy" apparenty not liking the "lay of the land" ahead, decided that the old pasture was better and accordingly turned and headed for the point from which she "took off".

Despite the frantic efforts of the canoeist, "Bossy" paddled her way back, hauling the canoe and its occupant.

Finally he persuaded his cow that the first idea was the best and the "ferry" started out again. But "Bossy" was getting tired. The empty seat in the canoe looked inviting. So without more ado she increased her swimming strokes, and tried firmly but ineffectively to climb into the boat. That proving unsuccessful she resigned herself to her fate and placidly allowed herself to be hauled to the home pastures.

POLIO DEATH REPORTED

Sarnia, Ont., Aug. 9—(CP)—Toll of the infantile paralysis outbreak here increased to six today with the death of Wilfred Riley, 14.

The boy, stricken Sunday, took a turn for the worse early today and was placed in the iron lung at the hospital isolation bungalow.

He failed to rally. One new case was reported.

DRENCHING RAIN

Water Spouts 6 Feet High

Police at Keele Street station reported water spouting six feet high out of sewers in the West Toronto area. Two cyclists and a pedestrian suffered injuries in collisions with automobiles during the height of the storm. Hydro lines were torn down in several districts and many trees crashed.

W. R. Reek, Deputy Minister of Agriculture, said the rain would be "wonderful" for Ontario farmers. He said the rain would leave the land in good condition for fall wheat and in the southern part of the Province would aid tobacco, root crops and corn.

Mr. Reek thought the rain might delay harvesting some, but most harvesting is complete and a delay would not be serious if warm weather came today.

The power plant at Canadian Cottons Limited, Hamilton, was struck by lightning with $20,000 damage to the equipment. A bolt struck the transformer outside the building and travelled along the power lines to the panel board of the power house, wrecking it.

Eastern Ontario's dairy industry saw pasture prospects transformed by a rain worth millions of dollars. About an inch of rain fell at Peterborough as pastures and root crops were drying up.

SWIMMER DISCOVERS NECK DISLOCATED

Ottawa, Aug. 9—(CP)—When his arms began to grow numb after he had injured himself diving in nearby Lake Descenes over the week-end, Albert Boisvert, 17, went to hospital. X-ray yesterday showed Boisvert is suffering from a slight case of broken neck.

The water was too shallow and Boisvert cut his head on the bottom. He grew worried when his arms became numb. His doctors say the vertebra fracture and dislocation may not be serious and his condition was reported favorable last night.

4,000 LIBERALS

He Avoids Reference to Election

But Mr. Mackenzie King avoided any reference to the forthcoming election. Instead, he discussed with much feeling the value of Liberalism to maintenance of orderly government in Canada, urging continuation of the two-party system.

Mr. Mackenzie King repeated a declaration he has made before—that he would not be persuaded to make any statement of policy for Canada on international situations which might arise in the future. Nothing could be less helpful to the cause of international peace, he declared.

Hepburn Absent

True to his announced intention Premier Mitchell Hepburn, leader of Ontario's Liberal government and one-time supporter of Mr. Mackenzie King in the House of Commons, and all his ministers, remained aloof from the banquet.

No direct reference was made to Mr. Hepburn's absence which was made all the more conspicuous by the presence of five Liberal Provincial Premiers and strong Liberal delegations from every province. Nor was any direct reference made to the two year quarrel which has separated the two leaders.

But the Prime Minister repeated, for the benefit, he said, of those who desire to give "true and noble service to their country" the warning given him years ago by Sir Wilfrid Laurier not "to carry private resentments into public life."

Lapointe's Tribute

Justice Minister Ernest Lapointe, 35 years in the House of Commons and long time chief lieutenant to the Prime Minister, stressed the value of unity and harmony. He presided as chairman and paid warm tribute to his leader.

"We not only respect our leader but we admire him," Mr. Lapointe said. "The more he is attacked the better we love him."

Despite the feeling held by a large number of those who came to the banquet that the Prime Minister would give some indication of the time of the next general election he made no reference to it. But he did say, at a civic luncheon earlier in the day that he was prepared to continue in public service.

"No one can know what the future has in store for us or for our country," the Prime Minister said. "But regardless of what may come I shall seek to continue to serve this country and my fellow Canadians with the best of my ability and with all my heart."

Liberals from all quarters of the Dominion poured into Toronto yesterday by train, automobile and aeroplane. Premier T. D. Pattullo flew to Toronto from Los Angeles and will return in the same manner today.

Other Provincial Premiers, all of whom spoke in response to toasts to their Provinces, were Hon. Thane Campbell, Prince Edward Island, Hon. Angus L. E. Macdonald, Nova Scotia, Hon. A. A. Dysart, New Brunswick and Hon. W. F. Patterson of Saskatchewan.

Spokesmen For Provinces

Spokesmen for other Provinces were Hon. Adelard Godbout, Provincial Liberal leader, for Quebec, Campbell Calder and Mrs. Meta O'Brien, heads of the Ontario 20th Century Liberal Association for Ontario; Attorney General W. J. Major for Manitoba and J. L. Bowlen, M.L.A., for Alberta.

Toasts to the Provinces were proposed by the following cabinet ministers, each for the Province he represents in the government: Senator Raoul Dandurand reading the message for Finance Minister Dunning who is on a health-seeking voyage to Europe to Prince Edward Island; Revenue Minister Ilsley, to Nova Scotia; Fisheries Minister Michaud, to New Brunswick; Works Minister Cardin, to Quebec; Trade Minister Euler, to Ontario; Resources Minister Crerar, to Manitoba; Agriculture Minister Gardiner, to Saskatchewan; Hon. J. A. MacKinnon, Minister Without Portfolio, to Alberta; and Defence Minister Ian Mackenzie to British Columbia.

Senator Norman Lambert, head of the National Liberal Federation which arranged the banquet with the assistance of a Dominion-wide committee, and Senator Cairine Wilson of Ottawa proposed a toast to the National Liberal Party.

Hon. Mr. Dunning Not Present

Finance Minister Dunning was the only federal cabinet minister absent. In addition to the cabinet ministers and Provincial Premiers the head table was occupied by prominent Liberals including Sir Allan Aylesworth who nominated Mr. Mackenzie King for leader at the 1919 convention, and Hon. L. A. Taschereau, former Premier of Quebec.

The Prime Minister expressed regret that indisposition prevented attendance of Sir William Mulock, 95 year old former Chief Justice of Ontario and former federal minister who has been mentor and friend of Mr. Mackenzie King for nearly 50 years.

Two pipers wearing the Mackenzie tartan led the head table group to their places and, before the speech-making started, conducted the Prime Minister on a tour of the 14 other dining rooms which held the overflow from the main banquet hall. A standing ovation was given the Prime Minister in each room. The speeches were carried to those in other rooms by a loud speaker system.

Crowd Into Main Hall

Hundreds of those from other rooms crowded into the main banquet hall when the speeches started and packed every inch of available space, standing in the sweltering heat through the 20 brief addresses which preceded that of the Prime Minister.

Warning those who criticize the two old parties as though they were a menace to the country the Prime Minister declared he believed the old parties would provide the only instrument which would keep the Dominion united.

Only alternatives to the two old parties were a single party or a number of third parties. The latter system of grouping might lead to class government.

Aim of Liberalism was to establish a United Canada and to not only "extend the borders of freedom" but to "preserve freedom" now threatened in so many parts of the world, the Prime Minister said.

He urged for chivalry as between public men and in the relations of public men with those they sought to serve, and believed Canada should set an example to the world in harmony and union for the common good.

Reference To Past.

The Prime Minister turned briefly to reminiscence as he recalled events in the past which had played an important part in shaping his career.

"At home,' he said, "I have pictures of the two men who, in my mind, contributed more to Canada than any other pair. One is Sir Wilfrid Laurier and the other my mother's father, William Lyon Mackenzie.'

Mr. King declared that his grandfather's career had played a big part in accounting for his decision to go into public life.

"His years of exile, his imprisonment, he said feelingly, "my mother's birth in exile, my grandfather's return to the country and to parliament, all made a deep impression on me."

It was the example set by William Lyon Mackenzie, he said, that inspired him to follow the self-same course.

"Because of what he did," the Prime Minister said, "I decided to devote my life to the struggle for a wider freedom for my fellow men, for which my grandfather fought."

"As a very young man I enjoyed the greatest honor which can be enjoyed by any young man, when Sir Wilfrid took me into his cabinet at 33. He gave me an opportunity of seeing the problems of government, and I learned then," said Mr. King, "what the difficulties of government were.

"I recall something Sir Wilfrid Laurier said: 'It does not do to cherish resentment in public life.'

Again Mr. King was interrupted by cheering.

Tribute To Laurier.

"I would like to say that," he continued, "Not only to young Liberals who are coming on, but to all people who desire to serve in public life. If I point to my record, in things in which I have been successful or not successful, I think I have been true to my great leader in that I have not cherished resentment to any man." Applause drowned out Mr. King's words and it was not for some moments he was able to finish, in any part of the Dominion at any time.

"I have regarded my public life as a public trust and sought above else," he added, to keep free from his mind anything that would prejudice his mind in public affairs.

Another lesson Sir Wilfrid taught, he said, was that Canada was a difficult country to govern.

"It is made up of every people, made up largely of two great races," he continued.

Besides generations of religion, each held interests which lay in different directions. Besides were those who came from other lands to seek liberty and a new life.

"I have long sought to impress upon my colleagues that one thing above all others: be careful of the rights of minorities."

"There can be no great body of opinion or feeling that hasn't some justification for it," he said, "and when one is in the minority, those who are in the majority should see that the rights of minority are protected."

In dealing with political opponents, the Prime Minister said, he had always endeavored to maintain a note of chivalry. No man could be successful in political or business life without the quality of chivalry being a part of his belief.

The desire to do something to better social conditions, he said, was instilled in him by the example of his mother and father, and it was a result of their teachings that he had begun to think unselfishly and broadly in his youth.

Regrets Mulock's Absence.

The Prime Minister referred feelingly to his long friendship with Sir William Mulock. He expressed regret that Ontario's "Grand Old Man" was unable to be present at the meeting owing to a slight indisposition.

"In his absence, as I would have in his presence," he said, "I would like to pay tribute to a man who half a century ago worked for the good of the people. I know of no closer friendship than that which has existed between Sir William and myself. I owe much to that friendship."

He would always be appreciative, Mr. King said, of the fact that it was Sir William who asked him to become Deputy Minister of Labor forty years ago.

"You should be proud," he told his audience, "to remember that in Sir William Mulock you had a Liberal Minister two decades ago who brought in legislation with respect to labor conditions. It was that Liberal Government which paved the way for the meeting of labor problems which were to arise in future."

Allowing his mind to wander back through the years, Mr. King recalled other incidents and names which were linked to significant moments of his career.

He recalled Sir Allan Aylesworth, who proposed his name before the National Liberal Convention in 1919.

"I am glad Sir Allan was spared to be with us on this great occasion," he said, "for without him, I would probably not be in this position today."

He spoke, too, of his friendship and admiration for Senator Dandurand, Right Hon. George Graham and Lady Laurier, all of whom had helped and inspired him on his career.

General Elections of Past

Directing his address to party affairs, Mr. King said that out of the twenty years of his leadership there were five general elections of which the Liberal Party carried four. He noted, too, the "equally remarkable" fact that the Liberal Party has the "largest following in the history of the country."

These conditions, he emphasized, did not come about by chance. There was, he said, the loyalty of his colleagues. From the convention of 1919, he said, the party strength increased year by year.

The party, he said, encountered the difficulties of third parties in Opposition, hard times and subversive elements which sought the destruction of the party and of its principles.

Aim is Unity

"We have sought first and foremost the unity of our country," said the Prime Minister, and he ascribed to that policy the strength of the party.

During early years the problem of government was one largely of expansion and development and, he said, in all periods of expansion, the problem of administration is comparatively easy.

"But in periods of depression, there is bound to develop problems such as were never developed before."

Once the problems of the nation have received the consideration of a responsible commission, he said, and then the consideration of the Government of the country, much would have been accomplished toward their solution.

A political party is a means to an end and that end is the Government of a country, said the Prime Minister. In such a country as Canada, it was essential that that instrument did not belong to one particular race or creed, but represented all.

"During the years I have been Leader I have sought above everything else to regard my position as Leader of the party as the first among equals," he said. "The best way Canada can be governed is by bringing together members of those different races so that all may share together the government of the country."

He turned to Mr. Lapointe and declared of him that he was able to represent as no one else the people of Quebec. He knew their problems, had a close knowledge of their interests and of their feelings.

"Though different in racial origins and religious beliefs, I cannot think of any occasion when he or I were speaking of any public question to Canada that we have disagreed," said the Prime Minister.

They had, he said, different thoughts on different problems. But vitally important, they had been able to discover things in common by which they had been able to agree. "And," he added, "I can say that equally of every other colleague that I have had."

Great Principles

"Together we have sought to serve those great principles which are more needed today than at any time in history," said Mr. King.

"One of the Toronto papers quoted from something I wrote in 1920, regarding a definition of Liberalism. It is a wider human freedom for all.

As a younger man dealing with the social questions of the day, I always tried to widen the frontiers of humanity. But what has become of the necessity of our time is the necessity of preserving freedom. We have seen freedom threatened in other lands. I have been ridiculed for seeing to it that the constitution of the country is maintained, that the supremacy of Parliament is maintained. Once you begin to tamper with the constitution you are tampering with our freedom."

Mr. King said Canada was as near a dictatorship four or five years ago as it was possible for a country under the democratic system to become.

"We have also sought to preserve the Parliamentary system in its basis principles," he declared.

The two major parties, he declared, were an essential part of the functioning of a nation, and no alternative offered as satisfactory a solution.

"Two principle parties" he said, "assure an effective opposition and develop a bond of relationship across the nation. The only alternatives are a number of third parties or a single party, and neither can be successful under our present form of government."

Growth of a number of parties, the Prime Minister declared, led only to sectionalism and prevented the development of a true national consciousness.

On the other hand, the evolution of a political structure toward a one-party system of government struck a blow at the very freedom of the nation.

"When you have a single party forcing its will on the country irrespective of the people's desires," he said, "you have put an end to that country's liberties.

Removes Differences

"I have sought throughout my forty years of public life to endeavor to remove those differences which separate class from class," he said. During the years, he said, he had worked to remove strife in the wider field of international affairs.

"We have sought above all else to further to the utmost the position of Canada as a nation within the British Commonwealth of Nations," said Mr. King.

During his time in office, he continued, he succeeded in passing through great treaties with the United States. The policy, also, he said, had aided in bringing about a treaty between Britain and the United States.

"I venture to say there is no enacting which has so pointed the way to the ultimate solution of world difficulties as these treaties.

West Huntingdon

West Huntingdon—This lovely mid-summer weather is very much appreciated by citizens here. The farmers are extra busy cutting and harvesting their grain. Threshing is in progress. Mr. Elmer Wilson has made his first rounds this week and is being congratulated by his many friends on his excellent work. Elmer is one of the popular young farmers here and this new venture is assisting the farmers in that threshing can be done at the opportune time. The yield of the fall grain is fairly good, but the oats and barley crop will not be quite so good as in former years.

Messrs. Sam Fargey and Howard Ashley each received prizes in the barley field crop competition sponsored by the Stirling Agricultural Society. Mr. Fargey won first prize, or a score of 91; and Mr. Ashley, sixth prize, or a score of 81.

W. M. S. and Mission Band

The W.M.S. of United Church held their August meeting on the spacious lawn at the home of Mrs. Geo. Cooke on Thursday, August 3. The Mission Band was entertained at this meeting. There was a good attendance present. Following the opening hymn and prayer, Miss Dorothy Tristram read a portion of Scripture. Two of the members responded to the Watch Tower. The Misses Marion and Phyllis Hammond gave a duet.

Mrs. Milton Robinson of Thurlow was the guest speaker and she gave an outstanding address on the work of Baby Bands. As a result of this address a Baby Band was organized with Mrs. Albert Ashley as superintendent.

Miss Helen Wright read an address prepared by Miss Mona Wright on "Be Thankful For the Blessings You Have." Mrs. Geo. Post led in prayer. Miss Georgie Pitman gave as a solo, "The Old Rugged Cross." Mr. Kenneth Stewart gave a brief address on his work among the Indians at Chemong.

Miss Marguerite Elliott who has been corresponding with a girl in India read some extracts from letters received. She also showed some fancy work that was done by this girl and which was for sale. Mr. Stewart closed the meeting and lunch was served.

Ivanhoe Team Wins Trophy

One of the largest crowds of the season witnessed an exciting game in the Centre Softball League, when Minto and Ivanhoe teams competed on Tuesday evening. For the past two years, Minto team had won this coveted prize and had they won this year would have held it permanently.

The game was held on the Minto diamond and at the close the score was 13-7 in favor of Ivanhoe. The president, Mr. Henry Wallace was present and presented the Rorke-Ferguson trophy to Mr. Thomlison, captain of the winning team.

Ashley—Farquer

A wedding of much interest to citizens here took place at Mindemoya, Manitoulin Island, on Saturday, August 5th, when Mr. John Ashley, youngest son of Mr. Frank Ashley and the late Mrs. Ashley, was married to Miss Ruth Farquer, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Farquer. After a short wedding tour Mr. and Mrs. Ashley will reside in Peterboro.

Y. P. U.

The Young People of United Church held a meeting at the home of Jack and Georgia Pitman on Friday evening. Mr. Harry Morgan read a portion of Scripture, which later was explained by Mr. Kenneth Stewart. Mr. Pitman led in prayer and Miss Hilda Moorcroft gave a reading. The Misses Marion and Phyllis Hammond and Dorothy Tristram gave a song. In the business period it was decided to hold a weiner roast. After the Benediction lunch was served.

Personals

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Fitchett are receiving the congratulations of their many friends on the arrival on Friday, August 4th, of a fine baby girl, (Jean Marilyn).

Mrs. W. R. Tristram and Dorothy were Wednesday evening guests of Miss Margaret Wright.

Glenn Wilson entertained eight of his chums on Wednesday, it being his eighth birthday.

Dorothy Fox of Trenton is visiting her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Jas. McGowan.

Friends are sorry to hear of the serious illness of Mrs. Samuel Donnan. Mrs. Donnan suffered a paralytic stroke on Friday evening.

Miss Margaret Wright was a Thursday guest of Mrs. Don Fargey.

Mr. and Mrs. Sandy McCurdy and family were guests on Wednesday of Mrs. Mae Humphrey of Consecon.

STILL HE SAYS "NO WAR"

The Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, the familiar Canadian figure, has reiterated his prediction of far more than a year ago that there would not be a war. The world would rejoice to think that he is right and hopes he is not wrong in his survey of events in Europe and the Far East.

Mr. Ferguson, in his view, is standing with some of the best thought and most highly regarded opinion. There are of course, dangerous elements in the situation of armed nations but so long has the world been at this stage that it seems as if unusual care will be taken that there shall be no untoward event, no precipitious action as was seized upon in 1914 to set the world ablaze at the will of the Teutonic Powers. No German dare do a single act which would hazard Germany's future because he realizes where he would stand with regard to Herr Hitler. Hitler is the man, who, for the Germans, acts and makes events. No other dare. Probably the same is largely true of Mussolini and Italy. And it is certain that democratic nations are unusually careful.

Of course the world is armed, Germany possibly with her strength, the highest it may ever reach and Italy's probably never to be stronger, and the democratic powers moving steadily to that preponderance which they will attain if they have not already attained it. There might have been a time when it could have appeared the part of expediency to seize an occasion for war, but to many observers the day of such expediency is past.

That does not mean that rumors of wars and crises will not bristle. Else what would so many millions of bayonets and guns mean? Nations have the guns, the munitions and the men. But who has the will? A war will not break out of of democratic diplomacy. The nations know too well what the clash of arms would mean. There is safety in peace even for the unsatisfied, but even lack of satisfaction is as plenty compared with what defeat in war would inevitably bring to all.

Britain has used for a year or more the double-decked policy of preparedness and appeasement. With this two-sided effort, Britain has placed herself at the head of the peace-loving nations and manifested their strength. Had Britain not been the power she was and is, even as far back as last September, there might have been a different story to tell.

Mr. Ferguson, it is hoped, has judged correctly.

JESTS FOR THE WORLD

The world can still laugh, despite the absorption of nations in rearmament. It goes to the movies and sees that creation of Ferdinand the Bull, smelling flowers and so Ferdinand lives in millions of memories though that Ferdinand is only the creation of a man's mind and painter's brush.

Then it spreads to all life, it appears in the newspapers. Yesterday a jersey bull was contrasted with Ferdinand of the films and the story wound up with a likeness between the pictured bull and the jersey.

The world reads the newspaper comics for their clever characterization of human lif and their depth of wisdom even in laughter or satire. Generally they are so good-natured that even a cynic would give way to them.

Other days had their funmakers, the circus yet has its clowns, ancient kings had their jesters but no age is more supplied with jests than this present with an army of jest makers working on mirth for the people, old and young.

It is well that it is so . Without them things would be very dull. Jesting makes people healthier and happier.

AUGUST FIRST AND AUGUST FOURTH, momentous dates in history as marking the beginning of the Great War, came and went in Canada without much attention being paid, but strange to relate in Germany, for the first time the anniversary of the beginning of the Great War was celebrated. At Hitler's command the beginning of the Great War was celebrated as a victory, Germany claims now to have won the Peace as well as the war itself. By Hitler's command every garrison in the Third Reich observed August 2 as a holiday. Hitherto in Germany the anniversary of the invasion of Belgium in the beginning of the Great War has been mourned as a calamity, as the first step toward a crushing defeat. Now at Hitler's command the German defeat is celebrated as a victory and Germans are rearranging their minds to assume that the war was victorious for them. They think they have won the war at last.

x

"Strange things have happened to the world since that day," says the New York Times, "but none more strange than the turn which gives the victors of 1918 nothing to celebrate and the vanquished reason to believe they have won. After twenty-five years we see clearly enough that the struggle has lasted ever since and that today Germany has as much ground as the Allied Powers to claim the victory."

x

All down through the years since the German collapse that country has been complaining of unjust treaty terms and wiggling out of reparation payments wherever possible, ignoring obligations and secretly building up a great army so as to be in a position to not only wipe out the Versailles Treaty altogether but demand back colonies and other indemnities imposed by the treaty.

x

"Yet, at least, the Allies have learned the lesson of the vicious circle," says the New York Times. "Of their own free will," says the Times, "they would never fight again. But Germany, though she was prostrated in a contest of arms and all she has regained has been the fruit of a truce, due as much to the return to reason of the victors as to her own revival, has failed to learn that lesson.

"AND THIS PROVES THAT THE GERMANS LOST THE WAR AFTER ALL," says the Times.

"THEY HAVE EVEN LOST THE PEACE," says the Times.

'From their own experience and the experience of others they have not even profitted enough to avoid the trap a second time," concludes the Times.

RAISING GOATS MIGHT BE A PROFITABLE SIDELINE in some of the rural rocky parts of Ontario, according to the Perth Courier, in commenting upon the goat farm started near Prescott to feed the new Czecho-Slovakia glove industry recently established in that town. Prescott, long regarded as perhaps the sleepiest town in Ontario, is waking up and is encouraging industries to locate there, and last week entertained the Canadian fire chiefs in annual convention, followed by a Civic Holiday convention this week. Prescott has also been busily engaged brushing up its historical attractions with the result that tourists find something of interest to detain them in that town rather than hustling through as quickly as possible as in former days. Prescott has even got a Rotary Club, and a large measure of the reason for Prescott's reawakening must be ascribed to the push, pull and perseverance of Mayor Horan, a man with that vision without which towns, cities and nations must perish. . .

AT LONG LAST A CAMPAIGN HAS BEEN STARTED AGAINST THE PRACTISE OF MEN GOING HATLESS. The hat trade, no doubt, being hit hard by the hatless hobby, are taking steps to combat it and of course turn to newspaper advertising as the quickest and surest weapon to aid their cause. It is asserted in the hatters' publicity that hats do not injure the head or hair, while going hatless is injurious to the hair and whatever is under it. So now the hatless who have been blissfully imagining that besides saving hat money they were conferring a favor on their general health will have something to think about concerned with hair, head and health.

HONEST ADVERTISING

A note of humor in advertising has been brought to light by a writer in Marketing dealing with candor in presenting facts about a sale. It follows:

Here's a little story for the circulation managers of daily newspapers. There appeared in an issue of the Missouri Press News a very candid retailer's advertisement — an advertisement which became so interesting to multitudes of both local and foreign readers that they exhausted the available supply of that issue. The advertisement was headed "Adams Grub Sale." Some specimen items in the advertisement are:

This stuff ain't so hot. But we have it, and we're getting tired of looking at it. You probably won't be able to eat any of it, but we sure will express our appreciation if you buy some of this junk.

American cheese, shelf-worn, full of holes. Mice like it. 23c lb.

Milk, from discontented cows, aged in glass. 10c per quart.

Peas, big, wrinkled and tuff. 2 cans 25c.

Macaroni, makes a rotten salad. Pound package, 10c.

Pink salmon, improved, been dead a long time. 2 cans 25c.

Come in and look this grub over, or ring up if you want some of this stuff. If we don't answer, we're sitting down. Try again in a few minutes. We'll deliver if you ketch us just right and we feel like it.—Lindsay Post.

SUNDAY CLOTHES

The man who compiles the day's fact about Canada for the benefit of radio listeners recently turned momentarily from history and statistics to discuss the changed attire of the people who attend church services.

This gentleman had attended service in a large church in one of our cities and had been struck by the differences that came to his attention. The minister wore a Geneva gown as of yore, but he was otherwise clothed in a sack suit and he wore the ordinary collar of the business men. Not a single man in the congregation wore a morning coat nor had a Prince Albert been seen there for years. Moreover, not a solitary man or boy in the congregation wore a flower in the lapel of his coat.

As against this, the observer recalled that at the beginning of the century the typical garb of the urban churchgoer consisted of patent leather shoes, striped trousers, a Prince Albert coat, a "boiled" shirt with high starched collar, the white cuffs being exactly half an inch below the sleeves of his coat. He had a silk hat on his head, a walking-stick in his right hand with kid gloves in his left, a Bible under his arm and he wore a flower in his button-hole.

As any individual of middle age or more will agree, that is a very fair description of the church-going attire of the late Victorian and Edwardian eras which is now conspicuous by its absence. Have we grown careless about our appearance on such occasions, or is it merely that, having gained more sense, we have learned to appreciate the fact that worship is just as possible and just as devout in the more comfortable clothes of the present as in the stiff, formal and distinctly uncomfortable clothes that our fathers and grandfathers effected?—Brockville Recorder and Times.

PURE CUSSEDNESS

So widely has the habit of profanity grown among some people that apparently they cannot express their feelings as faithfully as they wish without swearing. Nor can other blasphemers understand their language without the emphasis of curses and oaths. Yet such expressions and words are needless additions to the vocabulary of any man, and their use is simply the vile growth carelessly permitted to attach itself to casual conversation. To eradicate this growth before it has become too large should be the aim of every self-respecting man who realizes the influence of his example upon the young.— Guelph Mercury.

BRITAIN'S MILITIA

Announcement is made of the first call in Britain of men under the new Conscription Act, providing for 200,000 to be trained this year.

It is interesting to note at this stage what the existing British military force is. The list at date is as follows:

British regular army	226,000
Army reserve	125,000
Supplementary reserve .	24,000
Territorial army	500,000
Indian native army	160,000

In the above list, the figure for the British regular army includes the part of the army in India, 60,000 strong. The army reserve is composed of ex-regulars, still able-bodied. The supplementary reserve is composed of ex-regular officers, available for training of new forces if needed. The Territorial army is composed of volunteers, fairly well trained. The Indian native army is largely staffed by British officers.

The whole is small enough in number compared to the numbers of trained men armed by the chief European nations; still, it is not inconsiderable in itself, and is very considerable in its potentialities. Accompanied by tremendous naval strength and by an air force which now is probably not second to any other in the world, it is enough to cause some thinking in the dictators.—Ottawa Journal.

SPELLING NAMES

There is more than one way to skin a cat, and also more than one manner of spelling a name—especially that of a celebrity. Katharine Cornell, for instance, has suffered innumerable mis-spellings of her first name in past years, despite the valiant efforts of erudite publicists. The most common variations are Katherine and Catharine.

Helen Menken, the stage and radio star, also has to contend with interviews who insist on putting a "c" before the "k", probably with H. L. Mencken in mind. Gertrude Lawrence frequently has her last name spelled "Laurence," while Lynn Fontanne has been printed Lynne Fontane, Lyn Fontann, Lyne Fontane and a number of other variations. Helen Hayes sometimes runs across a reference to herself as Hays.

It's surprising how many copy desks allow Mervyn LeRoy's name to pass as Marvin Leroy, and occasionally Kitty Carlisle finds her surname spelled Carlile. One of the most common of all confusions exists between Helen Claire the actress of "Kiss the Boys Goodbye" and Clare Boothe, its author, whose married name is Clare Luce and who has the devil's own time being distinguished from Claire Luce an actress.—Lucius Beebe in New York Herald Tribune.

MEMBER OF PARLIAMENT

Mr. Lloyd George has been receiving congratulations on entering his fiftieth year as a member of Parliament. This particular feat did not assume special interest until after the passage of the first Reform Bill. It was always rare, no doubt, but in the unreformed House of Commons a long life, a long purse, and a long rent roll might secure long membership with little or no trouble in the way of contested elections.

Yet there were some remarkable cases even so. Sir George Osborne Morgan came in for the East Denbighshire constituency—(having sat originally for Denbigh) in -285 by originally for Denhigh) in 1885 by family had represented the county uninterruptedly for 177 years.

After the first Reform Act it became more difficult to hold the same seat over long periods owing to the greater severity of elections, and this adds lustre to the record set up by Charles Pelham Villiers. Mr. Villiers was the leading force for reform of the Corn Laws exactly a hundred years ago, when the failure of his attempt to get the whole matter reconsidered set the Anti-Corn Law League in motion. He had then represented Wolverhampton for four years. He retired in 1898 with 63 years of unbroken service, and was able to say at the end of that period that the House had become a more efficient machine, though he found it sometimes a little tedious through the decay of oratory.—Manchester Guardian.

THE THUMBERS

If all motorists, or nearly all, would end the practice of giving rides to thumbers, the thumbing nuisance would soon be a thing of the past. And it would be well to have it this way, not only for the reasons mentioned, but also because of the fact that men and boys —and sometimes girls—standing on streets and highways are a definite menace to traffic. More than one serious accident has happened as motorists have swung their cars trying to avoid striking the thumbers.—Windsor Star.

THE LANDOWNER

I take an absurd pleasure in owning land. It is not for any ostentatious reason, or because I want to be a big landowner lord; but simply because I love the fields and the orchards so much and I want to feel them safely mine. Besides, the terms of the lease delight me. It delights me to read that all the hereditaments colored pink on the map are mine; that one-half of the soil of the bed of the stream known as the Hammer Stream, is mine; that all timberlike trees, sellers and saplings, all minerals, stone, gravel, clay, marl, springs, wells and water-courses, nests, eggs, bares, and wild-fowl are mine; that all hedges shall be properly alashed, laid, and trimmed in a workmanlike manner, nor the size or shape of any field be rendered different without my consent. All this pleases me out of all proportion.—V. Sackville West, in the New Statesman.

LOVELORN INVENTOR

Of the many and varied motives which have moved men to invent, few have been more unusual, or more charged with the element of humor, than that which inspired William Lee, an obscure English curate, to devise the stocking frame.

Shortly after his graduation from St. John's College, in 1583, Lee became curate of Calverton, near Nottingham, and there fell in love with a beautiful and exceedingly industrious young lady. It was this powerful bent toward industry in his beloved, who knitted stockings by hand, which moved the good curate to invent.

Strangely enough, it was not primarily the desire to relieve his lady-love of toil which moved Lee to attempt the devising of a mechanical knitter. No, it seemed that the lady was so occupied with her knitting and her teaching of the art to others that she had little time to listen to his wooing. Rebuffed, the good curate reasoned that if he could invent a machine which would do this work and make hand-knitting unprofitable, she would be more accessible to his pleadings.

It is a testimony to the power of love's inspiration to report that William Lee, with absolutely no training in mechanics, and with apparently little talent for such employment, finally succeeded in devising a highly complicated machine which knitted stockings with amazing efficiency, thereby raising himself to a position as one of the world's greatest and most useful inventors.

No, sad to relate, he did not get the girl. When Lee's invention had provided her with time to listen, she listened to another man. — Christian Science Monitor.

A MOTHER'S GIFT

Twenty odd years ago in Sweden a baby was born with no ears. In every other way he was normal. When the boy was old enough to go to school, he rather enjoyed being a phenomenon, joked about it with his mates. In adolescence he became much more sensitive. He could hear perfectly—but instead of outer ears he had two repulsive stumps.

Girls avoided the young man. He fell desperately in love with one of them, but was afraid to approach her. Naturally, no attractive young woman was going to tie herself for life to an earless young man. He fell to brooding. His devoted mother began to worry about him. She went to Dr. Allan Regnell, distinguished Stockholm plastic surgeon, and asked him if he could remove her own ears, transplant them to the head of her son.

Dr. Regnell said he thought he could. Knowingly accept such a sacrifice, the mother arranged to have him told that his new ears were taken from the victim of an automobile accident. She knew she could conceal the stumps of her ears by covering them with her hair.

The operation was performed and it succeeded. His mother withheld the truth for a while but finally told her son. At first he was horrified, but she calmed him by pointing out that her disfigurement was securely hidden.

Last week the young man and his sweetheart accepted congratulations from their friends; they were engaged to be married. Everyone remarked on what a fine couple they made, though some thought that, for a man, the fiance's ears were a trifle small and delicate.

TEACHERS' WARNING

One rather wonders at the boldness of the leaders of Saskatchewan teachers who have declared that, no matter the price of wheat, no matter the disaster of drought or hail or grasshoppers, no matter what circumstances the chief taxpayers—the farmers—have to face the teacher must be assured a minimum salary of $700 a year else them will "strike." That has a jarring sound and is not likely to get the teachers, as servants of the public anywhere.

Our observation over long years in the west is that when the farmers are prosperous the teachers are fairly well paid and treated, and that when the farmers face calamity as they have done in the past few years in Saskatchewan the teachers have to accept their share of the hardships.

Talk of strike in the face of what Saskatchewan farmers have gone through since 1930 is just plain foolishness.—Lethbridge Herald.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

HOLDING THE BREATH AS A HEART TEST

One of the tests to find condition of the heart in recruits for the air service is holding the breath. A healthy young man can usually hold his breath for forty-five seconds and many 60 or more seconds. If the examiner is not careful, the recruit, unknown to himself, may be allowing small amounts of air to come out by way of his nose although the mouth is kept tightly closed. By closing the nostrils with the fingers, no air can come out and the correct measurement is thus made.

Another test is to have the recruit breathe in and out in a natural manner and after his breath is out he is told to hold his breath and not breathe in. A normal healthy adult can keep from breathing in for as long as 25 to 30 seconds.

Now this is very simple and anybody can make this test on himself by the aid of a watch. The one drawback in this test is that it should be taken under "normal" circumstances, that is, it should not be following a large meal nor after any hard exercise. If a large meal is in the stomach there is not room for the lungs to open up completely at the bottom. Thus some athletes (wrestlers) eat nothing after 2 p.m. with there bout at 9. p.m. If hard exercise has been taken, there is a lack of deficiency of oxygen in the blood (the system has gone into debt for oxygen for minutes or hours) and so oxygen will be needed in a shorter time than if the blood contained its usual amount of oxygen. The individual just has to breathe sooner under these circumstances.

Of course, practice enables one to hold the breath for longer periods; some swimmers are able to hold their breath under water for minutes at a time.

The thought then is that if you are young and healthy and try these simple tests when you are rested and have not recently eaten you should be able to hold your breath 40 to 45 seconds after a 'deep' breath inwards, and 20 to 25 seconds after an ordinary breath outwards.

When one has been without food for many hours, an acid condition arises which lessens the oxygen in the blood and breathing must be done more often. Also when infection is present (teeth, tonsils), the breath cannot be held so long.

The Nascopie sailed later on the second leg of her annual trip to far northern Hudson's Bay Company posts and Royal Canadian Mounted Police detachments along the shores of the Arctic Ocean as far north as Fort Ross, most northern point on the continent approximately 1,000 miles due north of here.

A number of American tourists who boarded the Nascopie at Montreal left the ship here and others joined her for the balance of the journey which will occupy about two months and finally land them at Halifax.

Among passengers who boarded the supply vessel here were Dr. J. Melling and his wife from Edmonton, going to Chesterfield, 300 miles north to take the position of his brother, Dr. W. Melling, fills as resident doctor at the Roman Catholic Mission Hospital.

Among missionaries arriving on the Nascopie were Rev. A. H. Turner and Mrs. Turner and baby daughter who have spent six years in Anglican mission service and are now on their way to England for a holiday and rest.

A number of friends from here attended the funeral of the late Mrs. Leslie Broad at Bancroft on Monday.

Miss Mary Munro is spending a few days with Mrs. Russell Whyte.

Mrs. Russell Whyte spent Thursday with Mrs. Robert Blakely.

TRY IT THE "SALADA" WAY
Infuse 6 heaping teaspoons of Salada Black Tea in a pint of fresh, boiling water. After 6 minutes strain liquid into 2-quart container; while hot, add 1 to 1½ cups of sugar and juice of 2 lemons, strained; stir until sugar is dissolved; fill container with cold water. Do not allow tea to cool before adding cold water or liquid will become cloudy. Serve with chipped ice. The above makes 7 tall glasses.

CITY'S ALBINO ROBIN NOW IN REDNERSVILLE

Belleville's albino robin which was sighted at regular intervals on residential streets of the east hill last year, has apparently taken up residence in the Rednersville district of Prince Edward Couhay. Edward Luton, a resident of that section, reports seeing the bird frequently along the high shore road, living a lonely life apparently shunned by other birds of his own species, and hobnobbing with sparrows.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

SHE MARRIED A MISER

Dear Miss Fairfax

I married a widower with two children. He is well-to-do, has property, stocks, bonds and cash. Also, he is a miser with no thought of anything but money. He gives me fifteen dollars a week from which I have to pay everything—clothes, food, milk, gas and electric bills, insurance and all other incidentals.

Half the time I have to borrow money from my sister and mother to keep things going. If I buy something expensive, I must pay more than it's worth, because I have to buy it on the budget plan. When I talk to him and tell him he's making a drudge of me, he tells me that he keeps a roof over my head and gives me enough to eat. He is equally callous to his two children, of whom I am very fond. I would like to see them have a chance.

Wife-Drudge

Well, my dear, I'm not going to quote anything nasty about water reaching its own level, but it seems to me when the wife of a well-to-do man finds herself in your plight, it's her own fault to a large degree. I've heard only your side of the story, but granting that it's the true side, I'd begin my domestic reforms at once.

Another one of my correspondents had the same problem as yours. Her husband was a miser with no real interests in life but hoarding. She slaved for him for twelve years, then she began to charge things, and her rich husband had no choice but to pay the bills as his name stood for a good deal in the community. What suggestions have my readers for domestic tight-wads?

AGAIN, THE DATE-BREAKER

Dear Miss Fairfax

We are both 17 and in high school. My club gave a party last June and I invited him, giving him plenty of time in which to give his answer. He finally told me he would call for me at my home, but didn't show up. He had a party a couple of nights later, but I didn't go to it, just to pay him back. This made him angry and we didn't speak for about a month.

Now our club is having a picnic, and I don't know whether I ought to invite him or not. I know loads of other boys, but they're all much older, and I'm afraid I'd be making a fool of myself if I asked them. The excuse this boy friend gave me for not coming to my party was that he was ill in bed and didn't have my phone number. Is this a good excuse?

One of the girls I know said he asked her to the same party to which he invited me, but she refused. When I asked him about this, he denied it. Do you suppose the girl is jealous? Whom should I believe?

M. T.

Well, my dear, when a young man accepts an invitation to take a girl to a party and then doesn't show up, saying he was sick in bed and didn't have her phone number, it's safe to say he'll never write good fiction owing to a lack of imagination. Since you have a phone he could have looked up your number in the phone book. Or, if it wasn't listed, he could have got busy and asked some of your friends for it, couldn't he?

Sometimes it is well to have a heart. I told a girl not to accept a date from a boy who has broken an appointment. And then came a letter from the boy. He told me when he was ready to go to pick up the girl for the party, his father yelled at him to come back and do some domestic chore, which just knocked him out of the party, and he was too ashamed to tell the girl the real reason.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

ARE YOU PROUD OF YOUR GUEST ROOM?

Has your guest room a come-hither personality? If you are a hostess who is given to hospitality you will be proud when you show your guest into the guest room. First, it will be charming to look at, and then it will be comfortable to stay in.

It's a traditional and excellent piece of advice to suggest that the hostess who really has the comfort of her guests at heart, should make a point of spending a night as a guest in her own guest room. That will show her just how pleasant and comfortable a room it is, and how adequately it is equipped to meet a guest's requirements.

Don't jump to the conclusion that I'm going to set forth a list of luxuries for your guest room . . . these concern you and your individual budgets. But what I would like to do is to talk with you about certain details that you may have forgotten to provide. And, far from being expensive luxuries, many of them may be garnered in the basement of your favorite department store or in the five-and-ten.

The first necessity is a comfortable bed, freshly-made of course, with one medium hard and one soft pillow, with sufficient blankets and with one extra blanket or comfortable on the closet shelf.

The bureau drawers should be empty, and each drawer should be lined with fresh white paper. (Luxury note: sometimes padded satin or silk linings are placed in the lower drawers.) In one of the small drawers the thoughtful hostess puts a tray with plain and safety pins of various sizes, and perhaps a compact box of sewing equipment. On the top of the bureau may be one or two decorative items (a pair of lamps, for instance) but mainly the top should be left uncluttered, to provide space for the guest's own toilet articles.

On the bed-side table should be a shaded light, at good reading-height, a book or two, one or two current magazines (current, remembered), a carafe on a tray with a small glass and perhaps a spoon, a cigarette box (with fresh cigarettes), matches and ash-tray.

No family oddities stored in the closet, please! With a minimum of budget you can equip your closet so that it will be an artistic delight, gay, practical, too. Colorful shelf-edging. A generous supply of various types of hangers, shoetrees, skirt and trouser hangers, hatstands. And perhaps you'd like to follow the custom of some hostesses and leave in the closet an inexpensive terry cloth (washable) bathrobe and a pair of terry cloth slippers, for the forgetful or unexpected guest.

If the guest room hasn't its individual bathroom, the hostess sets aside, in the family bath-room, a special rack for the guest's towels (bath towels, hand towels, face cloths) and a shelf for the guest's soap dish, drinking glass, and toilet articles. On the tub ledge should be a small scrub-brush or cleaning cloth for the tub. In the bath-room should be a box of cleansing tissues, a box of powder puffs, a box of absorbent cotton.

Most hostesses keep on hand now a make-up box (any attractive box will serve) with trial-sizes, from the five-and-ten-cent store, of various beauty aids, hand lotion, shaving cream, and so forth; a comb; an inexpensive tooth-brush in a cellophane wrapper; an inexpensive razor.

Other equipment suggestions — a clock, preferably an alarm clock, and essentially one that is running and that runs; a clothesbrush; an electric pad or hot water bottle; a luggage rack; a waste basket; cigarettes, ash-trays, matches. And in many guest rooms these days, and especially in those where the beds must be placed so that the light glares in the guest's eyes, we find that the hostess has thoughtfully provided eye-shades.

As the final welcoming touch, put flowers in the room. One or two flowers in a ten-cent bud-vase will show the right spirit!

Shun the "Gabber's Face"

By HELEN FOLLETT

WATCH OUT for the gabber's face! Too much chattering uses up energy; even facial muscles can get tired. It seems sometimes as if the whole world of men, women and children were eternally talking. That is why the young lady who uses restraint makes a big hit with the fellers. She let's them have the floor. They think she's a dandy companion.

This may be the explanation why so many smart men marry dumb women. George Moore, the writer, once said that he enjoyed being with a stupid woman; he found her company restful. No clever woman is too revealing; he keeps her thoughts to herself. Then she does not take a chance of being a bore.

Character and habits have! so much to do with appearance that this preacher of pulchritude feels at liberty to include them as subjects for sermons. She deplores the practice of the girl who talks too intimately about herself and her own affairs, wears her heart on her sleeve. The sensitive listener hates it, suffers a feeling of embarrassment. Wives who complain about the habits and late hours kept by their husbands should be included among the tiresome chatterers. Who cares when Daddy came home? Nobody but the frantic wife of his bosom.

If one must be a confirmed talker, one should choose interesting subjects and not make facial grimaces, a habit that is all too common. It digs in premature wrinkles and it makes other people jittery.

If your hip and bust measurements are about the same, and your waist measurement nine or ten inches smaller, you are qualified for the nipped-in styles resurrected from the Naughty Nineties.

VIRGINIA GREY

Has a pleasant voice and a pleasant smile

To be as hipless as a snake is to have no figure worth mentioning. From the waistline downward there should be a charming curve, not abrupt, of course, and there must be a neat slant from hip to thigh. Work for the graceful silhouette, which work consists of sticking to a balanced diet with fats and sweets restricted, and by doing such exercises each day as give a good muscle work-out to the midsection of the body.

The inclination as one grows older is to put on weight. It can't happen if diet is right and muscles have daily activity.

Weddings

PITTS—WOODS

On Tuesday, August 1, a very pretty wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred B. Woods when their daughter, Reta Pearl, was united in marriage to Mr. James Arthur Pitts, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Pitts, Madoc. The ceremony was performed at twelve o'clock noon by Rev. L. W. Scott in the presence of immediate relatives.

The bride, given in marriage by her father took her place under the bridal arch, as the Wedding March was played by Miss Peggy Ketcheson. The bride looked charming in a long dress of white net over taffeta with a lace bolero.

During the signing of the register a very beautiful solo "O Promise Me", was sung by Mrs. L. W. Scott accompanied by Miss Peggy Ketcheson.

A lovely dinner was served by cousins of the bride, after which the happy couple left on a trip to Windsor and Detroit. For travelling the bride wore a dress of Queen's blue with navy coat, hat and accessories. On their return they will reside at Madoc.

IS YOUR BABY GETTING A TOOTH?

YOUR BABY must "get a tooth". But he need not get a fever with it—if baby's mother is wise he won't.

Here is what one wise mother, Mrs. Archie Begble, of Consecon, has to say: "We have not lost one night's rest through teething as I always use my old standby, Baby's Own Tablets. They are worth their weight in gold."

And Mrs. B. A. Sebine, of Galt, Ont., says: "I have given Baby's Own Tablets to my baby girl since she was three weeks old and, although she cut her teeth rapidly (all four molars at once) she has never yet wakened us at night. I would not be without these tablets."

Give these safe, sweet-tasting tablets at the first sign of teething fever. Easy to take, prompt in action, yet safe. Analyst's certificate in every package.

Also effective in Constipation, Simple Fever, Diarrhoea, Upset Stomach, Colic, Simple Croup and Fretfulness. Get a box today. Sickness so often strikes in the night. 25 cents. Money back if you are not satisfied.

AT THE BELLE

"Young Mr. Lincoln"

The thrilling, romantic, eventful youth of Abe Lincoln makes Darryl F. Zanuck's production of "Young Mr. Lincoln" next at the Belle Theatre complete screen surprise and excellent entertainment, according to advance reports based on "sneak screenings" of the unusual film.

Ignoring the great Lincoln with whom everyone is familiar, this Cosmopolitan production for 20th Century-Fox is a photoplay stirring with its drama, action and emotion; it depicts young Abe wrestling, fighting, telling funny stories, falling in love. The highlight of the original screen play by Lamar Trotti shows the young lawyer defying two innocent boys, in the famous "moonlight murder" trial—young Lincoln's first challenge.

This is a Lincoln few people are familiar with. At the age of 28 he was a gangling, brawny-armed youth, a shy young lover and a "regular fellow." Covering approximately seven years of his youth, the film culminates in the frontier trial.

Re-enacting the best of the famous Lincoln anecdotes, the film is highlighted by such lines as:

To the lynch mob: "I'm not going to make any speeches. All I've got to say is: I can lick any man here hands down!"

To Mary Todd, on the dance floor: "I'd like to dance with you in the worst way, Miss Todd; but any dancing I'd do would be the worst way!"

And during the famous "moonlightmurder" trial: "How can a mother choose which son shall live, which shall die?"

Directed by John Ford, the film features Henry Fonda in the title role, Alice Brady as the mother of the accused boys, Marjorie Weaver as Mary Todd and Arleen Whelan. Included in the cast are Eddie Collins, Pauline Moore as Ann Rutledge, Richard Cromwell, Donald Meek, Doris Bowdon and Eddie Quillan.

"Mr. Moto Takes a Vacation"

Even when Mr. Moto takes a vacation, the famous Saturday Evening Post sleuth is still on the job.

Ann Sheridan in "Naughty But Nice," at the Belle Theatre.

As a matter of fact, he meets his most exciting adventures to date in "Mr. Moto Takes a Vacation," the latest of the 20th Century-Fox thrillers, starring Peter Lorre, announced as the companion feature.

The new film takes him to the Arabian desert where, menaced by the curse of an ancient tomb and cornered by arch-criminals of two continents, he solves two murders and provides safe escort for the fabulous crown jewels of the Queen of Sheba. A nice vacation!

Joseph Schildkraut, Lionel Atwill, Virginia Field, John King and Iva Stewart head the supporting cast.

"Naughty But Nice"

Romance, fun, action, thrills galore, are introduced in the two hit program now at the Belle. Ann Sheridan, Dick Powell, Gale Page, Helen Broderick, Allen Jenkins, Zasu Pitts and Ronald Reagan are featured in "Naughty But Nice."

John Russell, Jane Bryan and Charley Grapewin are featured in "The Man Who Dared," the companion feature attraction. The Belle News of the Day is exhibited on the same program.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Wuthering Heights"

With Merle Oberon and Laurence Olivier heading the large cast, "Wuthering Heights" is now at the McCarthy Theatre and without fail, you should see this truly glorious picture before it leaves Belleville.

Based on the world-famous novel by Emily Bronte of the same name, it is a story of love and hate, romance and revenge and... also of beauty. It unfolds on the wild, desolate moors of the Yorkshire country. It peers into the lives of five people whose destinies become strangely entangled through a series of weird episodes. Merle Oberon as Cathy, a highly emotional, high-spirited beauty, turns in one of the most unforgettable performances the screen has ever known. Laurence Olivier, star of 'Clouds Over Europe' in the role of a brooding, fearsome, half-gypsy, fulfils a character of great difficulty with consummate insight and power. The other important members of the cast include David Niven, Flora Robson and Geraldine Fitzgerald. Samuel Goldwyn produced "Wuthering Heights" and in every respect this four star hit surpasses his many former successes including "Goldwyn Follies", "The Cowboy and the Lady", "Dead End", "Hurricane" and even "Stella Dallas". Again we urge you, see "Wuthering Heights" during its present engagement now at the McCarthy Theatre. A perfect selection of added featurette entertainment precedes "Wuthering Heights" at each performance.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Kidneys Perform Vital Life Function

Many types of diseases result from the neglect of chronic infections in the nose and throat. Most of them are local in character but some affect other parts of the system as well. One such ailment which often strikes children is a disease of the kidneys known as nephritis.

In order to understand something about nephritis, I think we should first know something about the structure and function of the kidneys.

The kidneys are two oval bodies lying on either side, of the spine, their upper parts protected by the ribs. Each has a large, funnel-shaped collecting tube—the kidneys pelvis—connected to it. This funnel dumps its contents into the bladder through a long, narrow tube called the ureter.

Unlike any other organ in the body, the kidney is made up of many separate organs, each complete in itself. The kidneys' duty in the system is to remove from the blood all the poisonous substances, leaving only those substances which are necessary for life. To do this, each one of the separate organs goes to work. Each one is made up of a small, rounded sac into which the tiny blood vessels empty from this there is a tube through which the waste products are passed into the kidney pelvis on the way to the bladder.

Into this small, rounded sac, called the glomerulus, the waste products which the body wants thrown off are dumped by the blood vessels. These products pass through the membrane and down the tubule. In addition to the waste products which pass through the glomerulus, there are also many materials which must be retained in the blood if the child is to remain healthy. In the normal functioning of the kidneys, these materials are re-absorbed by the blood through the walls of the tubules which the waste products pass on.

We see that each of these tiny organs in the kidneys has two duties to perform. First, it must remove the waste poisons and waste from the blood; second, it must see that necessary materials are returned to the blood stream, and not allowed to go on to the bladder.

Each kidney is composed of millions of these tiny organs, each separate and independent. In fact, these organs are so numerous that we don't need them all the average person has about five or six times as many as he absolutely needs. The only time a person uses all these little tubules is when he is putting forth a great deal of exertion. For instance, I imagine that when a marathon runner has completed his twenty-six miles he is using most of his kidney tissues.

In nephritis, these organs are damaged. If only a few are out of commission, the disease may pass unnoticed, with the other millions of tubules carrying on as usual. But if a great many of them are damaged, you can see what happens—materials which should be taken from the blood and passed to the bladder will be retained. On the other hand, good body-building material, which should be retained and passed back to the blood; will be passed off with the urine.

Tweed

Tweed — Mr. Paul Rashotte has been awarded the contract for the stone work and masonry of the new Separate School and Mr. Joseph Rashotte the contract for the carpentry. Work will commence this week and it is expected that the new school will be ready for occupation with the opening of the winter term following the Christmas holidays.

The usual success attended St. Carthagh's annual social held at Memorial Park on Wednesday. There was a large crowd at the supper and the dance which followed.

The softball series between Tweed and Havelock is all tied up again at two games each, with the final game in Deloro. On Friday night Tweed was defeated by the one-sided score of 16-4 at Havelock. Brunton had complete control of the situation, only Gerald Wagar being able to solve his delivery, getting two singles and a double. Davidson, Tweed's ace pitcher, had an off-night and his offerings were no puzzle to the homesters.

Dr. Francis J. McCue of Walkerton, last week established a medical practise in Tweed and will occupy the offices formerly occupied by Drs. Mather and Locke. He is a graduate of Toronto University.

Rainfall in Tweed for the month of July was 4.13 inches, about 20 per cent. above the average of 3.35 inches for the month. The heaviest rainfall occurred on July 29th. when the precipitation amounted to 1.73 inches. During the first 25 days only .64 inches of rain fell, and during the remaining six days, 3.39 inches fell.

LEADERSHIP IN QUALITY . . . PLUS
LEADERSHIP IN NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING

Just say "Kellogg's" to your grocer!
Kellogg's
CORN FLAKES

Here's how the marvellous Kellogg flavour was advertised—through daily newspapers—in 1926

Tempting sleepy appetites is just one of the THREE THINGS YOUR BREAKFAST MUST DO . . .
Breakfast should be a "starting-up" meal
1
wake your system up!

GET A HEAD START WITH Kellogg's
CORN FLAKES

An entirely new story about the old favourite is presented in Kellogg's 1939 newspaper advertisements.

Kellogg's
CORN FLAKES

KELLOGG'S unswerving policy has been to give maximum value of quality products.

At the same time, it has long followed a consistent course of bringing its story into Canadian homes . . . from Halifax to Vancouver : : . through Canadian daily newspapers.

The newspapers of Canada have been an immense force in making the name "Kellogg's" one of the best and the most trusted names in Canadian homes.

Indeed, they have done far more than that!

By greatly increasing the demand for Kellogg products, they have made it possible for the Kellogg Company to introduce increasingly better methods of cereal manufacture : : : higher and higher quality products : : : ever more sanitary packaging, which brings these cereals oven-fresh to Canadian kitchens.

With all this emphasis on quality, the Kellogg Company has kept down prices to the consumer so that—amazing as it may seem—Kellogg's Corn Flakes, Canada's most popular breakfast, actually cost less than one penny for a generous serving!

"Canucks are Swell" Says "Pops" Cooper, Veteran U.S. Champion Speedboat Driver

Proud to Establish World Record for Straightaway Mile on Canadian Water

"GET 'POPS' COOPER"

Thrills of Speedboat Driving Told Kiwanis Club Yesterday

"You Canucks are swell. It was the proudest moment of my life when I established the world's record over a mile straightaway course in Canada. Those United States drivers will likely try to beat that mark, but if they do I'll come back to Canada and win it back for you." Thus spoke Jackie "Pops" Cooper, fifty-nine (he says so himself) year-old world famous speedboat driver, at the Kiwanis Club luncheon yesterday.

The silver-haired veteran of the water-speedways, immaculately dressed, who hails from Kansas City, Missouri, adopted a new role yesterday, although he modestly belittled his own efforts when he laughingly told the club in his best Missouri drawl, "you fellows must be hard up for speakuhs."

All the color and glamor, the danger and thrills that go to make the everyday life of a speed-boat driver a hazardous one were vividly portrayed by the champion of the mile straightaway courses.

World's Title

He told in a manner as colorful as his own spectacular efforts behind the wheel of his favorite "Tops III" of his attempts to wrest the world's title from competitors; of how the first record was established at 70 miles per hour, gradually increasing until he made the present mark of 87, and a fraction at Picton this year.

He described the construction of the hydroplane boats, how they "take off like a plane at times to hurtle through the air sometimes thirty feet before "pancaking" to the water's surface."

"There are always two outstanding boats each year in the 225 first division class," he smiled. Last year it was George Cannon, of Rockledge, Florida, and himself. This year it was all in favor of George Schraft, Newton, Mass., whose "Chrissie III" led him to the wire in two of the three heats in Monday's Belleville Rotary Yacht Club regatta classic.

Tribute to Schraft

"He thinks he has the fastest boat, and naturally I think I have" he laughed. "George is young and a splendid driver. He has boat that is a ball of fire. He won thirteen straight races until we met in New Jersey this year. I beat him in six heats, and again at Havre De Grass. In the International race at Port Carling, we forgot about the U.S.A. and Canada, and went after each other. I beat him there," grinned the youthful "Pops."

The cry of the 252 division drivers in both the U.S.A. and Canada is "Get 'Pops' Cooper" he said, "it seems to be the height of their ambition. Well, Schraft got me yesterday, but I think I have three miles per hour on his boat."

The splendid sportsmanship that is one of "Pops" chief characteristics was exemplified Monday, when judges threatened to disqualify Schraft for allegedly fouling Cooper near the last buoy. The gray-haired driver rose to his rival's defence. "He may have crowded me a mite, but he is young and did not do it intentionally" he declared. "However, if Schraft is disqualified, I will not race in the second heat." The judges promptly forgot the incident.

"The next time we get in smooth water, we'll see who has the faster boat," "Pops" grinned. "We meet soon at Redlands, then watch "Tops III" travel."

Suggests New Starting Line

He thought the Rotary Yacht Club course was grand, but suggested that the start and finish line be placed about halfway between the first and last buoy on the south straightaway.

"The water on the back stretch was 'kickin' up' a bit" he laughed. Once, "Tops" took off and sailed through the air thirty feet before coming down. My tachometer, needle was an inch past the 6,000 revs per minute mark, so she must have been turning close to seven thousand. When a boat hits the water after doing this, the strain is terrific. A strut might break, a prop go, or you might go over, but they are just some of the thrills."

The speaker was introduced by Kiwanian Eddie Logan while the club's appreciation of the colorful talk was expressed by Kiwanian Sid Howell.

To the vote extended to speaker by President Dick Flynn, "Pops" smiled his thanks, and said, "that is spoken like true Canadians."

WITH THE LAWN BOWLERS

by

GEO. E. WATKIN

It has been in my mind for some time to bring before our club members my personal opinion of our district tournaments, on Monday in Kingston there were over forty teams of doubles of these only eight were from outside points. Belleville and Madoc were the only clubs represented from this district the other teams were from the east, "Otawa district." What I want to point out is this that we might far better have had a tournament of our own and have given our members a good day's sport, but because Kingston had the date we were unable to do so and all that took in the Kingston game were three ladies and the same number of men from our club. In the meantime just one hundred players were out of luck. Had a tournament been staged on Monday in the form of a picnic I venture to say there would have been very few vacant greens and our new players which is fifty percent of our membership would have enjoyed themselves. It is the same old crowd that take in these district games and because of them 95 percent of the members are deprived of a good many days at real sport. As long as we continue to belong to the Provincial Association, this condition will exist. I would ask our officers to give this matter there careful consideration before the next district meeting.

On Friday evening of this week there will be another invitation jitney, everyone keep the date and a good time is assured.

On Wednesday, Aug. 16th our annual mixed rink tournament takes place, get your team made up, we need twelve teams from our own club.

Is there a star in your crown, if not see Harold he has a few left. "Give the devil his dues?"

The Tip Top cup is in the hands of Ernie Vanner and Doug Row. They took it from Watkin and Harper without any trouble. Joe Black and Alf Symons are now after it and if history repeats they should land it.

Peterboro had sixty-four rinks on Monday "men." That is really a crowd.

There has been more real games in our club this year than I have seen since I became a member. Great credit is due Harvey and his crew. "Gosh that nearly rhymes."

Six little pigs went to Kingtson
They might just as well have stayed at home,
The Kingston pigies took all the roast beef
The Belleville little pigies got none.
Laura, Edith and Annie said we-we-we I want some.

In Kingston on Monday Mrs. Robson and yours truly played fourteen full ends and the score was 7 to 6. This I think is the lowest score I have ever known. We each scored one each for six ends, two ends were killed and on the last end we got a break and really scored two. You will see it would be impossible to score less and win.

TORONTO LEAFS WIN 5-INNINGS GAME 2 TO 1

In a race as closely contested as the present International League campaign, where only three games separate first and fourth place, a victory can make a lot of difference.

That's why Dick Porter, manager, threatened to go to the league President with his protest when the umps called the Syracuse-Toronto game at the end of the fifth with Toronto ahead by 2-1.

Dick didn't think a duck should have been out in weather like that in which they played the last two innings, let alone his ball team. The Chiefs are in second place now and Porter thinks that loss might loom awfully large in the win-lose column at the season's end.

All the game's scoring was done in the first inning. The Chiefs scored their lone tally when Taylor's hard drive to centre sent Harig home and the Leafs' Mayo Smith contributed the winning blow—a two baser—to right centre to score the winning run. They pushed across the tying count before a man was retired.

Hurls 1 Hitter

Probably Rochester's Elwin (Preacher) Roe would like to complain to league prexy Frank Shaughnessy, too. He was headed straight for baseball's hall of fame—a no hitter—when Gene Corbett of the Baltimore Orioles doubled down the left field line for the game's only hit. Roe beat the Orioles 4-1 but he would have much preferred a no hitter to just another victory. In the first game Roy Bruner pitched a five hitter to beat Rochester 5-1.

Montreal Royals staved off relegation to the league cellar by splitting a doubleheader with the league leading Jersey City Giants, losing the opener 8-0 but taking the nightcap 6-5.

The timely hitting of Joe Becker provided the game's winning spark for the Royals in the second game. In the opener the Jerseys got all their runs in the first four innings and then coasted home behind Roy Joiner's six hit pitching.

Buffalo Bisons topped Newark Bears, 7-3 for the second straight time to advance within a half game of the second place Syracuse Chiefs.

Sports Roundup

New York, Aug. 9 (AP)—Cincinnati Reds aren't accepting world's series reservations but five of 'em have signed for a vaudeville tour after the world's series....Gus Mancuso went behind the plate for the Cubs the other day and Chicago writers immediately began to speculate on whether Manager Hartnett had consigned catcher Hartnett to the doghouse.

The glamorous Kay Stammers is back again which accounts for all that ah, ah-ing around the tennis clubs....Prof. Casey Stengel will be today's baseball lecturer at the world's fair.....Headline in the New York Post: Giants need more wings and another year to catch Reds....Chicago Bears again are denying they'll trade Sid Luckman to the football Dodgers....Bunny Austin is telling them on the coast Don Budge possibly is the greatest tennis player the world has ever known.

Henry Armstrong's book, "The Glory Road," is just about finished ....Al Todd, the Dodger catcher, is also a football referee....Pitching is nothing new for Jimmy double-x ....When the big leaguers toured Japan they had only four pitchers and Foxx usually worked three or four innings a game.....Lefty Gomez says he has a lot of stuph.. Young Corbett, the former welterweight king may come out of retirement to fight Al Hostak .... The gossips say Joe DiMaggio isn't the only American League star who'll be marying right after the season ends.

Senators Ride on Crest of Eight-Game Winning Streak, Hand Yankees 7 to 5 Loss

Both Yanks and Reds Lose and Appear Jittery Under Pressure

YANKS LEAD CUT

Reds Have Only Won One Game in Last Eight Starts Lead Cut to 7½ Games

(By Sid Feder, Associated Press Sports Writer).

Things change in the baseball world and the current worry today, for those who like "sure things" appear to be whether New York Yankees and Cincinnati Reds are the "shooin" for the world series that they were rated a few days ago.

At this writing there's no immediate danger of their getting knocked off the top spots but to say the least they both look jittery.

A couple of other things that fooled the experts and has them wondering now are Washington Senators and Chicago White Sox.

The Senators were supposed to be lucky—if they finished any distance out of the cellar, despite the friendly presence of Athletics and Browns in the American League. Yet right now they're riding along on an eight-game winning streak, the latest a 7-4 decision over the Yanks in yesterday's campaigning, which cut the champions league lead to a mere seven games.

The Reds were supposed to be the only outfit in the National League with enough class to get the rating as a big league club. Yet Will McKechnie's men are suffering from their worst case of jitters of the season right this minute, barely managed to split a doubleheader with the Chicago Cubs yesterday and can boast, if they want to, about a record of just three victories in their last eight starts, which has shaved their lead to 7 1-2 games.

White Sox in 3rd.

The White Sox are still way up there in third place where, on paper, they don't belong. Yet, with the 5-3 win over Detroit Tigers that they pulled out of the hat yesterday, behind Johnny Rigney's elegant elbowing, they are no worse than even with every club in the league except the Yankees on the season's play.

McKechnie's hopes of clearing up the Reds' jutters didn't bet much help yesterday when Harry Craft, who plays a lot of centre field from them, when into a hospital just as Ival Goodman came out for the first time since the all-star game. Craft collided with Lee Gamble chasing a fly in the first game, which the Cubs won 7-3 to end Bucky Walters' eight-game winning streak, and with a slight concussion. In the nightcap Buck McCormick's single in the 10th inning provided a 7-5 victory.

Lefty Grove Wins

The Reds' haven't much to brag about today, but they can boast that their pennant lead is once more larger than the Yankees' edge. Since the second place Red Sox topped the Athletics 9-2 on the left arm of old Mose Grove and the two-homer bat of Jimmy Foxx, the world champions lost a full game for their lead.

In the only other game on the big league program, Hugh Mulcahy tossed an eight-hit pitching performance which gave the Phillies a 3-2 night game decision, over Brooklyn Dodgers, to snap the Phils' 10 game losing streak.

BOXING BALLYHOO IN FULL SWING FOR HEAVIES

(By Gayle Talbot Associated Press Sports Writer).

New York, Aug. 9 (AP)—The heavyweight fight situation dormant for six weeks since Joe Louis gave Tony Galento his lumps, begins stirring today with the arrival in the east of Lou Nova to start training for his Sept. 7 date with Tony in Philadelphia.

The ballyhoo will be going full blast from now right through to Sept. 21, when Louis defends his title against Bob Pastor in a 20-rounder at Detroit, and by that time the principals will have been nominated for a $1,000,000 spectacle next-summer.

Nova is pitching his camp at Atlantic City, and will stay there until the day he climbs into the ring with Galento. The young California doesn't trust Philadelphia much. Tony, long a favorite with Philly fans, plans to train for a spell at Madame Bey's in his own New Jersey and then move into Philadelphia to polish up his footwork for about a week.

Nova and his manager, Ray Carlen, are convinced they will stop Galento before the fourth round, thus beating Louis' record in that respect. Otherwise they never would have been talked into fighting the buxom barkeep in Philadelphia, even with a neutral referee. Either Arthur Donovan of New York or George Blake of Los Angles will be the third man in the ring.

"I never was as sure of a fight as I am of this one," said Carlen. "If I'm mistaken about this one I'll get into another business."

GIBBARDS TROUNCE FLYERS 9 to 4

Napanee, Aug. 9—With the second playoff position safely tucked away, Napanee breezed to an easy 9 to 4 win here last night over Trenton Fliers in their scheduled game in the Bay of Quinte Intermediate "A" Baseball League.

Napanee put the game on ice in the second inning when ten men faced Dole, knocking out six hits for as many runs. Gerow led the local attack with a triple, double and single in three times up. He left the game in the fifth after straining his leg going into second.

Oleskevis on first for the Fliers only had put two put outs in seven innings. Collins relieved Dole in the third and allowed but one run and three hits for the remainder. Benn and Oleskevis tripled deep to the outfield in the sixth when Fliers coupled their only hits in a single inning. Len Crawford, former Kingston junior hockey star, caught the game for the visitors. He had one hit in three times up.

WEIGHT BUSINESS MUCH WEIGHTIER FOR ARMSTRONG

New York, Aug. 9 (CP)—It seems the weight question is getting weightier than ever for Henry Armstrong and it may develop that two crown Henry will be defending his welterweight boxing championship instead of the lightweight crown, as scheduled, against Lou Ambers Aug. 22.

Manager Eddie Mead came up with this idea yesterday after Armstrong went through a workout at his camp at Pompton Lakes, N.J., and showed few signs of shedding weight.

When Henry hit camp 10 days ago he weighed 144 pounds. After yesterday's brisk training session he weighed 141 1-4 which leaves him with six pounds to shed to make the lightweight limit during the next two weeks.

Mead said he would wait one more week and that if Armstrong did not reduce easily enough in that time he would go before the State Athletic Commission next Tuesday and give up the lightweight title, at the same time asking permission to defend the welterweight crown.

Now that the tumult and shouting and sharpe staccato reports of sea fleas and outboards have died down and sharp staccato reports of sea Quinte have returned to tranquility following Monday's Rotary Regatta, generally speaking Belleville says "thank you Rotarians for a splendid day's entertainment." The next outstanding feature will be the opening of the new motorcycle speedway track out in Thurlow Township, sponsored by the Quinte Motorcycle Club. Incidentally "Pops" Cooper, of Kansas City, Mo., remained over yesterday to be the guest speaker at the Kiwanis Club.

It may be news to some power boat addicts, but Jackie Cooper, with his Tops 3rd, had beaten the Chrissie 2nd, Monday's winner, on eight previous occasions. "Pops" Cooper had nothing but praise and good wishes for Canadians and especially the Belleville Rotary Yacht Club. "You've got a fine course and you can rest assured of a good entry list from all parts of the continent another year," warmly assured Cooper as he pulled out for New Jersey and another big regatta meet today.

However, Bob Jaite, the 79-year-old veteran driver of Apache 2nd, had slightly different views when we talked with him in the pits at Massassaga on Monday after Jaite had "cracked up" his boat while beaching it. "At the upper turn the buoy is too close to that "rocky point. Then in those narrows at the west end there's a strong current. However, by moving the entire course down the bay a couple of hundred yards, you people would have as ideal a course as could be expected," suggested Jaite as he viewed the natural sloping accommodations for spectators immediately east of the starting barge of Monday's races. Of course Mr. Jaite appreciated the fact the local sponsors were novices, but another year and we are satisfied the Belleville Rotary Yacht Club Regatta will be second to none on this continent.

Jack Cooper, not the power boat driver, but Belleville's own Jack Cooper of Canadian weightlifting fame, has a surprise in store for those attending the matched weightlifting contest between him and Bill Milne, the Ontario champion, at the Y.M.C.A. Thursday night. Milne, a Toronto lifter, is bringing along Jack Edwards, the crack Toronto light-heavyweight lifter as an added attraction. Milne has officially lifted 750 pounds, all three lifts, in competition. Unofficially, however, Cooper has sucessfully hoisted 779 pounds, three lifts, and hopes to make it official tomorrow. Incidentally Jack Cooper is aspiring to be selected on the Ontario weight-lifting team to compete at Buffalo soon and a win for him over Milne here would practically assure him of a berth on the team.

The latter part of last week the Kiwanis mustballers met and defeated the Y's Men in the "No Kick" softball league finals at the Collegiate grounds. Paced by Bruce Lattimer, who cuffed out three circuit blows, the Kiwanis said it with extra base hits, we hear and are now softball champions of all they view. Taking into consideration the Kiwanis nine languished the greater part of the season's schedule in the league cellar, their play-off splurge to a league championship was all the more noteworthy.

They're still up in the air regarding umpires for the Corbys-Shell fifth and final game. It seems that over the week end Ken Edgecombe, City Softball executive and league umpire-deluxe, journeyed to Napanee, where he employed two neutral arbiters at an agreed salary. However, the Gibbardville umps. communicated with Mr. Edgecombe yesterday demanding more remuneration, or else. Ken wasn't being bluffed and replied: "O.K.—it's or else as far as you're concerned and we'll get along without you very well." Early today executive-member Edgecoombe was endeavouring to procure a pair of neutral umps from Trenton or Brighton. In the meantime the players and spectators won't be bothered with too much dust at the Flats tonight.

Dole, the R.C.A.F. newly-found pitcher of a week old, proved no mystery to Walt Gerow's Gibbards at Napanee yesterday as the homesters won 9-4, shelling Dole from the Flyers' hilltop in the fifth inning after a six-run barrage in the second. Switzer hurled five hit ball for the winning home team. Len Crawford, recently-acquired hockey star from Kingston donned the catcher's equipment for the Airmen. According to schedule the Flyers journey to Picton today and meet Belleville on the Aerodrome Thursday. The Bay of Quinte race is about settled insofar as the play-off berths are concerned, with the exception of the third slot position, which sees a battle raging between the Air Force and Belleville.

Joe Krakauskas, the Canadian-born moundsman with the Washington Senators, chalked up another win for himself yesterday as the Senators beat the Yankees. Last year Krakauskas stopped the Yankees as a freshman hurler and seems to be up to his old tricks. He experienced a new angle yesterday when he was relieved, instead of being the relief hurler for a change. Over in the National League the Reds continue to play .500 ball to retain a good lead over the Cards. The Reds shared a dual bill with the Cubs yesterday. The Yankees used three hurlers in an effort to stop the Nationals yesterday as every member of the Warhington club, including Krakauskas, helped himself to hits.

Sport Spice — They expect 40,000 at Goshen, N.Y. for the 13th running of the Hamblstonian stakes that was first won by a Canadian—remember him—Nat Ray?.... In those days the purse was worth upwards to $75,000....When Bucky Walters of the Reds lost his game yesterday it was the seventh reverse suffered by Walters, as against 20 wins, for a nice sizeable record on the right side of the ledger.

MOON ON THE WATER
by Ruby M. Ayres

She nodded. "Yes; because—unless you are sure, quite sure, I'd rather set you free."

He said rather quickly, "That almost sounds as if you are hoping for your freedom."

"Does it?" Her hands tightened their grasp as if subconsciously she felt that he was slipping away from her. "Isn't that begging the question—a little?" she asked faintly. "I only want you to be quite honest with me, Gavin—for us to be quite honest with each other."

He laid his hands over hers, drawing them down from his shoulders. "I have never met a girl whom I admire and respect as I admire and respect you," he said. "Will that do?"

She forced a smile to her lips. "But admiration and respect aren't reason enough for marriage," she protested.

She was a little surprised and touched when suddenly he raised her hand to his lips.

"It's enough for me, if it is for you," he answered.

So that was the best she could hope for! There was a chill little feeling at her heart, though she tried once again:

"And—supposing—some day—you meet another girl who means more to you that I ever can?"

"Isn't that a risk we must both take?" he asked.

She turned away from him, and there was a tragic little silence before she said restlessly, "We can't get married yet—not till—everything is settled here—and arranged. Besides—you know Pamela and Sidney are to be married."

"Need that interfere with our future? And what will you do when Pamela has gone—and the house has gone? Where can you go?"

Jane closed her eyes for a moment, then she lauged. "I dare say I can find some one to take me in and play the Good Samaritan," she said lightly. "Besides, it isn't settled—about the business yet, is it? Your business, I mean?"

"Not yet."

"Then it seems to me that it will be much more sensible if we wait a little while longer," she said, and every word cost her an effort. "There's plenty of time, and—and—I think it will be much more sensible," she added.

And yet at the back of her mind a voice was mocking her: "You fool! Why don't you say yes, and marry him now you've got the chance? You may never have another. Why don't you say yes?"

She knew why, well enough—she knew that for her, at all events, "admiration and respect" were not enough. At first she had been happily sure that she could be content with friendship and affection; life had seemed complete when Gavin told her it would be a good thing, shared with her, but now it was different she felt as if she stood poised on a rock which moved insecurely beneath her feet, and from which she was afraid at any moment she might fall.

And then suddenly she thought of Josh Hallard, without any particular reason, and remembered the kindly touch of his hand on her shoulder when she wept.

He would never be happy with Dulcie, any more than Gavin and she would be happy together, and she asked herself in a cold, critical way: "Why don't I tell him we had better say good-bye? Why don't I tell him?" She moved her left hand and looked down at his signet ring. It hung a little loosely on her finger, and it would be the easiest thing in the world just to slip it off and give it back to him and to say: "It's been a mistake—but it's not too late——"

Only she couldn't! She moved her lips in a vain effort to speak the words, but it was impossible.

Then Gavin said—and she tried not to believe that there was a note of relief in his voice, "If you change your mind, Jane, you have only to tell me."

Jane felt that she could have laughed then in pure amusement. Gavin sounded so like an employer offering someone in the office the chance to stay on when he had half decided to go, but she just said quietly, "Thank you. I won't forget."

A red coal fell from the grate with a little crackling sound, and as she stooped to push it out of the way of the rug, Gavin said almost angrily, "What has gone wrong between us, Jane? Is it my fault, or is it yours? Everything is different—so constrained since——" He stopped and at last she added for him determinedly:

"Since Dulcie came home—isn't that what you mean?"

She expected him to deny it—to laugh in scorn, but to certainly deny it, but to her amazement, he said quietly, "Yes, that is what I mean."

She turned slowly around, and for a moment there was complete silence till she asked with difficulty, "Are you in love with her?"

INSTALMENT 20.

"No." The answer came almost violently, but there was an unhappy defiance in Gavin's eyes as he went on: "I know what you think—what you must have been thinking all the time and that has made it—more difficult for me. I can't explain myself—or what I feel for her, but it's not love; it's just——" He made a helpless gesture. "She attracts me—it would be useless to deny that she atracts me, perhaps because I've never met a girl—quite like her before. I know just how vain she is—shallow, too—I know she will never care for any one as much as she cares for herself; I know she's not fit to black your shoes, Jane, and yet——" He passed a hand across his hair with a boyish gesture of impatience, and suddenly all the motherliness of her love for him rose uppermost in Jane's heart, so that she felt she only wanted to comfort him and to help him.

He had been honest with her at last, and because of that she felt that she could forgive him everything—all the pain and jealousy he had caused her, all the racking doubt and dread of the future.

She slipped a hand into his as a friend might have done. "I'm glad you told me," she said with simple frankness. "And I think I understand. I'll try to, anyway—but let's be friends, shall we, dear? Let's feel that we can always trust each other and be quite honest with each other. We won't have any more misunderstandings, or allow the constraint you spoke about just now. I've hated it so much—a hundred times I've wanted to say something to you about it, but it was too difficult. You see——" She knit her dark brows in a puzzled way. "I'm not eloquent—I can't say what I feel; I have to bottle it all up inside me." She tried to laugh, not very successfully, and then suddenly Gavin took her in is arms, and bending, kissed her lips for the first time.

"You're an angel," he said huskily. "You're a thousand times too good for me—it's no use saying I'm sorry—and yet I do care for you, Jane—in a better and in quite a different way from—from anybody else."

She looked up at him with tears in her eyes.

"Thank you for that," she said bravely. It was only a crumb of all that she longed for, but she seized upon it gratefully.

Perhaps it was a happy beginning to better things; she would try to think so; she would make up her mind to start afresh without distrust or jealousy, and with sudden warm impulse she was ready to say: "And I will marry you—now—as soon as you like, if you really wish it," only Gavin spoke before she had time to utter the words.

"I think you are wise to postpone our marriage for the present; as you say, things are unsettled, and there is a good deal to arrange." And then, in spite of her good resolution Jane felt her spirits sinking once again, and she could not shut her ears to a voice that whispered:

"You see—he doesn't really want you—he doesn't really want you."

It gave Jane a queer little feeling of discomfort when on Thursday she found a letter lying on the hall table addressed to her in a strange handwriting.

Her first thought was "What a good thing I'm up early" for instinct told her it was from Josh Hallard, and she knew how difficult explanations would have been had Dulcie been the first to see it.

She carried it with her into the dining room, where the breakfast table was ready laid, and tore open the flap.

"Dear Jane"—somehow that gave her a shock—"I am looking forward to seeing you for lunch tomorrow, and I suggest that we meet at the D'Or Blanc in R—— Street, Soho. Any taxi driver will know it. Hoping you are well. Yours, Josh Hallard."

"And this is almost the first time I have ever lunched alone with a man—if I go," Jane thought as she threw the little note into the fire, having carefully made a mental note of the restaurant. "If I go."

She was not sure that she intended to keep the appointment. For one reason she disliked the idea of going behind her sister's back, even though Dulcie was less scrupulous; and then there was Gavin!

Would he mind if ever he found out, she wondered. And thought it unlikely. Dulcie would make a scene of course. Or wouldn't she consider it worthwhile being jealous?

As a rule, nobody troubled what Jane did, or how she passed the time, but this morning it suddenly seemed that it would be an enormously difficult matter to walk out of the house and take a train to London without arousing somebody's suspicions.

"That's a guilty conscience," she told herself. "And anyway, I may not go."

Dulcie floated into the room in her dressing-gown.

"Any breakfast? I'm dying for some coffee."

"I'll see," Jane said, and with a last glance at the fire where her letter was now nothing but a handful of ashes, she departed.

"Any coffee?" she inquired, putting her head round the kitchen door, were Mary was toasting some bread.

"Just coming, Miss Jane," the girl answered, and then as Jane would have gone away, she added, "May I speak to you for a moment, please, Miss Jane?"

"Why, of course." Jane came back, closing the door behind her, and Mary said, keeping her eyes carefully averted:

"I just wanted to ask you about myself—what's to become of me when Miss Pamela is married?"

"What's to become of you?" Jane echoed helplessly; she had never given the matter a thought, and Mary went on:

"Because, though I haven't been asked as yet, I don't wish to go into Miss Pamela's service when she is married." And now she looked at Jane pleadingly. "I'd rather come with you, miss, if I may."

"Oh!" Jane said; she tried to laugh. "But I—we shan't be able to afford a maid—not just at first, I'm afraid, not that I wouldn't love to have you——"

"If it's the money," Mary said very earnestly, "I'm quite willing to take less, and you'll never be able to manage without some one, Miss Jane—who's to do the cooking and scrubbing and keep the place clean?"

"I hadn't thought about it," Jane said. "We'll talk about it another time," she added hurriedly as she heard Dulcie calling shrilly to know how long the coffee was going to be. "We'll talk about it another time." And she went back to the dining room. "I've got such a headache," Dulcie said. She was crouching over the fire, rocking her slender body to and fro.

Jane glanced at her. "The coffee is coming," she answered. "I expect that will do you good."

Dulcie sighed. "A lot you care whether my head aches or not," she said petulantly, and Jane answered wryly:

"Well, you wouldn't exactly break your heart if I told you mine was splitting, would you?"

EVERY 'EASTLAND'

The Air Ministry reported that despite cloudy weather and poor visibility the "observer system is working perfectly" and every "eastland" raider which crossed the coast in 11 swift attacks last night was quickly spotted.

Spotting 'Raiders' From Eastland

Throughout the night giant searchlights combed the skies and anti-aircraft guns were sighted on "raiders." Bombers were equipped with outside flashlights to glow each time a theoretical bomb was dropped, and whether it hit the objective was recorded on the ground by photography. Anti-aircraft gunners "hits" also were checked photographically.

Besides guns, lights, a balloon barrage and the usual sound detecting apparatus, the defenders were reported to be using effective new secret air defence equipment. Five hundred planes from the mythical "eastland" which is in the direction of Germany, are acting as attackers against 800 "westland" defenders.

Half of England in Blackout

The high point of the manoeuvres in the air comes tonight with a gigantic blackout covering half of England, including London. Estimates were that it would involve some 200,000 air raid precautions personnel.

Householders, restaurants, railway stations, factories and newspaper offices are to curtain their windows during the blackout, which starts at 12:30 a.m. Traffic lights will be hooded and street lights will be turned off. Trains, buses and automobiles will operate with lights shielded from the skies.

Land forces already are engaged in extensive training manoeuvres which will come to a head in a "battle" beginning Sept. 14.

EAT CARROTS BEFORE DRIVING AT NIGHT

Amherst, Mass., Aug. 9 AP)—Before you go for that evening spin in your car, eat a couple of carrots—for safety. Miss May Foley, Massachusetts State College nutritionist, explained today that carrots contain vitamin A, which prevents night blindness. "A person whose vision in dim light is impaired due to lack of vitamin A," said Miss Foley, "can eat a serving of carrots before he goes out driving in the evening and be assured that his vision will be better."

BACHELOR FARMER WANTS EVERYTHING

Evansville, Ind., Aug. 9 (AP)—Joe Ellis Baker, 24-year-old Kentucky farmer who asked Sheriff's Deputies to find him a wife knew just what he wanted. He said the lady must be under 26, good looking and a good cook—and have $20,000. Baker, who rents a farm near Boxville, said he would take either a blonde or brunette. The $20,000, he said, was to buy a farm.

WHAT HOSPITALITY!

Pontiac, Mich., Aug. 9 (CP)—It cost John Halmer $700 to prove to a visiting Texan that Michigan boasts hospitality of a type as good as that of Texas. Halmer was approached on the street by a visitor from the southwestern State who said Michigan was unfriendly because a stranger couldn't find a poker game here. Two more men came up and a game was arranged. Halmer didn't realize until later he was the only big loser.

HE GETS HIS DIVORCE

Detroit, Aug. 9 (CP)—Walter McBride, a self-styled hen-pecked husband, was granted a divorce when he told Judge Joseph Moynihan he had taken two severe beatings for following his wife's directions in regard to not joining a labor union. He said she interfered in his religious life and had "an extremely forceful and dominating temperament."

ALWAYS SOMETHING

Among the rarer specimens in the world of the cauliflower, the screen, the stage and romance is Jack "Irish Thrush" Doyle, ABOVE, famed for his curious fightless fights, which the hardy Englishman insists on paying good money to view. Jack's latest entry into the news came when he was barred from displaying his meagre fistic wares in Dublin because of his Don Juan activities of the past. Whether he is also barred from presenting his stirring renditions of "Mother Macree" and other favorites, was not, at the time, reported.

END OF A STUNT

Stunting proved ruinous to Joe Sprinz, veteran catcher with the Pacific Coast League San Francisco Seals. As part of a baseball exhibition at the coast city's Golden Gate Exposition Joe attemped to break the record for catching baseballs dropped from a great height. An airplane dropped five balls from more than 800 feet up and one landed in the catcher's glove, but the terrific impact smashed the glove against his face, fracturing his jaw, knocking out teeth, and lacerating his face. He is seen with a bystander just after the catch. The record for this stunt is 756 feet, made by some Cleveland players last year.

BASKET-CARRIER UNION FAILS

Kitchener, Ont., Aug. 9 (CP)—Efforts of youngsters to form a union of the boys and girls who deliver baskets from the market here have failed. "Aw they don't agree in anything," one youngster complained. The group formed the union of Kitchener market delivery boys, but price-cutting below the 10-cent level smashed unionization efforts.

NOT PLAYING BUT STILL AUTOGRAPHING

Performing a chore that has been—and still is—his on thousands of occasions, Lou Gehrig, retired "Iron Horse" of the New York Yankees, is seen as he autographed baseballs for some of the thousands of youthful admirers that turned out at New York's staggering world's fair when the former home run clouter appeared at the semi-weekly baseball school. With Lou on hand the program was more than its ordinary self and he was presented with a scroll and made honorary director of youth at the fair.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma was looking at her mail at breakfist, saying to pop, My, I've got 4 picture postcards from 4 different people away for the summer. Of course I dont regret our decision to stay home during the hot weather, Willyum, because the question of economy is paramount and comes first, bar none, but I mean these cards look very attractive. Here's one from my sister Fanny from Lake Skinatshy showing a scene of people sailing and canoing as though the weather contained no surh a thing as temperature, ma said.

How about those clouds of little black specks around the people? pop said, ant ma said, What black specks, I dont se any such thing.

They must of been painted out, they were thick clouds of gnatts, and each gnatt had a bite like snapping tertle, pop said, and ma said, What nonsense, here's one from Luella Smock from Stony Ridge, she writes, Sleeping under blankets every night, wish you were here. I dont know why she's sending me a card, we never liked each other, ma said.

Then why dont you send her a card and write on it, Glad you are there, pop said. If she's sleeping under blankets it's to keep the mosquitoes off, because the mosquitoes in that section will bite through anything thinner than a double blanket, he said.

Edna Bittern sends me a card from Locut Valley, it's a very attractive picture of people on a hay ride ,ma said, and pop said, That's a very ingenious way of telling you the place is loaded down with hay fever, if she wrote that on a postcard the local authorities would censor it. Does she say she wishes you were there? he said.

Why yes, ma said, and pop said, Then that's a very nasty crack.

O keep quiet, I wont even tell you about the card from Sally Jarden.

Wich she didn't and pop didn't even ask.

NEW YORK PURCHASE

Peter Minuit, who bought New York from the Indians for sixty guilders ($24) worth of jimcracks in 1626, turned a bargain which was probably one of the greatest in history. Real estate values now are up to something like $16,000,000,000.

New Yorkers consume more than 500,000,000 pounds of fish every year; about 1,510,533,000 quarts of milk and cream; about 20,600,000,000 glasses, or 9,200,000 half-barrels of beer. This last figure is the Market Commissioner's guess. After the first 20 billion glasses he lost count.

The New York Post office handles on an average 14,500,000 pieces of ordinary mail every day; about 260,000 pounds of newspapers and periodicals; around 72,000 insured and C.O.D. parcel post packages.

WALL STREET

New York, Aug. 9.—(AP)—Buying power failed the stock market today and leading issues jogged downward.

There was little activity at any time. Near the fourth hour losses ranged from fractions to a point or more.

Brokers said traders had adopted a "wait and see" attitude toward both domestic affairs and events abroad. Continued good reports of Industrial progress, favorable earnings statements and dividend declarations did not attract purchasers.

Stocks lower included U.S. Steel, Youngstown, Chrysler, International Harvester, Western Union, Anaconda, Westinghouse Electric, Du Pont, Un. Carbide, Allied Chemical J. C. Penney, Philip Morris, Owens-Illinois, Texas Corp., Sears Roebuck and Goodyear.

Resistant were Goodrich, which was in some demand following a favorable six months' profit statement, Douglas Aircraft and Santa Fe.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Aug. 9 CP)—The Toronto stock market shifted today to a downward slant early in the first hour and by noon an indices showed index losses of 1-4 to 1-2 point. Weakness was attended by falling volume and turnover in the first three hours total only 161,000 shares. The weak tone was in sympathy with lower prices in New York.

Foods were about the weakest of the industrial groups and steels and senior oils were off slightly. Western oils were heavy and moderate losses appeared by early afternoon for Home, Calgary-Edmonton, Anglo-Canadian and Davies.

Soft spots in the base metal group involved Nickel, Hudson Bay, Norandа and Sherritt.

Trading Slow on Produce Markets

Toronto, Aug. 9.—Butter took a fractional drop on the Toronto open produce market yesterday in trading that was almost too quiet to establish prices, according to the Dominion Department of Agriculture. Eggs and cheese remained unchanged in price.

Demand for butter was slow, even though receipts were light. Buyers displayed caution and refused to pay more than 21½c for No. 1 creamery solids. Some sellers held out for 21¾c, but no sales were transacted at this price. In the afternoon the market was inactive, but apparently steady at 21½c. Western butter sold at 21¾c.

Egg receipts were light, but increasing. They were sufficient, however, for the demand, which centred on A-medium eggs. Prices were unchanged, but the market seemed slightly easier in undertone.

The cheese market was quiet, with prices remaining steady. Demand was decidedly steady. New, large paraffined current make sold at 11½c.

Consumption of butter in Great Britain appears to be running at a satisfactory pace, it is reported by Empire Dairies, Limited, "consequently buyers may be expected to re-enter the market in the near future in order to replenish stocks." Cold storage stocks in Britain totalled 30,164 tons at July 15, as against 31,072 tons at the corresponding date last year.

Montreal Potatoes Ease.

Montreal, Aug. 9.—Potato prices fell from 10 to 15 cents on open produce markets here yesterday, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported. Eggs ruled steady to a shade down while receipts continued light. Butter and cheese were firm and exceptionally quiet.

Creamery butter prints to retailers sold for 22½c to 23c a pound and solids for 22c to 22½c. Western butter delivered in Montreal was unquoted. Quebec No. 1 pasteurized in wholesale jobbing lots made 21½c. Receipts: 575 boxes.

Ontario white and colored cheese were both quoted at 11½c. Quebec white was quoted at 10¾c and colored at 10¾c. Receipts: 3,650 boxes.

Graded eggs shipments in used free cases sold at 28c a dozen for A-large, 26c for A-medium, 19c to 20c for B-large, 14½c to 15c for C. Receipts: 698 cases.

LIVESTOCK

Toronto, Aug. 9.—(CP)—The few good quality cattle in the offering on the Toronto Livestock Market today sold readily at firm prices but common to plain grades traded slowly at easier levels. Other sections of the market were steady with no prices established for hogs. Cattle holdover from Monday was 1,100 head.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Livestock branch were cattle 450; calves 450; hogs 650; sheep and lambs 450.

A few weighty steers brought $5.50 to $6.50. Good light butchers were $6 to $6.26 but bulk of the supply was of medium to common quality selling from $5 to $5.75. Good cows were $4 to $4.50 with canners mostly $2.50. Light bologna bulls brought $3.50 and weighty bolognas were as high as $4. Heavy export bulls sold at $4.75. Fed calves went at $7.25 to $8.25 for good to choice with medium down to $6.50. Stocker trade was fairly active at $4.50 for plain up to $5.25 for good.

6 ADDITIONAL BOMBERS FOR R.C.A. FORCE

Ottawa, Aug. 9—(CP)—Six additional stranraer bombers will be built for the Royal Canadian Air Force by Canadian Vickers Ltd., Montreal, Department officials announced here today.

This brings to 16 the number under order, or in process of delivery from that firm. An initial order of 12 is being worked on at present. Seven have been delivered, of which five are stationed at Dartmouth, N.S. The others are enroute to the Pacific coast.

NEW ZEALAND'S LOAN

London, Aug. 9—(CP Cable)—Results of New Zealand's £16,000,000 ($74,240,000) conversion loan was not announced last night but city circles assumed that leading banks took at least £10,000,000.

Considerable secrecy surrounded the arrangements for the loan and it was regarded as doubtful whether it would be stated how much the public subscribed and how much was left to be assumed by the banks which guaranteed it.

TYPHOID CASES IN HAMILTON

Hamilton, Aug. 9 (CP) — First typhoid fever to originate in this city for many years came to light this week when four young women, employees of Hamilton manufacturing concern, became seriously ill. Making the matter public today, Dr. James Roberts, M.O.H., said that a most comprehensive investigation was underway in an effort to determine the source and prevent a spread of the outbreak.

NO TALK OF WAR IN BRITISH ISLES SAY LOCAL YOUTHS

Bob Stevenson and Tom Reed Say They Were Recognized Everywhere as Canadians

IMPRESSIONS ABROAD

In the British Isles today no one thinks of or speaks of war. Weekend trippers still pack picnic lunches and hie forth over the Saturday and Sunday holidays to the sea shore. Business is better than normal in many lines and is far above average in others.

Yet, in the famed shipbuilding yards of Britain, cruisers of the latest type are on the ways under construction; fourteen more are under order from the Admiralty by the same company. England's new peace time militia is training strenuously at the tactical game of war, but the new army rules are played with a smile by the boys who have been plucked from the banks and offices and factories to serve their allotted time under the new Act.

There is no serious talk of war, yet never have the resources of the Old Country been so prepared for any eventuality which might occur.

Belleville Youth Return

These were the impressions brought back to Belleville yesterday by Bob Stevenson, 59 Cedar Street, and Tom Reed, 35 Ridley Avenue, who have returned from a brief trip through England and Scotland after serving their first apprenticeship in a cattle boat on the journey over from Canada.

"Canadians might be talking of war, but we didn't hear a word regarding it during our visit to England and Scotland", echoed the youths when questioned by The Ontario Intelligencer. "But that doesn't mean they're not ready over there. We saw those cruisers under construction on the ways in the Clydebank, and were told that many more were being rushed to completion elsewhere".

Britons Unruffled

With unruffled serenity residents of the British Isles plod their placid way, though industrially, reports from nearly all centres indicate that a peak production in shops and factories is being set. Not all the business is concerned with armaments, though the manufacture of these aids for defence has materially boosted business. Four days' tour through Glasgow, Edinburgh, and the Loch Lomond district, thence through the industrial centres of northern England revealed many interesting sidelights of life in the British Isles for the local boys.

"In Scotland we could hardly understand some of the people. They spoke with a thick accent, and we had real difficulty in following some of them," stated Tom Reed.

Recognized as Canadians

"Wherever we went we were instinctively taken for Canadians, and we had to answer many questions concerning Canada. Perhaps it was the way we dressed or spoke", added Bob Stevenson.

Sailing from Montreal on the Steamer Dellilian, a Donald Line ship, two of twenty-two cattle hands in charge of 434 Holstein cattle consigned from this district to the cattle auctions of the British Isles, both boys experienced smooth sailing on the trip over. Just one animal a heavy steer, was lost through the effects of the trip. The carcass was thrown overboard at the first opportunity. Battened below decks, the heat during the crossing was hard on the animals, and heavy quantities of water were consumed. But the cargo arrived in fine shape and little weight was lost by the animals.

College Boys on Shipboard

College boys on vacation made up the greater number of the shiphands who were in charge of the live cargo, youths on holiday who paid an average sum of twenty dollars to the line for the privilege of crossing over and working passage at the same time. One younger member of the crew was a student of Harvard, already equipped with two M.A.'s and one B.A. Others were medical college students out for a view of the world before taking graduate courses.

One of the interesting highlights of the trip across to Glasgow was the discovery on board of two stowaways. Both emerged almost before the ship had cleared Father Point and both were immediately set at work by the ship's officers. Former residents of England they had been in Canada but a short time. Unable to find work here, they were willing to take a chance on stowing away to return.

Cow hand on a cattle boat was not all pleasure, because there was always plenty of work to do. But on the whole meals were satisfactory, at four times a day intervals, and each day brought its own interest and new experiences. Seaman of the ship and officers, used to the changing youthful crews, all of Scotch lineage, were a particularly quiet lot and plodded about their daily tasks without passing half a dozen words each day to one another. The task of transporting live cargoes across the sea to the majority of them was an old story. Many of them had been employed at the same work for years, and with the pickup of shipments from Canada to Britain lately, many more seamen are being given work.

"As seamen, they sure know their stuff as cattle hands, and they taught as a good many new wrinkles regarding the handling of animals", declared the local youths today, both of whom are well acquainted with livestock.

EGGLETON CLAN HOLDS PICNIC

Over 100 Register at Oak Lake, Scene of Family Reunion

The Eggleton clan made Bird's Beach, Oak Lake, their mustering place on Wednesday last when over one hundred registered and under sunny skies and in ideal conditions undertook to meet and enjoy each other and the day.

After the dinner, Mr. Bob Eggleton, acting for the president, held a short business meeting in which the present officers were returned to office for the 1940 picnic. They are as follows:

Hon. President—Robt. Eggleton.
President—Irvin Eggleton.
Secretary—Mildred Pidgeon.
Committee—Mrs. Bert Eggleton, Mrs. Hector Eggleton, Cle. Gay and Ramsay Cooney.

It was moved by Geo. Eggleton, seconded by Richard Eggleton that the 1940 picnic be held in July on the first Wednesday.—Carried.

He then welcomed the present crowd, spoke of the reasons and benefits to all of such get-togethers and gave us interesting reminiscences of early days and family history. He had on display the home in Norfolk from which this first Eggleton migrated in the six weeks sailing vessel. It proved to be not unlike the most modern architecture one sees in building pages of the magazines except for the huge chimneys.

He spoke briefly of the Royal Visit and our contribution to the Great War.

A telegram of regret was received from Gilbert Eggleton, Brandon, Man.

An impromptu speech by H. J. Clarke, B.A., P.S.I., proved to be both interesting and instructive. In speaking of the children, he said a new idea of Public School township areas was in the offing. They would be managed by five trustees elected by ballot and it would equalize the assessment. School rates need not go up on account of the grants and heretofore lonely pupils would have the healthy stimulus of rivalry. He regretted his term of office drawing so nearly to a close for the reason that he loved children for whose best interests we know he has devoted unusual talent for many terms.

William Clarke of Belleville in a farewell message was very short but very beautiful in thought and wording. We are very grateful to his daughter for making it possible for us to have this splendid old gentleman with us for a little while.

Suitable races for children now were directed by Mr. Bert and Mr. Richard Eggleton, and the children received prizes.

In the young ladies' race, Helen Sarles came first and Dorothy Pidgeon second.

The young men's race won by Clarke Pidgeon, Jackie Phillips making a close second. Jean Eggleton won the prize for being the youngest person on the grounds, and Mr. James Stapley, for being the eldest.

Mrs. Keith Reynolds of Sherbrooke, Quebec, proved to be from the greatest distance.

Mrs. Roy Eggleton, Perla Pidgeon and Mrs. Bert Eggleton won the old fashioned costume prize as colonial maids with their mother.

Married People's race was won by Irvin Eggleton and Mrs. Edna Blakely, Charley Devolin and Mrs. Harry Kellar coming second.

GERMANY

It was reliably reported that a number of Berlin schools would be used to quarter troops being called up at the end of this week for manoeuvres. Classes were being doubled up to prevent interruption of the educational program.

Children Included

There was no official explanation of the purpose of including children as young as five years in the civilian registration. One explanation was that the number and temperaments of children might be a controlling factor in deciding what and how much special service a mother might perform.

The cards on which columns of searching questions are listed, must be filled out and turned in to police—by Aryans—between Aug. 13 and 19. Jews still have a registration of their own between Aug. 28 and Sept. 2.

Forster Back to Danzig

Danzig, Aug. 9—(AP)— Albert Forster, Danzig Nazi leader, is returning to the Free City with his latest instructions from Fuehrer Hitler and will speak to a mass meeting tomorrow night, it was announced today. He is expected here tonight.

Party leaders announced that Forster, his adjutant Felix Strangmann, and Wilhelm Zarske, head of the Nazi district chancellory flew to Berchtesgaden and conferred with Hitler.

Whether Forster will bring a personal message from Hitler to Danzig citizens could not be learned. Party officials said he was expected to emphasize in his address the "unbearable war threat of the Poles against Danzig."

Warsaw Undisturbed

Warsaw, Aug. 9—(CP-Havas) — Polish official quarters were unperturbed today by the increasing violence of German newspaper attacks on Poland.

Government spokesmen expressed the opinion that the German attacks were aimed at three objectives:

1. To arouse the German people against Poland by claiming that Warsaw was making a deliberate attempt to provoke the Reich.
2. To weaken the impression caused by Marshal Edward Smigly-Rydz last Sunday and bolster the officially-inspired legend of Poland's aggressive intentions.
3. To detract world attention from provocative statements by Nazi leaders in Danzig.

133 WAR VESSELS

Naval experts say the reserve fleet has been radically improved in the past three years. Formerly it was kept mostly at anchor during peacetime.

Now naval experts declare it in almost complete readiness for action.

The King broke his scheduled 11-week holiday at Balmoral Castle to inspect the fleet. His Majesty, then a lieutenant on the battleship Collingwood, was under fire in the world war battle of Jutland.

133 Ships in 14 Lines

The 133 ships were stretched in 14 lines across the wide sweep of Weymouth Bay.

The King arrived at 10 a.m. after an all-night journey. He passed through cheering holiday crowds to Bincleaves pier, overlooking Portland Roads, where he had his first glimpse of the lines of warships.

As the King stepped into the royal barge the royal standard was broken out and 19 vessels, cruisers or larger ships, each thundered a salute of 21 guns.

In a few minutes the royal barge completed the short trip to the royal yacht, Victoria and Albert, which was moored just inside the breakwater of Portland harbor.

Long Review Begins

After a brief stay the King, attended by Earl Stanhope, First Lord of the Admiralty, and Senior Naval Officers returned to the royal barge and began the long review. His program entailed a voyage of 14 miles through the lanes of ships.

Weymouth's summer population more than doubled for the review. In addition to 30,000 holiday visitors, many of them relatives of officers and men of the reserve fleet, 50,000 excursionists arrived during the day.

By the time the King arrived grey clouds hung low over a grey choppy sea. A thin rain was falling.

His Majesty Pipped Aboard

To the sounds of whistles shrilling and bugles blaring, the King was piped aboard H.M.S. Courageous to be greeted by Admiral Horton.

His Majesty had a choppy passage from the royal yacht in the black royal barge. There was a slight swell and a moderate sea running as the barge, with the royal standard fore and the white ensign astern, came through the mist with her two attendant motor torpedo boats.

The King had to jump to get on the companion ladder when the barge came alongside the Courageous.

Naval History Made

The inspection made naval history. Five days ago not one of the Q.E.P. ships now in Weymouth Bay was in commission. When the King passed along in the royal barge everything aboard them was spick and span.

A moment or two after the King boarded the Courageous it was demonstrated that the calling up of the naval reserve has affected men in every walk of life.

Commander Abel Smith, an officer aboard the aircraft carrier, greeted His Majesty. In civil life the commander is one of the King's equerries in the royal household, but he, like bus drivers, postmen and others of almost every trade, had been called up for service.

In the great lower hangar of the Courageous ranks of reservists were drawn up for royal inspection. Standing on the plane lift, the King saluted while the Royal Marines Band played the National Anthem and then he passed through the ranks.

The King spent 40 minutes aboard the Courageous and then was piped over the side to go to the flagship of the reserve fleet, the Effingham, and then to the cruiser Cardiff and the flotilla leader Exmouth before returning to the royal yacht for lunch.

WELSH BARD WRITES ON WRONG SUBJECT AND LOSES CROWN

Denbigh, Wales, Aug. 9.—(CP)—The traditional Welsh tournament of minstrelsy, the Eisteddfod, fell somewhat flat yesterday. For a second time since the ritualistic fete was begun in the days of the Druids, the meeting failed to crown a winning bard.

However, the crowning ceremony will full bardic pageantry, even to laying a silver handwrought crown on a throne-like chair, was solemnly performed, and 12,000 watched intently.

Caradoc Pritchard, London newspaperman who was judged to have done the best piece, wrote on the wrong subject. The subject set was "Terfysgoedd Daer" or "World Tumult". Pritchard wrote on suicide and won but lost the crown.

WANTS MORE FARMERS IN LEGISLATURE

Hamilton, Ont., Aug. 9 (CP)—"Cities elect largely lawyers and doctors to the legislature, and they pass legislation to themselves — to the detriment of the farmer," B. E. Corman, Deputy Reeve of Saltfleet said at the Wentworth county council meeting today.

Airways Suspends Passenger Reservations To Africa, Australia

London, Aug. 9.—(CP)—Imperial Airways has suspended passenger reservations on Empire Air routes to Africa and Australia after today principally because of a shortage of planes caused by Great Britain's defence speed-up.

The company said British plane factories were unable to fill commercial orders in addition to the requirements of the Royal Air Force. Imperial Airways therefore is buying a number of United States engines.

The Daily Express (Independent) suggested that a fleet of Wellington Bombers fly the Empire Mail until Imperial is able to obtain the necessary ships and personnel.

Reservations already made for passengers accommodations on the company's long routes will be filled, but no new reservations will be accepted at least until after the Christmas mail rush. About 1,100 passengers have been carried each month on these routes recently.

The curtailment will not affect Imperial Airways many cross channel services and European schedules.

30 Per Cent of Youths Taking Courses Find Employment

Results of Training Courses Are Announced

Ottawa, Aug. 9 (CP)—Practically 30 per cent of the youths taking the Dominion-Provincial training course intended to lead to employment last year were placed in employment, according to review issued Tuesday by the Department of Labor.

In the year ended March 31 last, 15,876 youths took such courses and 4,747 were placed in employment. In other training projects, 55,934 other young men and women were enrolled, 31,676 in agricultural and rural training courses and 24,258 in physical training courses.

British Columbia topped the list in numbers taking courses with 21,893. Next same Quebec with 17,352; Alberta 10,714; Saskatchewan, 9,849; Manitoba, 5,292; New Brunswick 2,712; Ontario, 2,029; Nova Scotia, 1,383; Prince Edward Island, 589.

Age Averages About 20 Years

Though youth training projects are open to persons from 18 to 30 years of age, average age of women taking rural courses was 20.2 years and taking urban courses, 19.2. The men averaged 20.7 on all projects. Average schooling ranged from eight grade for women in all New Brunswick projects to 10.4 for urban women in British Columbia.

In some cases the provinces did not take up their full allotment from the Dominion treasury for approved training projects.

Commercial Pilots Sought in Canada

Ottawa, Aug. 9 (CP)—Since increased Royal Air Force recruiting has depleted the reserve supply of pilot material for Imperial Airways Limited, the British commercial flying firm has been looking for keen young pilots in Canada.

Announcement in London last night that passenger accommodation on Empire routes of Imperial Airways would have to be curtailed because of shortages of machines and pilots recalls the request the New York office of Imperial Airways last spring to Canadian Flying Clubs Association headquarters here for assistance in recruiting Canadian pilots.

A number of Canadian pilots have been making reputations at the controls of Imperial Airways Liners, and the company seeks additional Canadian airmen.

BRITISH ACTORS TO TOUR CANADA

Toronto, Aug. 9 (CP)—Maurice Colbourne and Baryy Jones will tour Canada next season with a company of over 40 players, according to an announcement yesterday by Ernest Rawley, director of the tour.

Three plays will be presented: "Charles the King" by Maurice Colbourne, "Geneva" by George Bernard Shaw, and "Tobias and the Angel" by James Bridie.

The tour is scheduled to open at Montreal Oct. 9, continuing at Ottawa, Toronto, Hamilton, London, Winnipeg, Saskatoon, Regina, Edmonton, Calgary, Victoria and Vancouver.

COP INJURED AS HEIFER LEADS WILD CHASE

Ottawa, Aug. 9—(CP)—A frolicsome heifer escaped from a loading platform in the west end railway yards here last night, and slightly injured Constable John Hepburn of the city police before his fellow officers killed the fugitive with revolver shots. For upwards of an hour the frightened heifer led police a wild chase, crashing through flower beds and fleeing along back lanes.

PEACETIME MEASURES

Burgos, Spain, Aug. 9 (AP)—General Franco assumed greater direct control of Spain's government today through a ministerial reorganization to promote peacetime reconstruction of the nation.

12 Year Old Boy is Marksman

Long Branch, Ont., Aug. 9—(CP)—Twelve-year-old Keith Cowan of Ottawa, member of a family of marksmen, is the youngest competitor participating in the annual shoot of the Ontario Rifle Association here this week.

JAILER'S WIFE PREVENTS BREAK

Mrs. Ethel McCracken, 40, Halts Trio Who Bound Her Husband

Pryor, Okla., Aug. 9 (AP)— A straight-shooting, two-gun jailer's wife frustrated with accurate pistol fire last night an attempted break from the county jail of three prisonesr who bound her husband and threatened his life with a crude steel dirk.

She is Mrs. Ethel McCracken, a buxom woman of 40, who has ridden the range and handled guns since her youth.

One of the prisoners, Jake Cooke, 24, an ex-convict, was shot in the leg.

Participating in the break with Cook were Willie Murphy, 25, whom she forced back into the jail, and George Casey, 22, recaptured by two passersby.

The trio bid for freedom when Mrs. McCracken's husband, Claud, started to take them from an exercise cell to their regular quarters.

McCracken said Cook pressed a crudely made, five-inch dirk against his abdomen while the others bound him. The trio took his keys but couldn't find one which opened the outer door.

They brought McCracken to the door, put the dirk to his throat, and made him call Mrs. McCracken who opened it. Then she ran across the room into the jailer quarters to telephone.

"Cook was pressing me and shoved me away from the phone. I ran into the bedroom and got a gun from the dresser drawer," she said. "I fired and he fell in the doorway, blocking it."

She grabbed another gun from the drawer (A .44 calibre pistol) and ran out through another door and out to the front of the jail.

"Murphy was coming down the steps, so I fired two or three times over his head and he went back," Mrs. McCracken said.

She saw Casey across the street and emptied her guns, "over his head." He was captured a few minutes later by two men.

300 TRANSIENTS HEADING WEST

Many Board Freights at Moose Jaw to Make Way to Outlook

Regina, Aug. 9 (CP)—Nearly 300 transients, mostly from British Columbia, Ontario and Quebec, are headed farther west after having congregated a few days ago at Assiniboia, 70 miles west of Moose Jaw, it was learned here yesterday.

It is believed the men are bound for the Shaunavon area, although harvest work there is late and grain will not be ready for cutting for 10 days.

The situation at Moose Jaw eased yesterday as many of the men boarded freight trains for the northwest district around Outlook. Police were permitting none of the Moose Jaw transients to board trains for the south. About 400 men were given meals in Moose Jaw Monday night.

Both Assiniboia and Moose Jaw reported the transients were orderly, caused no trouble and seemed to be well organized. At Assiniboia, said Town Clerk C. J. Lee, the men were given a meal last night.

Message of Cheer And Hope Sent To Czech People

London, Aug. 9—(CP)— David Lloyd George sent a "mesage of good cheer and hope" to the Czech people last night in token of today's 21st anniversary of the Czecho-Slovak Republic's recognition by Great Britain.

In a letter circularized to the press, the former Prime Minister said:

"Aug. 9, would in other circumstances have witnessed celebration by the Czecho-Slovak people of the 21st anniversary of their rebirth and recognition as in independent nation.

"Although the shameful and tragic events of last March have transformed a date which should have been one of rejoicing and thanksgiving into one of sorrow and humiliation, I yet feel impelled to send that splendid people in its hour of martyrdom at the hands of a tyranny more ruthless even than that of the Hapsburgs a messsage of good cheer and hope."

OVER AN INCH OF RAIN FALLS

Over an inch of rain fell during last night's heavy rainfall that visited Belleville and district, according to official figures given out by officils of the Belleville Filtration Plant today. To be exact 1.05, or one and one-twentieth inches of rainfall was registered in Belleville.

MIMIC WARFARE GAMES

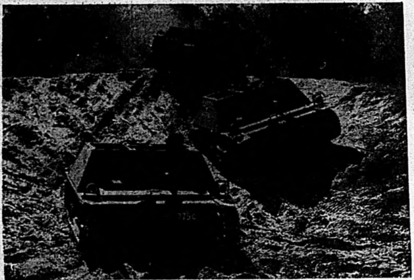
Barrie, Ont., Aug. 9 (CP)—Non-permanent members of the Royal Canadian Army Service Corps engaged in mimic warfare along a 60-mile front today in the Baxter, Alliston, Cookstown and Thornton districts north of here.

It was the largest concentration of non-permanent troops ever made in one district in Canada. The war games will continue until Friday night.

TEN STOWAWAYS SAVED FROM DEATH

Trapped deep in the hold of a Brazilian freighter, the Ayuruoca, tied up in Brooklyn, N.Y., ten stowaways were felled by poisonous gas used in fumigating the vessel. Police are shown using oxygen inhalators on the men. Immigration officials started investigation of smuggling ring which had planned to charge the men, all Portugese, $250 each for getting them into the U. S.

SWIFT MOVING TANKS HOLD MANOEUVRES AT CAMP BORDEN



Carden Lloyd Tanks are shown here scuttling over a hillock during manoeuvres at Camp Borden, Ont., where the mechanical arm of Canada's defensive forces are undergoing manoeuvres at the Armored Fighting Vehicles school.

BRITISH TEAM ARRIVES FOR WIGHTMAN CUP TENNIS

Here's one of those hardy annuals — or at least every-so-oftens —of sports page photography. Athletic team from one country visiting another, lines up for picture. In this case the subjects are the members of the British Wightman Cup team, lined up on the deck of the Queen Mary, prior to landing and getting down to business with their tennis racquets, preparatory to trying to remove the trophy from United States. Left to right the greensward girls are Betty Nuthall, Kay Stammers, Ruth Mary Hardwick, Freda Hemmersley, Valerie Scott and Nina Brown. The Americans are strong favorites to retain the cup.

Moira

MOIRA—Master Douglas Thompson had the misfortune to fall off a load of hay this week, breaking his arm at the elbow. His arm is at present encased in a plaster cast.

Mr. Wallace McInroy has started threshing this week and a fairly good yield is anticipated.

Miss Rhea McCullough of Foxboro is holidaying with Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Welsh.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Clare and Ivan spent the week-end with friends at Brighton.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Emerson spent a day recently at Oak Lake.

Mr. and Mrs. Wallace McInroy and family were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. William McTaggart of Thomasburg.

Mr. and Mrs. Garrence Bird of West Huntingdon were week-end guests of the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Moreland.

Mrs. Sid Williams and family of Stirling are visiting for a week with Mr. and Mrs. Ed Harrison.

Mr. K. Stewart conducted the Sunday morning services and took dinner with Mr. and Mrs. D. Thompson.

Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Herity and Miss Evelyn Emerson were guests of Mr. and Mrs. William Leslie at their cottage at Oak Lake on Sunday.

MOUNT PLEASANT W.A.

The July meeting of the W.A. was held at the home of Mrs. Russell Glass. The meeting opened with hymn 485 and Mr. McKenzie led in prayer. Mrs. Arthur Boldrick read the Scripture Lesson. Mrs. Frank Troverton gave a reading "The Spirit of Cain" and "I will not keep them waiting", was given by Miss Maggie Moult. Hymn 494 was sung. Seventeen were present and collection was 67c.

MOUNT PLEASANT W.M.S.

The meeting was opened with Hymn 494. Mrs. Goodman gave a reading "No Guide". A chapter from the Study Book was ably given by Hilda Treverton. A reading "The Hope of the World" was given by Bessie Boldrick. Mrs. A. Boldrick read "How John Lou paid his debt" which was much enjoyed by all. The meeting closed with Hymn 490 and Mr. McKenzie closed with prayer. Seventeen were present and 68c was the collection. Lunch was served and a social half hour was spent.

ON AFRICAN VISIT

General Antonio Oscar de Fragoso Carmona (RIGHT), president of Portugal, is welcomed at Lorenco Marques, capital of Portugal's Mozambique, during his tour of Portugal's African possessions. Unexploited Mozambique is immensely rich in mineral resources.

ENVOY TO EIRE

GAINS CONTROL

Ramon Serrano Suner, minister of the interior and head of the Falange Espanola, (Fascist party of Spain) who saw his party become the one and only party of the country by proclamation of Gen. Francisco Franco. The ruling makes Suner second in power only to Franco himself and bodes for closer co-operation with the axis powers. It also eliminates the possibility of a Hapsburg return to the throne.

PITT STAR TURNS PRO

For the last two years an all-star fullback on most all-American football teams and a player familiar to many Canadian fans, Marshall Goldberg, ABOVE, Pittsburg university ace, has signed a one-year contract to play the game as a pro for Chicago Cardinals. His terms, said to be in the neighborhood of $10,000 for the season, were the largest ever given a player fresh from college by the Cardinals.

CAIRN TO MEMORY OF MARTYRED JESUITS UNVEILED BY LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR

More than 6,000 Roman Catholics attended the three-day commemoration of the founding of Fort Ste. Marie, near Midland, Ont., and the martyrdom by Iroquois Indians of the Jesuit fathers, Jaques Brebeuf, and Lalemant. Archbishop McGuigan, of Toronto, and Cardinal Gasparri, LEFT, attended the ceremonies. Saturday Lieutenant-Governor Matthews of Ontario, RIGHT dedicated a cairn to the Martyrs, assisted by descendants of the Indians who tortured the early Jesuit missionaries.

FLIERS SET NEW WORLD RECORD

Hunter and Humphrey Moody, brothers of Decatur, Ill., landed their little Taylorcraft monoplane at the Springlied municipal airport, after setting a new world's record for light planes. They had been aloft since the afternoon of July 23—more than two full weeks —and laid claim to 343 hours, 47 minutes and 3 seconds of continuous flying. Here is Humphrey, being half carried from the ship.

Descendant of Irish King Ordained a Priest

The Rev. Charles O'Connor, heir to the O'Connor don and direct descendant of the last high king of Ireland, is shown giving his first blessing to his mother after his ordination as a priest in Dublin recently. An unusual feature of his ordination ceremony was the fact that the chasuble (vestment) used in the ceremony was made from the wedding gowns of his twin sisters.

OUTSTANDING AT CANOE REGATTA

Following the 39th annual Canadian Canoe Association regatta at Port Dalhousie, Ont., officials of the organization recommended to the Canadian Olympic committee that the paddlers shown above be included on the team that journeys to Finland next year. In the canoe at the TOP is Doug Groff, of Winnipeg, and inset, Frank Banwell, a clubmate. This pair combined to win the 10,000 metre single blade tandem, a special event added to the usual program to decide Olympic contestants. At the BOTTOM are Aubrey Ireland, Jr., LEFT, son of a former famous paddler, and Terry Evans, both of Toronto, who took top honors in the senior tandem. Ireland was the outstanding individual at the regatta, as he set a new C.C.A. mark in capturing first place in the senior singles. In addition to these four, Doug. Bennett, Longueuil, Quebec, and Jack McDowell, Winnipeg, were recommended for the Olympics.

JAP WAR MINISTER?

A photo of Lieutenant-General Rensuke Isogai, chief of staff of the Japanese army in Manchukuo, who has been suggested as a successor to General Seishiro Itagaki as minister of war, officers of the army are preparing to force Itagaki to resign as a result of his failure to win other cabinet members to the army's viewpoint that Japan should enter a military alliance with the Rome-Berlin axis immediately. If necessary, observers say, the army is prepared to overthrow the entire cabinet to gain its ends.

GAME AS THEY COME

You can't beat the spirit of Tom Sunkel, ABOVE, rookie pitcher with St. Louis Cardinals in the National League. An injury to his left eye, suffered when playing with a toy gun when only four years old, has grown steadily more serious until now his vision from that side is almost totally impaired. In spite of this he looks like an up-and-coming major league pitcher, his outstanding feat being a two-hit game against New York Giants, in which he had a no-hitter until late in the game.

YUGOSLAVS SPEED UP BORDER FORTIFICATIONS

9 Persons Injured As Delivery Truck And Car Crash

Road Intersection Near Chatham Scene of Serious Mishap Wednesday Night

TRUCK OVERTURNED

Both Drivers Swerve to Escape Collision But Are Unable to Avoid Smash-up

Chatham, Ont., Aug. 10—(CP) — Nine persons were injured, four critically, when a light delivery truck and a car crashed last night at the intersection of the Prince Albert road and the 11th concession of Chatham Township.

Most seriously injured was Louis Keirsebelch, 23, of concession 10, Chatham Township, who was badly mangled when the car he was driving with three passengers plunged into a 20-foot ditch after the crash with the truck. He was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital with little chance of recovery. He suffered a fractured skull, a fracture of the jaw, a broken shoulder, several fractured ribs and internal injuries.

Child's Head Injured

Keirsebelch's 18-months old son, John, was taken to hospital with bad lacerations of the head, a possible fracture of the skull, a torn mouth and loss of several teeth.

Others in the car taken to hospital were Albert Defraye, 17, of R.R. No. 5, Dresden, unconscious from severe head injuries and a fractured pelvis; and Francis De Ridder, aged eight, of R.R. No. 5 Dresden, who received bad cuts and abrasions and a possible fracture of the skull.

Five persons were in the light truck when it overturned on the road after the crash, three of whom are in the public general hospital.

GIRL SEEKING MOVIE CAREER FOUND SLAIN

Man of Many Aliases is Held for Murder at Boca Raton, Fla.

SECOND GIRL ALIVE

Miami, Fla., Aug. 10—(AP)—Police announced today the arrest at Boca Raton, Fla., of Charles Jefferson, a man of numerous aliases, on a charge of killing Francis Ruth Dunn, 17, one of two girls who left Miami with him Monday to seek movie careers.

The other girl, 19-year-old Jean Bolton, police said, was released from a beach cabin at Boca Raton where she said she had been held a prisoner since Monday.

Jefferson, 34, whom police described as "an adventurous egoist" was placed in jail at West Palm Beach.

The bullet-riddled body of Miss Dunn was found beside a swamp at Boca Raton early today.

Stabbed as well as shot, her body lay about 600 feet from the cabin.

Both girls had been the subject of a country-wide hunt since they left Miami Monday morning, ostensibly for Palm Beach, where they expected to pose for a cameraman in the hope of landing a movie contract.

LEGION READY FOR EMERGENCY

Resources Placed at Disposal of Governments — Physical Training in Schools

Brantford, Ont., Aug. 10—(CP)—Ontario command of the Canadian Legion stood behind the Dominion command today in its assurance of aid to the federal or provincial governments in case of emergency.

As the four-day biennial convention of the provincial body ended yesterday, a formal resolution approved the action of Col. W. W. Foster, Dominion President, "in placing the whole resources of the legion at the disposal of the government in time of emergency and pledging the co-operation of the Ontario command in carrying out any duties assigned to the legion or its members by the federal or provincial government as a result of that offer."

The provincial command decided to urge the Ontario government to make physical training and first-aid instruction a compulsory part of the public school curriculum. Another resolution asked that the Ontario government allow returned men and women in civil service to count Great War service in computing superannuation terms.

LAWSON NOT A CANDIDATE

Toronto, Aug. 10—(CP)—Hon. J. Earl Lawson, M.P., for York South, will not be a candidate in the next federal election, the one-time Conservative Minister of Finance has informed his constituents. A riding convention will be held Sept. 15 to select a Conservative candidate.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Aug. 10—(CP)— General synopsis: The weather has been moderately warm from the Great Lakes eastward with showers occurring in many districts, and it has been cool over Western Canada with light showers in a few sections of Manitoba and Alberta. Pressure is high over the Prairie Provinces, the lake region and central States, but relatively low from the Dakotas southward and a deep disturbance is centred over southern Labrador, causing strong westerly winds and gales in the gulf of St. Lawrence.

Lake Superior: Moderate variable winds; fair. Friday—Moderate to fresh winds; partly cloudy and probably showers over west portion; mostly fair in east.

Manitoba: Partly cloudy today and Friday; not much change in temperature; probably showers in southern districts.

Saskatchewan and Alberta: Mostly fair today and Friday and becoming a little warmer.

Why the Weather !

There is a Scotch legend to the effect that anyone who has seen the "green ray" can not be deceived in love. The green ray, or green flash, is seen best when the sun sets (or rises) in a clear atmosphere over water. Just as the sun is about to disappear a good observer will see a flash of light of pure emerald green. It is explained by the laws of refraction or bending; the atmosphere due to its becoming thinner with elevation forms a gaseous prism, and light from the sun is bent going through it. The last element of light from the setting sun is broken up into the rainbow colors and as green is bent more than the red or yellow

Powerful Reserve Fleet Sails Away for Tactical Practice

London, Aug. 10—(CP)—Foggy weather today permitted bombers from "Eastland" to slip past Great Britain's channel coast defences as aerial manoeuvres continued.

Once over the interior, however, they encountered a vigorous defence from "Westland" forces, which put hundreds of combat planes into action to supplement balloon barrages.

A number of the attacking craft were technically forced down, and others were driven back over the channel.

The "Westland" forces are under command of Air Chief Marshal Sir Hugh Dowding, who is responsible for the defence of a sector extending from the English Channel to the North Sea.

Blackout Test

The blackout of London and 26 counties after midnight tonight is intended to test means of preventing invading forces from "destroying" the capital and other vital centres. So far only a few bombers have penetrated as far as London.

Last night's postponement of the blackout because of adverse weather conditions was ordered so late that defensive measures continued in half of England. Birmingham, Rochester, Brighton, Bedford and other cities which tried an advance blackout last night will repeat the exercises tonight.

Suspension of Hostilities

Suspension of hostilities due to the weather lasted from 10:30 p.m. yesterday until 5 a.m. today. Thirteen hundred planes are taking part in the exercises, 500 attacking and the rest being assigned to defence. The games will continue until 5 p.m. tomorrow.

In telegrams to army units last night the war office expressed appreciation for the way the land forces were carrying on in the face of adverse weather conditions and voiced hope the skies would clear for today's events.

CANADA'S FUTURE RESTS IN EMPIRE

Col. Drew Speaks to Aldborough Township Old Boys Association

Port Glasgow, Ont., Aug. 10 — (CP)—Lieut.-Col. George A. Drew, Ontario Conservative Leader, told a gathering of 2,500 persons here yesterday that Canada should look first to the British Empire for co-operation and then to the United States for friendship.

Canada could not guard its shores without the aid of the Empire, or the United States, Col. Drew said in an address to the 35th annual picnic of the Aldborough Township Old Boys' Association. In that event, he continued, Canada should bear her full responsibilities within the empire or become part of the United States.

"That is the real issue," he said. "With full knowledge and respect for the friendship that I entertain, I believe that our future lies with the British Empire."

Premier Mitchell Hepburn sent a telegram of regret at his inability to attend the picnic.

Potocki Sees Danger Before Oct .1; Hitler's Chance Gone by Next Spring

Washington, Aug. 10—(AP) — Count Jerzy Potocki, Polish Ambassador to the United States, said yesterday it would require a "miracle" to find a solution to the European crisis resulting from the Danzig issue.

He reported to Sumner Welles, acting Secretary of State, shortly after his return from Poland.

"If we can get by until Oct. 1, there will not be war before next spring" he told reporters. But he would not name any odds on Europe's ability to "get by" until Oct. 1.

He said he did not think the tension abroad "can go on indefinitely without war."

"This is the time for Hitler to act if he ever intends to do so," he said, "because by next spring the coalition against him will be so strong that the initiative will be taken away from him and be held by Great Britain."

He thought it possible the Danzig Senate might one day decree Danzig to be German, but said this would be a signal for Poland to act, and he was confident Great Britain and France would immediately join her.

Toronto Gas Employee Dies Hero's Death Saving Scores of Lives

John Weeks Remained at Post in Cellar of Gas Plant Though Advised to Leave — Scalded by Steam He Climbed Stairs to Give Alarm to Others

Toronto, Aug. 10—(CP)—John Weeks, veteran employee of the Consumers' Gas Company died a hero's death, in a successful effort to save scores of lives during Tuesday's storm. He died last night in hospital and details of his bravery were revealed today.

He was working in the cellar of the plant trying to clear a plugged drain to keep rising water from reaching a six-inch steam pipe. Other workmen fled and advised him to leave.

He stayed behind. The water reached the pipe which exploded and Weeks was scalded badly by escaping steam.

In terrible agony from the scalding, he climbed a flight of stairs and dragged himself 400 yards to warn chief engineer Alex Stewart to draw the fires and avoid a boiler explosion.

"He was a brave man." said Wilfred Philpot, superintendent of the gas company. "He knew what to expect when the water reached the pipe and he stuck to his job. He was that kind of a man.

"What we'll never know is the torture he went through on that journey to warn the other men and avoid an explosion."

Coroner Dr. C. P. Fenwick said an inquest would be held.

STOUT TIMBERS ARE TAKEN DOWN

Artisanship of Builders of Old Citadel Revealed During Demolition

What was once the proud citadel of the local corps of the Salvation Army is gradually being reduced to a pile of brick and timber. Today only one wall of the building stands as workmen under the supervision of Contractor Harry Perry, gradually demolish the structure.

Sturdy timbers that, according to all appearances, have many more years of usefulness lie on the ground in front of the site.

Of solid oak, and a hardness that the ordinary nail will not penetrate, timbers lie, nearby, sturdy testimony of the ability and craftsmanship of the artisans of a half-century ago.

Solid metal circular supports, joined together by hand-forged couplings, also contribute to the meticulous care taken by those workmen of years ago in the construction of buildings.

Demolition of the buildings is expected to be completed within a few days.

HOPPERS DAMAGE ONTARIO CROPS

Are Nipping Off Individual Oats from Head in East Ontario

Ottawa, Aug. 10—(CP)— Grasshoppers are unusually abundant at the present time in many localities in Eastern Ontario and are causing considerable damage to grain and some other crops, says a statement issued by the Dominion Department of Agriculture yesterday. Oats especially are being injured, the grasshoppers nipping off the individual oats from the head. Where the insects are abundant and are seriously reducing the yield in this way and other control measures are not attempted, farmers might be well advised to cut their oats for green feed rather than risk the total loss of the heads, advises the division of entomology.

SAY MAN AND BOY SEEN

Toronto, Aug. 10—(CP)—Police said today George Connor, 12-year-old Toronto boy, and Arthur Armstrong, sought on a charge of abducting the Connor youth, were seen on the Toronto-Hamilton highway near Hamilton.

The boy has been missing from his home here for a month.

Picton Man Thrilled Large Crowd While Sleeping on Narrow Ledge

Picton, Ont., (Special)—Perched precariously on an eight-inch ledge that overlooks a seventy-foot drop to the rocky bottom of the "Devil's Punch Bowl" at Glenora, William Dunlop, forty-eight year old Picton resident alternately thrilled and horrified hundreds of local residents, the Picton police force and the fire department last night as he slept blissfully unaware of his danger. Wakening, Dunlop rose, while spectators gasped, and clambered fifteen feet up the almost perpendicular side of the cliff to safety.

A few minutes later Picton police lodged him in jail charged with drunkenness in a public place.

Dunlop reached his eyrie perch when he crawled through an abandoned tunnel that is the continuation of an old Indian cave situated about 100 feet south of the Glenora Fish Hatchery. The tunnel is small and will permit the entry of a slim man only. It was used by Indians who crawled to the top of the high cliff to watch for the approach of enemies.

He made his first trip through the tunnel in the early afternoon when he took his two young children on a trip of exploration through the cave and tunnel. Later in the evening, saying he had left his tobacco pouch on the cliff he returned alone.

Dangerous Resting Place

Sitting down at the egress of the tunnel he fell asleep. A few minutes later he slipped out of the opening and came to rest on the eight-inch ledge with his feet dangling over the precipice that dropped sheer for seventy-feet. Quietly he slept, unaware that any move might plunge him to his death to the rocks below. Recent rains had washed the rocky ledge clean. It was slippery and dangerous..

Then along the foot of the cliff strolled young Patsy Gardner of Flint, Michigan, a guest at the home of John Branner. She saw the man's feet dangling over the ledge from his lofty perch. She called for help and neighbors rushed to the scene. Police were notified, and the alarm spread. Within a few minutes hundreds of people had flocked to the scene.

They crowded about the foot of the cliff. Police warned them not to shout and frighten the sleeping man into wakefulness. For hours, it seemed, the crowd stared and gasped. Some terrified, others thrilled, at what looked to be impending tragedy.

Constable Frank Smith crawled through the cave and the tunnel, but could not approach Dunlop sufficiently to grasp him. He was afraid to waken him for fear he would "start" and fall.

The Picton fire department raced to the scene with ladders but they were not long enough to reach the sleeping man.

Then it happened. Dunlop wakened, stared about him, gazed curiously at the wide-eyed crowd below him, slowly stretched himself to his feet, then turned and in what seemed an impossible feat clamored up the remaining fifteen feet of the cliff to safety of its crest.

Picton, Ont., Aug. 10—(CP)—William Dunlop of Picton, who provided Picton's fire brigade, police force and several hundred spectators with plenty of thrills yesterday after scaling a steep bank above the Devil's Punch Bowl at nearby Glenora, appeared in court today on a charge of being intoxicated in a public place. He will appear in court again next Wednesday.

Passing motorists first spotted the teetering mountain climber. He was seen on a narrow ledge 70 feet above rocky land after crawling through a 60-foot tunnel to a cave on the cliff face.

He was sleeping peacefully when the police department arrived on the scene, but awakened before the fire department could arrive with the ladder crew. Dunlop wavered along the narrow path back to safety and a police cell.

ALLOW LATITUDE TO AIR LINES

Canada and U. S. Agree No Artificial Boundary to Affect Services

Ottawa, Aug. 10—(CP)—General agreement that no artificial boundary should be permitted to affect international air transportation services was reached yesterday by United States and Canadian government officials at the first meeting of a conference on air transportation.

Representatives of both governments agreed that there should be "some give and take," respecting international boundaries as far as air lines are concerned, it was reported after the first day's session.

It was understood Canadian delegates suggested both United States and Canadian air line operators be permitted considerable latitude in scheduled air line services in a zone roughly 100 miles on each side of the international boundary, and that scheduled lines joining Canadian and United States cities be operated on alternate days by Canadian and American air lines.

The Canadians, it was reported unofficially, pointed out that in general, United States operators enjoyed more franchises to operate lines into Canada than the Canadian companies had into United States territory. Canada will ask for an "even exchange" of such privileges, it is believed.

DANZIG KEYED UP, AWAITS SPEECH

Forster Expected to Say Poland Has No Claim on Danzig City

Danzig, Aug. 10—(AP)—Danzig was keyed to a high pitch today as Nazis awaited district leader Albert Forster's word from Chancellor Hitler at a mass meeting planned as a "great protect demonstration" against Polish claims to Danzig.

Forster was to speak about 8 p.m. (3 p.m. EDT).

Speculation on what message Forster would deliver ran along three lines, but no one besides Hitler and Forster could say which was right.

The most conservative and generally accepted view was that the district leader, with Hitler's backing, would confine himself to rejecting in most positive terms any claims of Poland to Danzig and the demand of part of the Polish press for annexing East Prussia.

Old Mother Hubbard Lived In Poorhouse on 45 Cents Week

London, Aug. 10—(CP)— Old Mother Hubbard who "went to the cupboard" was claimed today for the Kentish Village of Ightham by Sir Edward Harrison of the Kent Archaeological Society.

With a literary laugh up his sleeve, Sir Edward wrote to the Times he had found records that Mrs. Hubbard was an Ightham poorhouse charge in 1784 with an allowance of 45 cents a week and meager belongings including one "corner cupburd."

"This cupboard could not be otherwise than bare" on that pittance he said, adding, "in face of these particulars the temptation to claim for Ightham the heroine of the well-known nursery rhyme is irresistible."

DANZIG 'BLIND'

Germany and Italy Seek Use of Yugoslav Territory and Placing of All Resources at Disposal of Axis Powers in Event of War

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Aug. 10 — (AP)—German and Italian demands for use of Yugoslav territory in wartime were reported authoritatively today to have been refused by Yugoslavia, and orders were issued to speed up fortifications on the German frontier.

Premier Dragisha Cvetkovish prepared to take off in a bombing plane for talks in Italy with Foreign Minister Count Ciano and possibly Premier Mussolini during which it was said he would declare rejection of the reported demands. (Italy's official Stefani Agency said Cvetkovish would inspect Fascist recreation, social and welfare organizations).

The Premier's use of the bomber was seen as a symbol of the will of this strategic Balkan country to keep an armed and strict neutrality.

Democracies Behind Yugoslavs

Great Britain and France were said by authoritative sources to have told Regent Prince Paul on his recent trip to London and Paris that they would back Yugoslavia in case she came into conflict with Germany and Italy. Her surrender in any such conflict would mean a severe blow to Rumania, Greece and Turkey, which have guarantees of independence from the Anglo-French front.

The Yugoslav government was said to have decided that the slightest compliance with the Italian and German proposals would be incompatible with the nation's sovereignty.

ITALIANS HUNT FOR TREASURE ON SUNKEN SHIP

Divers Blast Doors off Baggageroom and Find it Empty

NOW SEARCH SAND

Norfolk, Va., Aug. 10—(AP)— A two-year old Italian expedition which has cost $100,000 returned to sea today confident it was near recovery of the "treasure" aboard the sunken steamship Merida.

Divers blasted rusted doors from the Merida's baggage room yesterday—but found it bare. The excited crew of the salvage ship Falco had hoped to find $250,000 in silver bullion stored in the compartments.

The expedition found encouragement, however, in the discovery of a single silver ingot, valued at $7.50, on the ocean floor beside the wreckage and divers planned to dig deep into the sand at this spot today.

Dr. Mario Silvestri, expedition head and Captain Harry Mydleton, third officer of the ill-fated Merida who said he supervised the storing of silver bullion in the baggage room, held to the belief that the metal had spilled into the sand.

NEWS ODDITIES AND BRIEFS

SALT PRESCRIBED DURING SPELL OF WARM WEATHER

Washington, Aug. 10 (AP)—The United States Health Service prescribed liberal doses of salt today for the entire population.

If salt lost in perspiration is not replaced regularly and in adequate amounts, an official said, the sweat glands of the body close up and heat prostration results.

PREM. HEPBURN EXPECTS LARGE ONION CROP

St. Thomas, Ont., Aug. 10 (CP)—Onion harvesting is due to start this week on Premier Mitchell Hepburn's farm near here. He expects to harvest 40,000 bushels of onions from a reclaimed black muck portion of his farm.

ENGLISH GIRLS ON LONG CYCLING TOUR

Niagara Falls, Ont., Aug. 10—(CP)—Beatrice Rowe of Dauphin, Man., and Eva Cooper of England were visitors here on a cycling tour across Canada. The girls, who left here for Duluth, Minn., on their way to Dauphin, said it cost them about 75 cents a day for living expenses and they covered 60 miles a day.

INDIAN RAJA LOYAL TO BRITAIN

Montreal, Aug. 10 (CP)—The Raja of Tripura, arriving from Ottawa for a two-day visit, told reporters last night that his country and resources would be 100 percent behind Great Britain in the event of war. The Raja, ruler of an Indian state of 383,000 persons, said he was of the first in India to offer aid to the British crown at the time of the Munich crisis.

Says Wife Banished Him to Cellar Three Years Ago

Elizabeth, N.J., Aug. 10 (CP)—A woman described by Domestic Relations Court Judge Waldman as 'of vixenish temper and disposition' had a room prepared in her home today for her husband, who told the Court she banished him to the cellar three years ago.

John Spugani, a refinery employee, father of two sons, told Judge Waldman he lived in the basement since 1936 and that his wife refused to cook his food. He testified she evicted him from the cellar three weeks ago, but he returned.

"Modern man doesn't have to live as the cave man did," Judge Waldman said. He ordered the wife to provide a bedroom for her husband and to prepare his meals.

Smokestack Convict Stays at Portsmouth

Kingston, Ont., Aug. 10.—(CP)—Marcel Avelin, 40 who staged a 13-hour sitdown strike atop a 125-foot smokestack at Kingston Penitentiary Tuesday, has not been transferred back to St. Vincent de Paul Penitentiary and he probably will be kept at Kingston, it was learned today.

Avelin, serving 20 years for a holdup, was transferred to Kingston a few weeks ago. He staged his strange strike, ended sometime Tuesday night when a heavy wind and rain storm forced him down, in an attempt to get a transfer back to St. Vincent.

CARL FISHER NOW ON LOCAL STAFF OF O.P.P.

Provincial Constable Carl Fisher, who has been connected with O.P.P. Headquarters staff at Toronto for the past two years, reported for duty at No. 8 District Headquarters, Belleville, this week. Constable Fisher was moved to Belleville in the recent redistribution of Provincial Police officers throughout Ontario, that took effect on August 1st., Inspector Frank Gardner announced this morning. Constable Fisher is a native of Belleville and was educated in this city. He was accepted into the Provincial Police two years ago and replaced Constable Carruthers, who was moved to Campbellford last week.

PETERBOROUGH LAKES GET DEER LAKE FRY

Bass fry from the Deer Lake fish hatchery near Marmora, are being placed this week by the Ontario Department of Game and Fisheries in Pigeon River of the Peterborough district. Other lakes of that area which will be restocked within the next week are Pigeon Lake, Buckhorn, Deer, Lovesick Lake and Stoney Lake.

HIGHWAYS ENGINEER LOCATES IN KINGSTON

Harvey Small, district municipal engineer of the Ontario Department of Highways for the Counties of Hastings, Frontenac, Leeds and Grenville, who has been stationed at Brockville for some time past has taken up permanent residence in Kingston and will locate there in September. John Whitton, assistant engineer, will also be located in Kingston.

FORMER DEER AREA IS NOW OVERCUT

Sawyer-Stoll Lumber Company engaged in lumber cutting through the northern section of Lennox-Addington, an area formerly favored by local deer hunters annually, is at work cutting the winter's supply of logs into planks for United States export. It is estimated by the company that 2,000,000 feet of lumber will be cut this summer. Since sawing started an average force of 50 men has been given steady work.

PURE WHITE CRANE SEEN ON TRENT

An albino crane is the newest feathered oddity reported in this district.

The unusual bird with all white plumage and yellow bill and black legs was observed placidly fishing in the Trent Canal this week by A. G. Morgan, lockmaster at Lock No. 10. The bird appears unusually tame and has been observed by many of the section.

GENERAL INCREASE IN GAME LICENCE ISSUE

In line with reports from the local office of Geo. Finch, fishing and game licence issuer for this district, that heavier numbers of permits have been issued to more applicants so far this season, a report from the office of D. J. Taylor, deputy minister of Game and Fisheries for the Province, indicates that Ontario appears to be on its way to setting a record for revenue gained from the sale of non-resident anglers' licences this year.

Revenue at the end of July was 27 per cent higher than for the same four months of the fiscal year in 1938.

DAIRY OFFICIALS TO SPEAK AT MEETING

Dairymen and others throughout the Central Ontario district interested in this branch of the agricultural industry will gather on Friday evening in the Albion Street warehouse of Mr. James Cook, where a free discussion on all matters connected with the dairy industry will be held. The meeting will be addressed by Mr. H. B. Sandwith, chief dairy instructor of the Province, and Mr. C. E. Lackner, director of Dairying for Ontario. Mr. J. L. Irwin, Dominion dairy grader, and others will also speak.

WILD LIFE GIVES FIRST HINT OF FALL

The first disturbing note of an idyllic summer season is contained in the report today by Ralph Summers, local commercial fisherman, that wild ducks have commenced to flock together in the bay in first preparation for the annual trek south, and in the marshes red-winged black birds have also been reported flocking for the first time.

Through the Narrows and Long Reach of the Bay of Quinte lately, hundreds of ducks are seen morning and evening in large flocks.

LOCAL STUDENTS WIN DAIRY SCHOOL AWARDS

Among the graduates from this district who received dairy school diplomas at the graduation exercises of the Kemptville Agricultural School this week were A. E. Lochlin, Frankford; R. F. Broadworth, Belleville; F. Cassidy, Stoco; K. Bray, West Huntingdon; J. E. Motley, Belleville; B. O'Coin, Tweed; H. A. McKillican, Madoc; E. R. Callaghan, Corbyville.

In the dairy school awards those who shared in the $100 prize money offered by the Montreal Provision Trade Association of Montreal Board of Trade, A. Kearney of Stella and A. E. Locklin of Frankford, tied for highest standing in general proficiency. In Butter making R. E. Broadworth, of Belleville, was awarded a $10 prize for proficiency.

Wm. Bishop of Belleville, was named in the list of the 1939 graduates of the school.

E. INDIAN STUDENT PRAISES CANADA

Mahomed Sulaiman Likes the People and is Very Fond of Maple Syrup

Marmora, Aug. 10 (Special)—Marmora had an interesting visitor this week in the person of Mahomed Sulaiman of Hyderabad Deccan, India. In May of next year, Mr. Sulaiman will complete two years' studies at Macdonald College, Montreal (the major subjects being Agriculture and Entomology) following two years spent in an Indian University. During his vacation he has been spending a month at Spencerville with G. Hammond, M.Sc., White Grub Specialist of the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa. Mr. Hammond has been making various visits to Marmora Township this summer in carrying out an investigation on the farm of Donald Shannon and the young Indian student accompanied him on his visit this week. Though only in his early twenties, Mr. Sulaiman has travelled extensively. He has visited all parts of India except Punjab and the Frontier and has toured Europe. He is most favorably impressed with Canada. He likes the Canadians and he enjoys his meals. He was delighted to make the acquaintance of maple syrup. His race enjoys sweets of any kind and to discover a new variety in this country was a distinct pleasure to the young Indian student. Some skiing takes place on the snow-clad mountains of his native country but only a small minority indulge in it. Mr. Sulaiman has entered enthusiastically into Canadian winter sports but he says, "My two hobbies are tennis and photography." Incidentally he is the champion tennis singles player of Macdonald College. Not only are the members of his family highly educated but they are also athletic. Both sexes are ardent tennis players and the gentlemen also excel in cricket. One of Mr. Sulaiman's uncles is an expert polo player. Mr. Sulaiman visited the Marmora Tennis Courts on Wednesday evening and considers the village is fortunate in having such splendid courts.

F. DAVEY DIAMOND NOW SUPREME GRAND MASTER

Sovereign Grand Priory Elects Belleville Man to Highest Office in Templar Masonry

F. Davey Diamond of the King Baldwin Preceptory, Belleville, was elected Supreme Grand Master of the Knights Templar during the annual convocation of the Sovereign Great Priory of Canada, Knights Templar, held at Stratford this week. Sir Knight Diamond is a Past Presiding Officer of King Baldwin Preceptory and has long been an active and interested Knight Templar.

Several members of King Baldwin Preceptory attended the conclave in Stratford, many accompanied by their wives. Some of the Knight delegates were G. E. Dobbs, W. P. Youdale, O. G. Alyea, H. J. Andrews, T. A. Solmes, F. D. Diamond and E. J. Wilmink and others. During the convention the attending ladies were given special entertainment, which added much to the color of the convocation.

THREE INJURED IN AUTO CRASH

Three city and district residents, Leo Bellinger, R.R. 5; Belleville; George Ostrom, Jr., 20 Cedar Street, and Bruce Keegan, 75 Cedar Street were admitted to Belleville General Hospital early this morning suffering with minor injuries received in an automobile accident two miles north of the city on the Foxboro-Belleville Highway.

Bellinger, the most seriously injured is suffering with head and shoulder injuries while Ostrom and Keegan received more or less severe cuts about the face. Dr. F. R. Ross is in attendance.

According to investigating police, the Bellinger car was proceeding north along the highway when it was struck from behind by a car driven by Ostrom, hurling it into the ditch where it rested on its end. The Ostrom car carried along by its momentum careened down the road for some distance, landing in the ditch with its side staved in and a wheel broken. Bellinger's car was also badly damaged.

Sergeant Harry Thompson, H.T.O. Sam Ervine and Constable Everett Smith of the Provincial Police investigated the accident. The probe is still proceeding.

Police Blotter

Several court informations were issued by Acting Chief Harman, charging local citizens with unlawfully harbouring dogs without first having obtained a dog licence and tag, contrary to city ordinances. These matters will be presented in tomorrow's city police court before Magistrate E. J. Butler K.C.

Game Warden Herb McCabe reported the theft of a camera and a carton of cigarettes of American make. The articles were stolen from on automobile parked on Mr. McCabe's property. The motor car and stolen goods were the property of U.S.A. visitors, the Warden revealed. Sneak thieves have been quite active in Belleville of late and are believed responsible.

County Traffic Court was held before Magistrate E. J. Butler K.C. at the Court House this morning. A lengthy list of traffic violations was presented including charges of speeding, failing to produce individual driver's permits and careless driving. No major charges were heard.

Only three transients sought sleeping quarters at the police station last night, sleeping beneath the starry canopy of the heavens being quite acceptable these warm nights.

LIVELY COURSE

Roger Lapham, president of the Cypress Point Golf Club at Monterey, took three prominent New Yorkers to Cypress Point for a game. He told them they were very apt to see elk, deer, pelicans, and sealions in the course of their game. He was subjected to the usual chaff regarding tendency of Californians to exaggerate.

This is what actually took place: On the second hole, there were three deer on the green; on the third hole, a herd of several elk had to be shooed off the fairway.—Monterey (Calif.) Herald.

OBITUARY

GEORGE GOULD (Thorold)

Stirling, Aug. 9 (Special)— The funeral took place on Saturday, August 5th at the home of Mr. R. E. Gould, Stirling of late Mr. George Gould, former Stirling resident who passed away at his home in Thorold, Ontario, suddenly, at the age of 43 years. Deceased was born in the village of Stirling, being the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Gould and spent the early days of his life here. During the Great War he served with the 155th Battalion of the Canadian Expeditionary Forces. Upon his return home he accepted a position at Thorold, Ontario, as lockmaster on the Welland Canal. Surviving are his widow, formerly Miss Jury of England and six children, Mr. R. E. Gould of Stirling is a brother.

The funeral service was conducted by Rev. Canon Swayne of Bonarlaw at the home of Mr. R. E. Gould and interment was made in Stirling cemetery.

The pall bearers were Messrs. Arthur Gordonier, E. Wannamaker, Wilfred Gravers, Jack Ackers, E. Dainard, Chas. Wood.

LATE MRS. MARY A. THOMPSON

The funeral of Mrs. Mary Ann Thompson took place from her late residence, 31 Everett Street, Wednesday morning, Aug. 9th. The service in the home and at the graveside in Belleville Cemetery was conducted by the Rt. Rev. Bishop Marshall, assisted by the Rev. A. L. Geen.

The bearers were Messrs. George and Jack Ellenor of Toronto; Alex. Dingwall, Toronto; Gordon Johnston, Perth; Raymond Connor, Campbellford, all grandsons of the deceased and a nephew, George Thompson, Belleville.

After a lengthy illness Mrs. M.D. Adams passed away at the family residence, 212 Foster Avenue, early this Thursday morning.

The late Mrs. Adams, who prior to her marriage was Miss Emma Jane Laughlin, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. George Laughlin, was born at Marlbank, Ont. After living there for some years she went with her husband to reside in Toronto. After being there for seven years the family came to make their home in Belleville seventeen years ago. In religion Mrs. Adams was a member of Bridge Street United Church. She was a woman of quiet disposition and possessed many fine traits of character. In the communities where she lived at various times she was highly esteemed.

Surviving her are her husband, Mr. M. D. Adams; one daughter, Mrs. D. R. Eadie, Belleville; one brother, Mr. William Laughlin, Belleville; three sisters, Mrs. Albert Baxter, Point Anne; Mrs. R. A. Allen, Toronto, and Mrs. Ruben Kellar, Enterprise, Ont.

The late Mrs. Adams is resting at the Thomas C. Thompson Funeral Home, Everett Street.

The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

LATE FENTON REID (Empey Hill)

Empey Hill, Aug. 10 (Special)—Mrs. Harold Winter received the sad news on Saturday morning that her father, Mr. Fenton Reid, had been instantly killed crossing the road in front of his late residence. The sympathy of the community is extended to Mrs. Winter and family.

The funeral was held on Monday afternoon at the house and was conducted by Rev. Delve, of Ivanhoe, a former pastor and Rev. Wager, of Morven. Interment was in Fourth Line cemetery.

The bearers were his two sons, Rae and Clifford Reid and four sons-in-law, John Hagerman, Dorland Jackson, Harold Winter and Bill Hunter.

A number from this vicinity attended the funeral.

BALLOONS USED

"The Secretary of State for war and all members of the army council wish to record their appreciation for the way in which the whole army—regular, reserves, territorial and militia—are carrying out their many tasks in exceptionally trying conditions," the telegram said.

Over 100 Balloons Used

The Air Ministry announced that between 4 and 8.30 p.m. last night more than 100 balloons were flown over London at a safety height of 2,000 feet. The balloon barrage and poor visibility made the attack on London most "hazardous" it was added.

In the early afternoon 'Eastland' forces, moving in small bomb formations, maintained a steady attack upon southern and southeastern counties. The raiders took advantage of the bad weather conditions to employ new cloud tactics.

'Westland" fighter squadrons reported they had intercepted a number of enemy craft. Some were "shot down." The spitfire fighters scored signal victories over "attacking" planes near Cambridge, Spalding and Bassingbourne, it was announced.

Late in the afternoon the weather became so bad that the balloon barrage was close-hauled until conditions improved. This action was taken to lessen the danger for civil aircraft flying between England and the continent. In time of war this safety regulation during bad weather would not be enforced.

The intensity of the enemy attack and the activities of the defenders diminished late in the evening.

Reserve Fleet on Practice

Weymouth, England, Aug. 10—(CP)—The reserve fleet — veteran craft called into active service for any autumn emergency—steamed proudly off today for a fortnight of tactical practice before joining the home fleet in manoeuvres in the North Sea.

The reserve fleet, placed in commission in less than ten days of speedy work and regarded as an outstanding example of any efficiency and discipline, numbered 133 units, from such powerful craft as the Iron Duke, veteran of Jutland, down to speedy motor torpedo boats, when the King inspected it yesterday.

His Majesty Sees Powerful Fleet

His Majesty took a good soaking when, during a steady rain, he jumped from barge to ship and back again several times in visiting units of the fleet. Later, aboard the royal barge, he passed up and down the long grey columns of vessels in Weymouth Bay.

The fleet he saw was powerful enough to be the first line of many a nation.

Allot Each Country 'Equitable Share' of Wheat Market Plan

By OVID MARTIN

Associated Press Staff Writer

Washington, Aug. 10—(AP)—Representatives of the world's major wheat-exporting nations are meeting in London in a effort to agree on a way to end what some economists call the "wheat war."

The 'war' is a struggle for markets—markets which since the Great War have been growing smaller and smaller, while production, under the impetus of power machinery and increased areas of cultivation, has been increasing.

An attempt is being made to reach an agreement allotting each country its 'equitable share' of the remaining world markets. Such an agreement would forbid price-cutting and the use of export subsidies.

Advocates of such an agreement say that it would necessitate world-wide production control. No country would find it feasible, they say, to produce more grain than was needed for its own people, its share of the world markets and a normal reserve.

RAIN

This part of Ontario with a large section of Canada has felt the benign influence of rain. The fall of the drops was music to the ears of millions who have suffered in the heat wave and who have an interest in the welfare of the crops. The rain here was gentle, there were no untoward accompaniments as lightning and tempest winds. And yet one and one twentieth inches of rain fell.

Well may the people feel thankful for the blessing of the rain in the fields, in the cooling of the atmosphere as well as for the absence of violent disturbances.

The all-night rain which ended with dawn yesterday was the most needed rain this part of Ontario has had for a long time.

A TRAGIC CONSEQUENCE

There was a tragic event the other day in a great city when a Czecho-Slovak mother jumped with her two sons to death. She had been driven to madness through the persecutions which have fallen on the Czecho-Slovak race at the hands of the Nazi terror.

National calamities sooner or later reach the family and the individual.

Such an event makes the world bow its head in sorrow, regret and pain that any humans should have to endure so much and that the end should come as it came in the case of this woman.

Those who believe in the justice not only of men but also of the Power which made and rules all things, cannot but feel somehow a heavy retribution will fall on persons responsible for making people pass through such horrors and terrors as the victims have had to endure, and that justice will be done and righteousness will be demonstrated.

ALLIANCE OR AXIS

There has never been much difference of opinion between Britain and France where they stand. But the Berlin-Rome-Tokyo axis is another thing. The Anglo-French relationship is a free one of co-operation and unified service. But the Berlin-Rome-Tokyo relationship seems to differ very much. For a long time there was wondering whether Italy was hand-in-glove with Germany or whether Italy would really follow Hitler. Now Japan discusses its relationship with the Axis and is doing some thinking, and there is a sharp divergence of opinion.

Indeed there has been wonder how the European part of the Axis could carry on with the Japanese, for dictatorial lands, it seems, can hardly be bound firmly together by the desire of individual nations in the axis for the dictatorial or totalitarian country is wanting something, all three of them ,and there may come a time when interests will clash, while interests with the democracies would not lead to such a clash. Britain and France have common ground and one does not have to be forced by the other, but the German and the Italian and Japanese have no common ground. What probably in the long run will it mean? The three dictatorial lands, watching the democracies and taking time off to watch one another with suspicion, and all the time there is the possibility of one trying to sidle over to the party with whom it might think itself more secure.

ANOTHER GERMAN DEMONSTRATION

Before the Great War the world outside of a few men of the inner circles knew little of what war meant. No one had heard of national registration, which came in the course of that struggle.

Today is quite another age. Nation tells the world what it is planning to do. Latest announcement of this kind is the German registration of man, woman and child civilian power, from five years to seventy years to serve the purposes of the state civilly in the event of emergency.

To the world the purpose is apparent—Germany means to be regarded as all-powerful and ready for a conflict.

Yet the world is confident of one thing—as Rt. Hon. Winston Churchill said—"Unless Herr Hitler makes war, there will be no war."

Germans apparently as a nation do not realize this as a fact, but the rest of the world does.

The German announcement of registeration of civilian power shows what a Nazi spokesman remarked that Germany is "squeezing the last drop of efficiency out of a nation which already has attained an impressive degree of all round experience," as he said.

Do the Germans whose means of communication with the outer world are cut off by rigid control of the press and of radio reception really believe that these demonstrations are being made by Germany of necessity; have they been taught that it is to ward off an enemy? Outside of the Axis Powers, the world knows that it is not the aim of other Powers to fight Germany and the world believes Herr Hitler realiezs that but the world asks why then these demonstrations of defensiveness.

Will the approaching demonstrations of August and September be the peak of demonstration on the part of the Axis Powers? Rest of the nations are inclined to think so and to believe that democracies can continue their manifestations of strength which is not yet full grown.

"A LABOR-BAITING, POKER PLAYING, WHISKY-DRINKING, EVIL OLD MAN," is the title John Lewis, Labor leader, gave Vice-President Garner, in addressing a committee of the United States Senate recently, causing quite a sensation in the customary very proper decorum of the Senate. "Some gentlemen may rise in horror and say "Why Mr. Lewis has made a personal attack upon Mr. Garner," continued Labor Leader Lewis. "Yes, I make a personal attack upon Mr. Garner for what he is doing, because Garner's knife is searching for the quivering, pulsating heart of labor, and I am against him. I am against him officially, individually, concretely, and in the abstract, when his knife searches for the heart of my people. I am against him in 1939 and I will be against him in 1940 when he seeks the Presidency of the United States" Vice President Garner, when asked by reporters for a statement in answer to John L. Lewis' broadside, replied with a smile, as is his established custom, "No comment." His friends, however, waxed very indignant and assert that "Cactus Jack" has long since ceased his "ceiling's the limit" poker game, plays a little rummy instead, likes an occasional drink but has never been seen intoxicated or even slightly groggy, and culminating proof of his steady habits, is always in bed by 9.30 unless there is some important social function which he must attend. So, John Lewis' attack on the Vice President has backfired and while not injuring the Vice President will not do Labor Leader Lewis any good.

NO BIBBLE-BABBLER IS SENATOR HENRY FOUNTAIN ASHURST OF ARIZONA, according to the Time magazine which credits the Senator from Arizona of being the world's greatest active volcano of words. Not only in the Senate is Senator Ashurst loquacious, but he became so "intoxicated with the exuberance of his own verbosity" recently, that he caused to be inserted in the Congressional Record a panegric of 19½ pages, 40,000 plus words—one of those speeches which is not spoken but is taken as read and printed for consumption back home, sent free by mail. In the Senate since 1932 Senator Ashurst said: "This doesn't mean that I am starting to run for another term. It means merely that I am continuing to run." No bibble-babbler is the Senator from Arizona. "His tongue can burn as well as bless. When the late Huey P. Long had the U. S. Senate buffaloed, hog-tied and helpless with his parliamentary agility, when few Senators even dared to cross him, Ashurst took the floor one day, July 15, 1935, to give Huey what still stands in the Senate's books as the most comprehensive dressing down administered in the chamber in modern history, a flaying executed so neatly and yet so politely, rich in classical allusion and historical anecdote, that the garrulous Kingfish was for once stumped for an answer." Said Senator Ashurst on public speaking: "A speech is entertaining only when serenely detached from all information." On Vice President Garner: "You play a straight oftener than almost any other man I know." On consistency: "But there never has been super-added to these vices of mine the withering embalming vice of consistency . . . I suffer from cacoethes, loquendi, a mania, or itch for talking, and from vanity . . . and morbidity, and, as is obvious to everyone who knows me, an inborn, an inveterate flair for histronics . . . I am pachydermatous . . . I am a veritable, peripatetic bifurcated volcano on behalf of democratic principles." So said the Senator from Arizona, who was expected to make his debut in the Senate in a ten-gallon hat and chaps but instead appeared in the latest Washington style, eye-glasses and all.

Living by the Side of the Road

The man who wanted to live by the side of the road evidently had a wife with the same desire. It is often a complaint the roadside dwellers suffer under modern traffic conditions, but the complainants must be in minority.

In the official report of the Housing Centre in London, speaking on the development of highways, it is stated most housewives prefer to live on main streets, mid the bustle and road of heavy traffic. Only husbands like the seclusion of butter cup lanes and the Sabbatarian quietude of suburban avenues. Maybe when we say man is gregarious we mean that most women are.

Women are fated to spend long hours in the home at tasks that can only be monotonous. Their life is circumscribed by the same environment and daily tedium. This man is out in the world of varied interests and meeting many people. He arrives home after the housewife's dull round quite unappreciative of the sameness she suffers. So a woman can be forgiven for wanting to see something in front of the windows.

The animated road spectacle is a boon to the wife engaged for long hours in tedious home duties. Buttercups and daisies only last a little while and winter is never far behind. Then on highways in and out of big cities the arterial roads are the best lighted, best maintained and best served by buses. There is reason to sympathize with housewives who want to see something outside their windows and to live by the side of the busy road.—Port Arthur News-Chronicle.

TOMBSTONES CHEAPER

During the past decade a constantly increasing list of items has entered into the cost of living. But there is one item of expenditure at least that has been cut down. A generation ago families spent small fortunes on massive marble monuments which towered high in the local cemeteries. Today the memorial stones are modest in design as well as in size. In some modern cemeteries the monuments are limited to a height of a foot or 18 inches. In other grounds the stone is limited to a flat plaque. A St. Marys oldtimer recalled the other day that about the turn of the century there were two monument works in St. Marys employing about a dozen people. Today citizens have to order their head-stones through agents. Perhaps it is better that present-day folks are forced to do something worth while in life in order to gain a "lasting monument" in memory of the people.—St. Marys Journal-Argus).

O, CANADA

It was one of the most informal little gatherings of the Royal tour across the interior. When the train stopped at Monte Creek a floral presentation was made by Eddie, three-year-old son of Fred Nichol, Bostock Ranch foreman.

About fifty, including a number of provincial police on special duty, gathered around the King's coach and sang God Save the King.

The King and Queen came out to the observation platform and stood there chatting. The crowd, within five feet of royalty, became stricken dumb. The King had to do all the talking.

"What place is this?" the King asked.

"Monte Creek," was the reply.

Eventually the suggestion arose the crowd should sing. Someone suggested "O Canada".

"Who's going to start it?" asked the King.

Piped a voice: "You lead it, mister."

"Sorry, I can't," the King replied. —Vernon B.C. News.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

TWO CAUSES OF HIGH BLOOD PRESSURE

A professor of medicine was examining the blood-pressure of two sisters, one aged 70 and the other aged 64, and after feeling the blood vessels in the wrist stated that the sister aged 64 was really older than the one aged 70, because her blood vessels were harder, and her blood pressure was therefore higher. The one aged 70 had had a family of nine, whereas the one aged 64 had had but one child. The older sister had also had a more difficult time financially.

The physician pointed out that despite her large family and her more difficult time financially, there were two reasons why she was really younger physically than her younger sister. First, she had had to meet so many more difficulties she had learned thus how to meet and overcome them. There would be, therefore, less tenseness or tightening of the blood vessels from emotional disturbances. Second, she had had all her teeth removed and dental plates fitted at a much earlier age than had her sister.

"As psychic (mental or emotional) influences have a great effect in raising blood pressure, mental hygiene is very important in the treatment of high blood pressure. Cultivation of calmness, moderation, avoidance of haste, ambition, anger, anxiety and excitement—there should be seeking of the quiet easy life. The "blood pressure" should never be discussed and blood pressure examinations should be few and far apart."

Rest and exercise must be prescribed as needed. Regular after-dinner naps; a rest cure, a vacation for the nervous overworked is just as important as is exercise to the easygoing overweight individual. Fresh air and sunshine are good for both. Most individuals with high blood pressure eat too much and exercise too little.

The second cause of high blood pressure to be prevented or corrected is infection. The infection may came from tonsils, teeth, gall bladder, intestine, or other parts of the body. With each infection may come just a slight inflammation of the lining of the blood vessels with the result that the muscular or elastic coat of the blood vessels is replaced by a hard tissue which does not "give" or stretch so readily as blood passes through the blood vessel. It requires more "pressure" to push blood through a hard blood vessel than one that is soft and elastic.

THE PUZZLER

It is reported that among the 1,050 passengers who sailed for Germany this week on the Bremen, many were skilled workers of German origin whose passage was paid by the Reich. It needs their services. Also on the list was a group of German farmers returning to the home country from Canada. This adds to the mystery created by repatriation of German farmers from the Italian Tyrol. Germany needs more "living space", it claims, for its overcrowded people. It is, by official act, increasing its population to meet a labor shortage as the result of work on munitions with which to fight for more living space. Germany's difficulty is that it does not have enough people with which to make the arms it needs to fight for more lands for its people.—New York World-Telegraph.

ENGLISH HUMOUR

The latest idea is perambulators made of rubber. For bouncing babies, we presume.

It is said that moustaches are disappearing in Scotland. When a Scot smokes a cigarette he SMOKES a cigarette.

No one suffers from any disease on the Island of Tristan da Cunha. It seems that golf has been completely stamped out.

A correspondent complains that a barber recently took nearly an hour to shave him. It seems that the fellow had a very bad stammer.

A writer states that castor oil was rediscovered after being lost for 3,000 years. The finder, we presume, does not wish his name to be made public.

A wealthy convict in an American jail provided a six-course dinner for his fellow-prisoners. We understand that the feast was followed by a hearty rendering of "For he's a jolly good felon".—London Humourist.

THE HUMAN SEAL

Most of us envy a man like Krikor Hekemian, a young Armenian, who by his exploits has earned the title Human Seal. The coldest weather has no effect on him. He discovered his immunity to frostbite quite by accident by falling into Lake Ontario when it was 35 degrees (Fahr.) below zero and his clothes were like boards but he felt no discomfort.

Shortly afterwards Hekemian decided very wisely to exploit his ability, and now thousands pay weekly to see him sitting naked on blocks of ice and performing other evolutions which make ordinary people shiver. In mid-winter he walks on ice, clad only in swimming shorts, devours ice-cream with every indication of pleasure, and ends his act by cutting his way through two feet of ice and then plunging in for a swim.

Outwardly he has all the reaction of a freezing man, for his skin turns blue. But that does not prevent him smiling, signing autographs and collecting money from the crowd. Doctors who have examined him cannot explain his immunity to cold.—London Tit-Bits.

"AVAST THERE, ME HEARTIES!"

Look out! Look out! Watch that hand! This jolly tar is taking evident delight in his gustatory efforts, that threaten to result in the digestion of not only the sausage roll but a sailor's hand at the same time. Alfred Young one of Britain's thousands of naval reserves was reporting for duty at Portsmouth taking time out to fortify the inner man on the way.

MOVIE STARS PLAN TO WED

Cary Grant and Phyllis Brooks, Hollywood motion picture stars, arrive in New York from Europe with announcement they plan to wed this fall in California. They would like to get married right away, Grant said, but he has to start work on a new picture.

MAY RETURN TO RUMANIA

Prince Nicholas, of Rumania, who wed a commoner against the wishes of his brother, King Carol, is shown motor-boating at Venice, where he has lived with his bride since his marriage. It is reported that Prince Nicholas may shortly be reinstated in Rumania with all his royal rights. The prince's wife is wearing a unique version of Tyrolean costume here.

TRENTON

HARVARD PLANE IS TESTED HERE

Monoplane Will be Used for Training Purposes Only

Trenton, Aug. 10 (Special)—Arrival of new equipment in the flying line at Trenton Air Station recently has crowded out from the hangars some of the more antiquated planes, and visitors are seeing several weatherbeaten Wapiti bombers tied down on the turf outside hangar No. 2 with tarpaulins protecting motors and propellers from the weather.

Air-minded citizens, particularly the younger ones, have recently been looking over and admiring a Northrop Delta low-winged cabin monoplane that has been in use here for some weeks past. However, most recent to arrive is a Harvard North American training monoplane, a speedy yellow craft which much resembled the clip-winged Oxford Air-speed bombers except that it has only one motor. Tried out in tests at the station over last week-end the new Harvard is said to have attained a speed of almost three hundred miles per hour in a power dive; and even in the air at normal cruising speed is distinguishable from the older planes. The new plane has a retractable landing gear and a covered cockpit. It has a cruising speed well over two hundred miles per hour and is designed for training purposes only. It is said that a number of other ones will follow it here.

Formations of Siskins and Oxfords have been practicing stunt flying recently in preparation for the show and sports day at the Air Station. For the heavier Oxford bombers' stunting is difficult and dangerous, but the Siskins will put on a real show.

First night flying to be done in the new Oxford bombers was attempted at the R.C.A.F. station Wednesday night in the fast Oxford bombers. Previous to this time night flying was always done in Wapitis, Siskins, and Fleets.

Fashion Flashes

Get your share of cool beauty by wearing white at night. A charming dinner dress is of white silk jersey with square neckline and short sleeves. A row of gold filagree buttons from throat to hem and a gold mesh belt set off the white.

Gasps of envy and stares of admiration were noted at a style show for a white fox coat. Sweeping the ground, the skins of the coat are manipulated to form a curved border and wide cape sleeves.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage

HOME-BREAKER'S SUGGESTION FOR KEEPING A MAN'S LOVE

Love affairs outside the home on the part of a husband aren't usually supposed to increase the sum of domestic happiness.

But a woman of what is called the homebreaker type, has written me a letter making this very claim. "Often we guard the marital happiness of the wives who hate us," she asserts speaking, one would think, as a member of some invisible heart-breaker's union.

She herself, she says, is engaged in a prolonged love affair with a married man. Does she express remorse, or repentance? Not she. Writing, on the contrary, in an oddly benevolent vein, she argues that a man who has found love outside marriage wishes to insure himself against losing this love. To this end, he tries to keep his wife contented, free of jealousy or suspicion. He gives "more time, consideration and inward thought to her well-being than she would otherwise enjoy."

This elaborate deceit, says my correspondent, makes the wife happier, while it protects her husband's secret amour.

From her letter you would almost suppose that amours were conducted for the very purpose of increasing a wife's contentment.

And it may be in a loveless marriage that something of this sort can occur. A wife who does not truly love her husband is easily deceived. Having steeled her heart against all further expectations of happiness, busy with her own life, her home and children, she is not on the alert to note signs of affection bestowed elsewhere.

But I doubt very much whether my correspondent's theory is sound in cases where the marriage is one of love. A wife who has known real happiness in her marriage, who needs and depends on her husband's devotion, isn't so easily deceived as the amiable home-breaker supposes. She is indescribably sensitive. A very small thing will suffice to show her that her love is being profaned.

She may then have outbreaks of jealousy, or she may lock the sorrowful certainty within her heart. But if her husband has given his love to another woman, whom he habitually sees, no gift of a new bracelet, no seats for the most popular play, will serve to quiet her resentful doubt. I should even say that these unfamiliar attentions would probably increase her distrust of an unfaithful husband, instead of lulling it.

So could I expect to succeed in doing what my correspondent asks of me, namely, to "strike a note of harmony between wives and those of us who are so bitterly despised by them?" I do not think it likely.

Between individual wives and the individual women who are coolly undermining their married happiness, such harmony is scarcely conceivable. Nor between wives as a class and home-breakers as a class is cordial understanding any more probable.

By correspondent signs herself "A Woman". I am tempted to advise her to ally herself in a more fundamental way with the great sisterhood to which she belongs. Why not keep her hands off other women's husbands, and wait for an honest love to come to her, a love that she won't have to justify with sophistries?

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Nephritis Causes Child to Lose Materials Vital to Well-Being

Improper functioning of the kidneys will rob the blood of many chemicals it should retain; on the other hand, many poisonous materials which should be removed from the system are allowed to remain in the blood stream.

Often a person will have nephritis for some time before it is discovered. Discovery is usually due to the fact that the urine is peculiar in appearance. Most commonly blood cells are passed in the urine, and the dark red color sends the patient hurrying to his doctor. When the physician examines a specimen of the urine, he discovers that a great number of red cells are being excreted. He will also find a lot of protein which is just as necessary to health as the blood cells. When this condition is discovered in a child, he should be given immediate treatment.

Sometimes the parents of young children may not notice that the urine is queer in appearance. Thus occasionally, a case of nephritis will go on for some time, with the child collecting more and more poisonous waste in its blood, and with more and more valuable body-building material being voided with the urine.

Such a child will become pale and weak, for his blood, robbed of its strength, ill become anaemic. Finally, as the poison collects in the system, he will become drowsy and will go into convulsions and unconsciousness. Such cases are the most dangerous ones; the child must receive prompt medical attention or he may never become conscious again.

There is another way that nephritis can be discovered if the stain in the urine is not detected. This is when the blood has lost so many proteins that it begins to lose fluid into the tissues of some part of the body and the patient develops a swelling somewhere in his anatomy. As a general rule, this swelling occurs, about the face; but if there is swelling in any part of the body, a specimen of the urine ought to be examined at once.

Parents should keep in mind that nephritis never appears spontaneously. It always follows some infection, either acute or chronic. Very often the child has a very severe head cold. He recovers from this after a long fight but he does not seem to be able to recover his lost strength—he is pale, anaemic and given to drowsiness. It isn't any wonder that he is weak, for the material that should be going to build up his body is being lost through his kidneys.

Weddings

LE SAGE—McALLISTER

On Monday, August seventh, the Church of the Sacred Heart, Wolfe Island, with its altar and sanctuary beautifully decorated, made a most attractive setting for a mid-summer wedding when Father Clayton Le Sage, brother of the groom, solemnized the nuptial mass for the marriage of Miss Elaine, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. McAllister and Joseph, youngest son of the late Peter Le Sage, Tweed and Mrs. Le Sage, now of Rochester, N.Y. Present in the sanctuary were Very Rev D. A. Culinane, Tweed and Rev. Father Feeney, Wolfe Island. Junior McCarney and Francis O'Reilly served the mass.

To the strains of the bridal chorus from Lohengrin played by Miss Sadie Baker, organist, the petite, dark haired bride was given away by her father and was a picture of girlish loveliness in a floor length gown of silk net in a soft pastel shade of pink over shimmering taffeta. The bolero was effectively trimmed with French embroidery. Her large picture hat trimmed in matching colors and a bouquet of pink Columbia roses and lily-of-the-valley in a handsome shower effect completed a dainty costume. Miss Rose McAllister in turquoise, blue sheer with short jacket preceded her sister up the aisle. Her hat was white mohair with touches of blue and she carried an arm bouquet of cameo gladioli.

During the ceremony Mrs. Alex Sexsmith sang "O Salutaris" and "Ave Maria" was rendered by Marie Baker. Mr. Leonard Le Sage, Rochester, was the groom's attendant. At the wedding breakfast at the bride's home toasts were proposed by all three clergymen and ably responded to by the groom. The house was pleasingly decorated in pink and white with tall pink gladioli much in evidence.

The bride is a graduate of Notre Dame Convent, Peterborough Normal School and Kemptville Agricultural School and will reside in Tweed, where she taught most successfully for the past six years. Before leaving her school she was presented with a case of stainless steel cutlery.

Going away the bride wore a smart dress of Suez triple sheer with hat and navy accessories and a polo beige coat. They will motor through Quebec visiting St. Anne de Beaupre returning by several American cities. The groom is associated with the Le Sage Motor Sales and best wishes of a host of friends go with them to their new home.

Playground Notes

Tuesday afternoon the East End journeyed to the West End and were met with defeat by the score of 19-17. The West End were leading in the last inning by the score of 19 to 7. Then the East End went on a batting spree led by Don 'Red' Moore and came almost winning the game.

Players: West—Strachan, Watkins, York, Rawson, Strachan, Raymer, Smith, Lovering, Sword. East—Cronin, McNally, Burky, Locke, Curtis, George, Moore, Cooper, Young.

The East End and West End for the next following week will be seriously training for their track and field meet August 17th.

Wednesday afternoon the East End playing host to the West End won their game by good fielding and batting led by Don 'Red' Moore. Sword of West End pitched a very steady game but didn't seem able to get any co-operation from his team. Score, West 7; East, 15.

West End—Lovering, Smith, Sword, Martin, Watkins, Rosetti, York, Mills.

East—Moore, Burley, Cooper, Anderson, Cronin, McNally, Locke, Curtis, Diamond.

KISS YOUR TIRED FEELING GOODBYE!

Pepless Many Suffer Low Blood Count—And Don't Know It.

The baffling thing about low blood count is that you can weigh about as much as you ever did — even look healthy and strong, yet — you can feel as if you had lead in your legs, dopey, tired and pepless.

Low blood count means you haven't got enough red blood corpuscles. It is their vital job to carry life-giving oxygen from your lungs throughout your body. And just as it takes oxygen to explode gasoline in your car and make the power to turn the wheels, so you must have plenty of oxygen to explode the energy in your body and give you going power.

Get Dr. Williams Pink Pills today. They are world-famous for the help they give in increasing the number and strength of red corpuscles. Then with your blood count up, you'll feel like bounding up the stairs as if you were floating on air. Ask your druggist for Dr. Williams Pink Pills today.

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

SEVENTEEN WAYS TO PLEASE YOUR HOSTESS

The perfect guest is always a delight to the heart of the perfect host or hostess. It is not enough, most times, to show casually by your actions that you appreciate the invitation. By following the rules given today you will show yourself to be courteous, considerate and appreciative:

1—Answer your hostess' invitation at once. Don't leave her in doubt as to whether or not you are coming. She may wish to make other plans.

2—Arrive when you are expected to arrive.

3—Be as well-groomed as you possibly can be when you arrive. When you (or a maid) open your travelling-bags, be proud of the condition of your clothes and travelling accessories. Your clothes should be freshly-laundered or dry-cleaned . . they may need pressing, but that's all they should need.

4—Bring sufficient clothes. Try not to bring too many. And try especially hard to bring the right clothes. Bring the necessary clothes-accessories too. . . .don't for instance, forget the belts for your various dresses. And bring your own toilet articles.

5—Bring all necessary equipment for any sport in which you plan to indulge. The "borrowing" guest is a pest.

6—Be on time for meals and for engagements with your hostess or fellow-guests.

7—Be amiable! Be eagerly ready to fall in with your hostess' plans, even if you don't particularly enjoy some of the plans that she has made. If your hostess asks you what you'd like to do, help her out by making some suggestions. If she offers a choice tennis, some bridge, or rest, she'll be grateful if you will be direct about your preference.

8—Be responsive. The success of a visit depends almost as much on the guest as on the hostess. It's a guest's responsibility to do his or her best to be entertaining, to make things easy for the hostess, to be pleasant to other guests.

9—Be alert to find out the customary schedule of the family, their convenience about serving breakfast (whether they prefer to send a tray to the guest's room, or have breakfast served in the dining-room), the hours for meals, the usual hour for going to bed. Don't hesitate to suggest when you wish to go to bed . . . they will probably be waiting for you to do this, especially on the first evening of your arrival.

10—Don't expect to be "entertained" every minute of your visit. Naturally your hostess will want some time to herself, and the thoughtful guest "disappears" to rest, to write letters, to read.

11—Don't have "food notions".

12—Be neat and tidy. Keep your bedroom in order. Keep your bathroom or your part of the family bathroom in perfect order too. Don't leave your lingerie thrown around your room. Don't throw the towels in a heap on the bath-room floor.

13.—Respect your hostess' property. Don't use the family car without permission; and even with permission, don't use it thoughtlessly or carelessly. Don't leave your cigarettes about carelessly, to burn spots on the tables or chair-arms, holes in the linen, and don't leave them smouldering in the ash-trays. Don't place a damp glass on the furniture, leaving a ring. Don't wipe cold cream on the towels—tissues were made for this. Don't dust or clean your shoes with a towel—bring a shoe flannel with you.

Don't monopolize the telephone, either with outgoing or incoming calls. And if you make a long-distance call, insist on paying the charges.

14—Be well-groomed, immaculate. And, no matter how simply dressed, be well and appropriately dressed. We all can be these days, with the charming, simple inexpensive dresses which are offered in the shops, or which we can easily make ourselves. Don't loll around in negligees or pajamas . . . you may think you look "cute", but your hostess may not feel honored, or proud of you.

15—Leave when you are supposed to leave. Even if your hostess urges you to extend your visit, you'll probably be wise not to.

16.—Take all your belongings with you when you leave. It's a bore and a chore to a hostess to have to take the trouble to send to careless guests the belongings they have left behind.

17—Write an appreciative and delightful bread-and-butter letter, and write it promptly.

Courtesy Tip

When you take a telephone message for another person, whether at home or in an office, write the message.

Very chic for an afternoon wedding or for dining out informally is a street length frock of blue cobwebby lace, the heart-shaped neckline caught with clips. The girdle of blue and pink satin ribbon finishes in a huge chou.

Rise and shine in a dress of paillettes. A new model is in mauve and gunmetal stripes, the gunmetal sequins worked in spiral stripes.

A balance to the back fullness of many frocks is found in the forward-tilted hat. A pretty model of black satin is worn very much tilted and is trimmed with fringed satin streamers that cascade over the hair in back.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Wuthering Heights"

The McCarthy Theatre, is now presenting on their screen the powerful story of "Wuthering Heights" based on the world-famous novel by Emily Bronte, and for screen entertainment that has already been chosen as one of the ten best motion picture productions of 1939, you will when you see "Wuthering Heights" see one of the truly glorious pictures not only of 1939, but of all time.

Samuel Goldwyn, Hollywood's ace producer deserves a world of credit in bringing this great novel to the screen, but words cannot express the excellent manner in which the cast portray the exact characters of the fine story. Merle Oberon, as Cathy, should win the Academy Award this year, for the best acting of the year, Laurence Olivier, as Heathcliff, gives the best performance of his career and David Niven, as Edgar, is also worthy of the highest mention. Others including Flora Robson, Donald Crisp, Geraldine Fitzgerald and Leo G. Carroll also contribute fine performances to make "Wuthering Heights" the magnificent classic which it is. You are well advised when we say do not miss "Wuthering Heights".

"Mr. Moto's Last Warning"

"West of Cheyenne"

Next at the McCarthy, comes Peter Lorre, as Mr. Moto, in "Mr. Moto's Last Warning," with an outstanding musical-western, second feature, Charles Starrett in "West of Cheyenne", a two feature show that will certainly find much favor with the week-end patrons, attending the McCarthy Theatre.

AT THE BELLE

"Young Mr. Lincoln"

In preparation for more than a year, Darryl F. Zanuck's production of "Young Mr. Lincoln" is a story that has never been told before.

With simplicity, wit and power, the story carries young Abe through approximately seven years of his youth, the years of his courtship of his first sweetheart, Ann Rutledge; his choice of law as a career (decided by a toss!) his meeting with Mary Todd; his thrilling "moonlight murder" case.

The dramatic highlight of this Cosmopolitan production for 20th Century-Fox is this famous murder trial—two boys charged with murder and between them and the gallows the attorney for the defence, young Abe Lincoln! When you see him fight for their lives you'll know why his strength was legend and his wit was famous!

The original story and screen play of the film, which is on the Belle screen now showing was written by Lamar Trotti. Henry Fonda plays the important title role, with Alice Brady, Marjorie Weaver and Arleen Whelan co-featured.

Lincoln's yarns and witticisms are woven into the story which faithfully and excitingly recreates Abe's romantic, thrilling and eventful youth.

When Kenneth MacGowan, associate producer, was assigned the supervision of the story by Production Chief Zanuck, every available historical document was obtained and studied before the story was placed in actual production. The National Museum in Washington supplied the studio with rare photographs and life masks of Lincoln as a young man — the beardless Lincoln so few people know.

The importance of the production is emphasized by Zanuck's choice of director—John Ford, the Academy Award winner. The stellar cast also is a clue to the film's excellence: included are Eddie Collins, Pauline Moore, Richard Cromwell, Donald Meek, Dorris Bowdon and Eddie Quillan.

"Mr. Moto Takes a Vacation"

Getting mixed up with murderers and international jewel thieves probably wouldn't exactly be your idea of the perfect vacation.

But that's what Mr. Moto spends his time doing in "Mr. Moto takes a Vacation," the newest of the 20th Century-Fox thrillers, starring Peter Lorre as the famous Saturday Evening Post detective, which is the companion feature attraction.

The film takes Mr. Moto to the Arabian desert and he meets his most exciting adventures to date while providing a safe escort for the Queen of Sheba's priceless crown jewels.

Joseph Schildkraut, Lionel Atwill, Virginia Field, John King and Iva Stewart head the supporting cast, under the direction of Norman Foster.

A film of interest to golfers is "Shooting for Par" to be presented on the same program.

Shannonville

SHANNONVILLE—A large number of district residents were represented at Massassaga on Monday where they witnessed the thrilling boat races. Quite a few of the local citizens covered the route by motor-boat and report a very enjoyable trip.

Miss Violet Vens of Strathcona is vacationing in the village the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Ira Cook.

The Shannonville Canners have begun to draw cans in preparation for the canning season. It has been the custom of the management to have the cans drawn by train and then placed in boxes at the C.N.R. station. However this year they are having the cans trucked to Shannonville and unloaded, thereby saving much time. Local farmers are predicting a bumper crop of tomatoes this year and local citizens who depend upon the factory for fall work fervently hope so because it will do much to help them over the long winter months.

Mr. C. S. Spencer and Mr. G. Little attended the races Monday at Massassaga.

Carman G. Spencer, popular first baseman for Shannonville Hawks, has been chosen to play first base for "The Flyers", Trenton R.C.A.F.

Mr. L. E. Mills took as his guests to Massassaga by motor boat, Ruth Spencer, Catherine Mills, Ted Mills, Lloyd Mills, Corneal Barnhardt, Earl Murphy and Roy Sager. All enjoyed the trip and the races.

Political discourse and war talk and other usually predominant discussions have been relegated to the background now that the baseball finals of the South Hastings League have been reached and the starry Shannonville Hawks are battling tooth and nail with the Cannifton Athletics for the coveted cup donated by that great sportsman, the late James S. Hill. At present the series is all even and interest is increasing by the minute. However local residents are willing to back their team which is a good sign and should they win plan to stage a grand celebration. Following the league playoffs a benefit game will be played between the league winners and an all-star team picked from the rest of the league and the proceeds will go to Gerald Sager, Shannonville's popular first sacker who suffered a broken leg in the first game of the semi-finals between Shannonville and Latta. Local residents are hoping for the rapid recovery of the popular athlete.

Mrs. Vernon Joyce of Deseronto is spending a few days the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Sager.

4th Sidney

FOURTH SIDNEY—A large number of relatives and friends gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. Woods on Saturday night, July 29, to spend an evening with their daughter Reta prior to her marriage to Mr. James A. Pitts of Madoc. After a very enjoyable time was spent the pastor, Rev. Scott, called the crowd together and Mrs. H. Jeffery read the following address:

Dear Reta: It is with a feeling of sadness mingled with a great desire for your future happiness that brings your friends here tonight. We must admit, however, that although our one great wish is for a very happy life ahead, we are going to miss you.

It is not easy to lose one of our girls and you are one of our girls in every sense of the word.

We have watched you grow from a tiny tot to a charming and dignified young lady. We have always appreciated your willingness to assist in the Sunday school and church work, and we hope you may be able to continue this work in your new home.

Your future husband no doubt appreciates his good fortune in winning you for his wife and we hope it will be his aim to do everything in his power to make your life together a happy and successful one. You will do your part, we are certain.

Life is a blend of the good and the ill,
And we must bear what shall come by His will;
There must come tears from the brightest eyes,
Care visits the rich and the strong and the wise.
No one escapes when the rain patters down,
Today you may smile, tomorrow you may frown,
So stand to your portion of sorrow and strife
And know that it's all in the battle of life.

We could not allow you to leave us, Reta, without a few remembrances and we ask you to accept these gifts from your friends of this community, and your Sunday School, not for their value but for the kind thoughts which accompany them.

Signed on behalf of the community: Mrs. C. Vermilyea, Mr. W. Holmes, Mrs. W. Holmes, Lena Detlor, Lenore Vermilyea, Rev. L. W. Scott.

The young couple replied in a few well chosen works thanking all for the many lovely gifts and kind remembrances and invited every one to visit them in their home.

A very appetizing lunch was served by the ladies after which all wended their way home wishing Jim and Reta a very happy wedded life.

JOHNSTOWN — On Wednesday afternoon, Aug. 2, Mrs. Earl Brooks entertained at her home, a number of children and their mothers in honor of Miss Helen Justus who for the past three years has been school teacher at Johnstown but who is leaving to accept a new position. Miss Betty Stickle read the address and Miss Jean Brooks made the presentation of a lovely Japonica set in pearl cameo necklace, after which Miss Justus made a very pleasing reply. A very tasty lunch was served by the hostess and Mrs. Fred Meyers.

The address was as follows:

Miss Justus: We are gathered here today to just show our good will and to express our sorrow to hear you are leaving us. We have, no doubt, caused many annoyances, but we hope you will always cherish a little place for the pupils of your last school. There is no need to say you have made many friends and you will always remain in our thoughts as

A kind and thoughtful teacher you have been to us,
A friend ever loyal and fine,
May every good wish with this little remembrance bring.

Reds and Yanks Play Trump Cards From Big League Deck, Just Lie Back and Wait Chances

Reds Humble Cubs Twice in Chicago, While Yanks Beat Washington 13-8

LEWIS BEANED

Cardinals Register 10th Consecutive League Victory, Beat Pirates 5-3

(By Judson Bailey Associated Press Sports Writer).

Everybody likes a good joke and it appears Cincinnati Reds and New York Yankees are the jokers in baseball's big league deck. Knowing they can control any trick, this pair just lies back and waits for timely spots to trump.

The proper moment came yesterday and the Reds romped over Chicago Cubs in a National League doubleheader 7-5 and 11-3 while the Yanks exploded Washington Senators' eight-game American League winning streak with a 13-8 firecracker.

The Reds staged four-run assault in the seventh inning of the first game and crowded nine runs into the fifth frame of the nightcap. Buck McCormick singled with the bases loaded in the big first stanza and Wally Berger, who homered in each game, got his second with two on to climax the other spree.

Cards Winning

Undaunted, the second place St. Louis Cardinals stretched their string of consecutive victories to 10 with a 5-3 triumph over Pittsburgh Pirates. Arky Vaughan hit a homer with one on to put the Buccaneers in front but Johnny Mize, Joe Medwick and Don Gutteridge beat him with his own weapons.

In yesterday's only other National League activity, New York Giants swatted Boston Bees in both halves of a double-header 5-4 and 6-5. They had to overcome a four-run lead in the opener, Johnny McCarthy's pinch homer showing the way, and another homer by Tom Hafey with one on tied the score in the nightcap, forcing the game to 11 innings. It was finally decided on a wild pitch by Fred Frankhouse with the bases loaded.

DiMaggio Homers

The Yankees made sport of their old rivals, the Senators, scoring 11 of their 13 runs in the first three innings as Joe DiMaggio and Frank Crosetti homered with men on base to end New York's reputed hitting slump.

Buddy Lewis, Washington third baseman, was hit on the head with a ball thrown to first by pitcher Red Ruffing and was taken to a hospital. However, he was not believed seriously hurt.

Johnny Marcum, Chicago White Sox relief pitcher, also was painfully injured when a liner batted by Hank Greenberg struck him in the face. Four stitches were taken over his right eye. The game was won by the Detroit Tigers 10-3 behind the effective seven-hit hurling of Schoolboy Rowe

Led by Jimmy Foxx the Boston Red Sox came from behind twice to sweep a bargain bill from Philadelphia Athletics 5-3 and 6-6. In the first Foxx hit a triple and a home run, the latter bringing Boston to the front in the eighth. Ted Williams singles with the bases loaded in the ninth inning to win the second.

Like so many players after being traded, Julius Solters arose to haunt Cleveland Indians yesterday with three hits which drove in three runs but the Tribe stopped St. Louis Browns 6-5 anyway. Ben Chapman doubled two runs home in the ninth for the victory.

'Few Old Soldiers May Find Way To Regain Peace'

Cutnife, Sask., Aug. 10—(CP)—The Canadian Legion should appoint a commission of seven members to visit Europe to investigate causes of the present international crisis, Major H. G. L. Strange, Winnipeg, suggested yesterday in addressing a legion meeting here.

"I firmly believe with all my heart that a few old soldiers sitting across a table in friendship with their old adversaries might well discover a way to regain that peace and friendship which apparently cannot be achieved by politicians and diplomats" Major Strange declared.

The committee he proposed would conduct an investigation in Great Britain, France, Germany, Italy and in such other countries as it considered necessary. In due course, the committee's findings should be made public, he explained.

How To Overcome Piles And Rectal Soreness

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. Any itching soreness or painful passage of stool, is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get from J. S. McKeown or any druggist, a package of Hemroid and use as directed This formula, which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender spots. Hemroid is a physician's prescription and is highly recommended. It is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for anyone to risk an operation when a simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost.

Queens To Lose Six Rugby Stars

Kingston, Aug. 10—It was stated by the Queen's University authorities Wednesday that six members of last year's senior rugby football team would not be back to college this fall. Art Stollery, George Sprague and Archie Kerr have graduated; Joe Turner, the fast-running fullback; Ralph Jack and Ted Bishop will not likely register this fall. Ted Edwards, who coached the junior intercollegiate team, will also be an absentee.

Sports Roundup

(By Eddie Briets Associated Press Sports Writer).

New York, Aug. 10 (AP)—Joe Banovic, the fat heavyweight, who impersonated Tony Galento in Joe Louis' camp, will ditto for Lou Nova ....Mebbe he doesn't know it, but John Doeg, the tennis star, is going to get an offer to turn pro.... The doctors are letting Patty Berg do a little putting for exercise, but have ruled out tournament golf for the balance of the season, following that appendicitis operation.

One gets the idea the Minneapolis Millers are setting a bad example for pennant contenders......An eastern paper, commenting on the fact that the Millers have all their players except Jimmy Wasdell sewed up, said: "Only Wasdell not stewed up."

Tulane is offering season football ticket books for $7 which is less than a buck a game to see Clemson, Auburn, Alabama, North Carolina, Fordham and Louisiana State.

Georgie Pace is waving $5,000 under Sixto Escobar's nose and daring him to defend his bantamweight title in Cleveland.

No suh, all is not quiet on the western front....Some of those Texas all-star footballers coach Dutch Meyer is taking to San Francisco to play at the fair were chosen for the Chicago Tribune's all-star team vs. the N.Y. Giants .... If the boys go to the coast they won't be back in time to drill with the all-stars beginning Aug. 12.... So the pressure is on from both sides.

Says Casey Stengel: "The Cardinals very likely are the strongest outfit in the National League .... Walters and Derringer are carrying the Reds....Their pennant now depends on their second line pitching ......If Thompson, Vander Meer, Moore and Davis fail to come through with some help, the Cards will sneak in."

WEST TO TEST ONTARIO'S BEST WOMEN ATHLETES

Canadian Women's Track and Field Championships Will be Held Saturday

Hamilton, Ont., Aug. 10 (CP)—Ontario's long-standing superiority in women's track events will undergo a severe test here Saturday when a galaxy of Dominion talent moves in for the Canadian Women's Track and Field Championships.

More than 200 entries have been received, according to officials, and nearly every event will have competitors who are record holders in their respective provinces.

Western Canada is sending a strong continent, including Bernice Martin, brilliant St. Vital, Man., sprinter. Holder of the 100 metres mark in her province, she will be defending her Dominion title in the 200 metres. Only 18, she is the youngest competitor ever to hold the Canadian crown.

One of her keenest rivals will be Babe Demcoe, St. Quens, Man., also a contestant in the 100 and 200 metre events.

Versatile Geraldine Wilson, of Saskatoon who held the junior individual track cup in her province in 1937 and returned in 1938 to take the senior trophy, also competes in these competitions.

She won the senior cup for establishing new Saskatchewan records in both the 60 and 100-yard track events and for placing second in the discus throw.

British Columbia's entrant in the 60 and 100 metres is Marion Borden, Powell River, who has beaten Barbara Howard, British Columbian star and only Canadian girl to reach the 100 yards finals in the 1938 British Empire games.

The Ontario entry list holds such performers as Devona Root of Palmerston, victor in the 200 metres event in the provincial championships; Mary Hayden, Ottawa, whose specialty is the high jump; Helen Carefoot, Markdale, outstanding in Grey County field events and Katharine Miller, hurdling star from Hamilton.

In addition a strong Toronto contingent will be on hand including Jeanette Dolson, Helen Morrison, Nancy Murrall, Isabel McKean, Dot Smerdon, Jessie Smerdon, Marjorie Cordiner and Thelma Mantle.

WOOLER REACHES TO FINAL IN TRENTON LEAGUE

'Farmers' Eliminate Graham's Garage by 17-8 Score

Trenton, Aug. 10, (Special)—Many years ago the poet wrote that truth crushed to earth would rise again; and the dozens of Wooler softball fans rose again in their joy down at Bayshore Park last evening and cheered lustily as their favourites bested the strong Graham's Garage nine by a decisive 17-8 score in the fifth and deciding game of the local semi-finals. By virtue of their win the Woolerites will now meet Yourex Billiards in the final games to decide the town championship and the ultimate winner of the Cobley trophy, while Graham's will (according to report) enter the intermediate A playdowns against Belleville and other city winners.

Right from the start the "farmers" began to show their superiority with the bat, and with "Buck" Stacey pitching steady and at times brilliant ball the villagers went on to score in every inning but one. It was a case of too many hitters as far as Leo Coughlin on the Garagemen's mound was concerned, and the lads from Wooler were certainly laying on the hickory. In the second frame, for example, five consecutive doubles over second base accounted for five tallies and from there on the Woolerites led at all stages.

In addition to playing off with Yourex's for the local championship, the Wooler nine will compete in the intermediate class C playdowns, and if they play ball against out-of-town teams as they did against local groups this season they should make a real showing.

Score by innings:

Graham's	022 102 001—	8
Wooler	151 240 13x—	17

Umpires: Carswell, plate; Steenburgh, bases.

BRANTFORD PUCKSTERS SOUGHT BY CORNWALL

Brantford, Ont., Aug. 10 (CP)—Ebby Edmison, Brantford hockey and baseball star, said last night he had been urged by George Redding, new coach of Cornwall's senior hockey club, to move to Cornwall for the coming season.

Edmison, a forward, was prominent in Brantford's Ontario Hockey Association senior campaign last winter. As second baseman for the city's senior baseball team, he is leading the Intercounty league in batting with an average of .480.

Other Brantford athletes plan on moving out for the hockey season. George Higgins, who played last season with London in the Michigan-Ontario League, will go to Trenton. Doug Greig, forward with Baltimore in the Eastern United States League in 1938-39, will play with Paisley, Scotland, and Tommy Forgie and Alex Ramsay will go to Dumfermline, Scotland.

Peter Astra Wins Famed Hambletonian Stake by Outstripping Field Twice

'Little Pete' Showed Some Tall and Fancy Trotting to Win Stakes

TIME IS FAST

(By Gayle Talbot Associated Press Sports Writer).

Goshen, N.Y., Aug. 10 (CP)—They were swabbing down nimble little Peter Astra and giving him an occasional lip-full of water after he outstripped his field twice in succession in the $40,000 Hambletonian Stake, when the blackest of his handlers expressed his opinion.

"Shucks, Pete didn't have to do nuthin'," he chuckled. "If any of those other horses had took out after him he would have showed you some trottin'."

There was nobody to give him any argument about that. "Pete," the little bay that cost Dr. Lowry Miller Guilinger of Ohio only $3,250 in the sales ring two years ago, trotted off with the top prize of $21,341 yesterday without working up a real sweat, finishing three and five lengths ahead of his closest pursuer in the two heats required to settle the classic of the harness world.

His driver, Dr. Hugh Parshall, didn't need to do more than cluck at his flying steed a couple of times during the afternoon, and both times when they went high-stepping into the finish line he was turned half-around in his sulky seat and amusedly watched the others try to catch him.

Gauntlet a bay owned by C. W. Pehlils of Greenwich, Conn., and driven by Vic Fleming, formerly of Dundas, Ont., chased the champion across both times to take second money of $4,656, while Sir Walter, owned by J. J. McIntyre of Cleveland won third prize of $2,328 by finishing fifth in the first heat, and third in the second. This made the fifth consecutive Hambletonian to be won in straight heats, and there were few thrills for the crowd of 40,000 that packed this pretty village.

Peter Astra's time was only fairly fast—2.04 1-4 for the first mile heat and 2.04 1-4 for the second—but as Parshall said, he "had him sitting in his lap" all the way.

"Over the Waves" Sings Greenberg

Detroit, Aug. 10—A pure case of "nerves" has Hank Greenberg singing the blues, but leave it to the studious Detroit Tiger first baseman to get after the problem.

Greenberg plans an ocean trip—to start when this baseball season ends—to get him fit for 1940.

The secret of Hank's trouble came out today. It sounds queer for a .306 hitter, with 20 home runs, to complain, but Hank is dissatisfied with himself.

"I got myself into a jam," he confided. "When I got into a slump I began to fret and lose sleep, and this sapped my strength.

"This is the time of year I usually hit at my best, because I always got stronger as most of the other hitters got weaker due to the heat and the strain.

"But this year I'm just like the rest of them. I'm not at the peak of my strength and, naturally, I haven't the power I usually have."

Greenberg is far behind his homer pace of last year when he finished with 58, two short of Babe Ruth's record.

RED WINGS MOVE UP IN INT. RACE WITH DUAL WIN

Rochester Just Two Games Behind League Leading Giants Now

LEAFS LOSE

Jersey City Giants, at the top of the International League heap, invade Rochester tonight to start a five-game series determined to break the Red Wing jinx which has hounded them throughout the season.

Of the 16 games the two teams have played Rochester has won 11. With only two games separating the clubs in the standings, the meeting could not be more opportune.

The Red Wings moved closer to the league leading Giants last night by sweeping a twin-bill with Baltimore by virtue of some timely hitting and expert pitching. Marty Marion supplied the power with a homer in the eighth to give the Wings the opener, 8-7, and Ken Raffensberger exhibited some fancy elbowing to beat the Flock 3-2 in the nightcap.

Mike Ryba chalked up his fifteenth conquest of the season by holding the Orioles scoreless in the top half of the eighth after allowing the tying run home in the seventh when he relieved Johnny Grodzicki on the mound.

Rochester took advantage of errors and Italo Chelini's wildness for all its runs in the second game. Chelini yielded only five hits and Don Kerr, who relieved him, gave but one, while Raffensberger was nicked for eight.

Syracuse Chiefs stayed up with Rochester by beating Toronto Leafs, 6-1, and gained on fourth place Buffalo. The Bisons went down before Newark Bears, 13-4.

The Chiefs pounded Earl Caldwell for 17 hits to gain their sixteenth victory of the year over the Leafs, against five defeats. Howard Meyers, Syracuse third baseman, had a field day at the plate, getting four for four, while Jake Mooty set the Leafs down with four safeties for his fourth straight win.

Yesterday's Stars

(By The Associated Press)

Schoolboy Rowe, Tigers: His seven hit pitching brought Detroit 10-3 victory over White Sox.

Frank McCormick and Wally Berger, Reds: Former drove in three runs in first game of doubleheader with Cubs; latter hit homer in both games.

Johnny McCarthy and Carl Hubbell, Giants: Former's pinch homer started three-run inning which beat Bees in first game of doubleheader while latter's effective relief pitching won 11-inning second game.

Jimmy Foxx and Ted Williams, Red Sox: Former's 30th home run put Boston in front for triumph over Athletics in first game of doubleheader; latter singled with bases loaded and score tied in ninth inning to win second game.

Joe DiMaggio, Yankees: Homered with two on and drove in total of four runs in walloping Washington 13-8.

HE-MEN GUIDES IMPORT A ZOO FOR BACKWOODS RODEO

Lake William, N.S., Aug. 10 (CP)—The great outdoors—where a man smokes his pipe and forgets about his beard, is symbolized in the annual Nova Scotia Guides' meet which opens here today.

The meet lasts a week—seven days of gruelling competition in which husky Willard Jack of Bear River, N.S., will endeavor to retain his coveted title of the province's champion guide.

A miniature tent city has grown up here and officials predict a new attendance high for the quarter-century-old backwoods rodeo. Almost 200 contestants are entered for the various events—which include canoe racing, contests in log sawing, log chopping, log burling, shooting, fly casting, Moose calling and tub races.

A wild animal Zoo with Moose, Deer, Beaver and Bear has been imported as an added attraction.

But the outdoors is the big attraction—the outdoors and the men who live by it. Two former meet champions, Eber Peck of Bear River and Alan Hunt of Greenfield, N.S., are included in the list of guides aiming to unseat champion Jack.

SHELL DEFEAT CORBYS IN THE FINAL GAME 9-7

'Oilers' Come From Behind to Snatch Victory in 5th Game

WIN HARD WAY

Bawden Hurls 8-Hit Ball After Cole Cleans the Bases

The Shell-Aajmaa "Oilers" will represent Belleville in the O.A.S.A. intermediate "A" provincial playdowns and earned that right by eliminating Corbys A.C. in a five game series, that concluded with the fifth and deciding game at Coleman Flats last evening and resulted in a 9 to 6 win for the new champions. Each club had won two previous play-offs with the result the winner of last night scooped up the plum and the series honours.

Coming from behind the "Oilers" won the hard way as Corbys forged to the fore with a four run lead in the initial frame the result of Art Cole's home run with the bases loaded. Johnnie Bawden settled away from that point and hurled eight hit ball for the winners, Cole's circuit blow and Reid's subsequent double being the only extra base hits given up by Bawden, who was most effective in the clutches. Connie Harris ascended the hilltop for the defeated Corbys and deserved a better fate than defeat, as errors in the clutches, especially in the sixth and seventh when the "Oilers" knotted the count and later scored what proved the winning runs. Harris was nicked for 13 hits, four being of the extra base nature.

Tied Score

Trailing badly in the sixth with the score 6-2 against them, Frank Sedore's "Oilers" gathered in two successive walks, with two out, when Reid threw wild to second trying for an impossible double. Inspired with one run Rowbotham, Dickey and Amo all hit solidly in succession and the "Oilers" scored four runs to knot the count at six-all. In the next inning Sero and Whalen singled, with one out and Ronsky came through with a triple and scored on an error to give the "Oilers" three runs and victory, as Corbys' ninth inning rally was nipped when Bawden struck out Murray with two on.

Johnnie Ronsky with a triple and a double, Amo and Moon with a double and single and Bawden with two timely singles to help his own cause led the winners at bat. Art Cole, who was purposely passed in the clutch-ninth, hit for the circuit, but no Corby batsman managed to get over one safety off Bawden's deliveries.

Bawden struck out eight and walked six, while Harris only whiffed two, but his control was better as he walked but three. The Corby errors proved highly costly when the chips were down, but the series on the whole was productive of keen competition and nerve-wracking softball. These two clubs may meet again in the City Softball championships for the Canadian Bank of Commerce trophy.

Winning the hard way, that is to say coming from behind when the clouds of defeat seemed the darkest, the Shell "Oilers" finally vanquished their hardest rivals, Chuck Barnett's Corbys A.C. in a fifth and final game last night 9 to 7. Corbys went out and gathered in four big runs in the first inning, the result of two walks, a single and Art Cole's home run clearing the bases. Johnnie Bawden, hurling for the Oilers, proved a cool, calm and collected workman and returned to the hilltop for the remainder of the pastime to limit Corbys to six subsequent hits, making eight in all. However, when the "Oilers" rallied in the sixth to score a quartette of runs and errors and walks entered into the picture, the Corbys nine and Connie Harris, hurling for them did not prove as able as had Bawden and company previous, because the very next inning, the seventh, the Oilers again unleashed a barrage of hits and the Corbys played unsteady ball under the pressure and the score book shows therein lies the difference between victory and defeat.

To say one club was vastly superior to the other would be utter folly, their season's play, and more especially their most recent five-game play-off series, proves these two clubs are evenly matched, but it would appear as though the "Oilers" have a slight edge. The reason for this is the fact they won the sudden-death play-off game for first place in the regular league and last night duplicated this feat. However, the fans can sit back and await another meeting this season between these two strong clubs, as we feel assured they will again cross bats in the city final play-offs for the Canadian Bank of Commerce trophy. This series will open with two games on Friday night, Corbys at Point Anne and the "Oilers" meeting Dracups at the Flats. The winners of these two semi-final series will meet in the City League finals, a series that should prove equally as popular as the one just concluded. The Shell "Oilers" earned the right to represent Belleville in the O.A.S.A. playdowns last night and will meet a Trenton entry after the City finals.

Just what stand Hitlerized Germany will assume towards the 1940 Olympics will be interesting to follow. Japan relinquished the sponsorship of the 1940 Olympics, apparently in favour of a more loathesome occupation the killing of innocent humans. However, Italy is training her athletes tenaciously for competition in Finland next year and will send over 300 trained athletes, the Italians announced recently. Already the U.S.A. is seeking 1940 Olympic timber, while in Canada there seems to be some difference of opinion regarding competition. If we hope to gain recognition for our bid for the 1944 winter Olympics, Canada will have to be to the fore during the 1940 winter games at least.

Stanley Hack, Chicago Cub third sacker, was an aviation enthusiast and even owned his own aeroplane until the late William Veech, then president of the Cubs, ordered him to sell the machine and stay on the ground. Apparently Veech didn't want Hack "up in the air" when he was playing for the Cubs.

Belleville's loss was St. Catharines' gain this week when it became known that Tommy Carruthers, one of Eastern Ontario's better flight golfers had accepted a position in St. Kitts. Carruthers recently competed in the Canadian amateur golf championship and only this week finished second in the low net score, with 141, in the Eastern Ontario golf championships at Kingston. Although still to cast his first vote, Tommy Carruthers possesses the nature and qualities of a top-ranking golfer and we wish him well in his new surroundings, where we expect to hear much of his golf prowess in future years. Down at Kingston on Monday Val Smith, Belleville, shot a 68 in the morning to win the low net for the first round.

In speaking of the Centennial of Baseball recently, the Kingston sports scribe suggested that if a Hall of Fame for hockey ever is established, Kingston would be the logical place to erect such a memorial. Bill Walsh, sports pen-pusher down Kingston way, says Kingston is the original home of hockey and the city where many of the game's greats learned to play. No doubt Montreal would give Kingston quite a verbal battle regarding the actual birthplace of the modern game of hockey. We've heard several stories, but none seem to carry that authentic tone to convince.

Over 40,000 harness racing fans saw Peter Astra win the famous Hambletonian Stakes yesterday at Goshen, N.Y., and the $40,502.46 that went to the winner as the stake money. Vic Fleming's Gauntlet was second. However, in another class Fleming's crack pacer, Billy Direct won in straight heats. Billy Direct was the pacer to set a new track record at Stratford recently.

Cincinnati proved their championship ability by winning two from the Cubs yesterday and are now leading the second-placed Cards by eight full games. Although the Yankees beat the Senators, they slipped a cog as the Red Sox won twice over the Athletics and today we find the McCarthymen only 6 1-2 games afront of the second placed "Millionaires" from Boston. At Chicago 40,887 fans watched the Cubs lose two to the Reds. The Giants took two from the Bees and moved into the first division for a change.

Off the Record — Don't be surprised if Corbys A.C. get an O.A.S.A. play-off berth after all mebbe senior "B"....It all depends upon how good a salesman O.A.S.A. convener Harry Rollins is....After all the parent O.A.S.A. body can stand a senior "B" entry in Eastern Ontario very well ....Corbys infield errors proved costly last night, while the "Oilers" played their best ball when the pressure was applied....That difference usually wins....They hope to select a football coach for Queen's University on Saturday—we say "they hope to"....Expect to hear considerable hockey chatter in the next few days, some of which will break right here in our own midst, we hear.

VISCOUNT HALIFAX

The Foreign Secretary received a first hand report on the negotiations with Soviet Russia from William Strang, foreign office expert, who arrived here from Moscow on Tuesday. Lord Halifax also received Herbert Von Kirksen, the German Ambassador, at Whitehall last night.

Speculation Over Meeting

No official explanation was forthcoming on this meeting. One report current in political circles said the conference was connected with charges of German propaganda in Great Britain by the organization which calls itself "The Link". Another report said the meeting was linked with the situation in Danzig and that Lord Halifax protested against German press claims that Britain is supporting a movement for return of the Free City to the Reich.

The News Chronicle (Liberal) expressed fear today that Chancellor Hitler might be using Danzig to camouflage plans for a sudden drive on Yugoslavia.

"Reports from the Yugoslav frontier arouse fears that this country will be the centre of the next European crisis," the newspaper said. "It may be that Danzig is being used by Germany as a blind to cover a 'lightning attack' in another direction.

Movement of Troops

"Although Yugoslav official quarters 'have no information' it is reliably reported that the Italians in Albania and the Germans in the region of the Slovene borders are moving and massing troops and materials in a highly suggestive manner.

"Leading political and military circles in Belgrade fear that the axis powers will soon bring pressure to bear on Yugoslavia to assure that her "neutrality" in case of war will be of a highly efficient type which will give Germany great economic and strategic advantage."

DOMINION STATUS FOR INDIA URGED

Premier of Punjab Would See Federation Realized in Twenty Years

Simla, India, Aug. 10—(CP-Reuters)—Dominion status for India within 20 years is the objective of an alternative scheme of Indian federation drawn up by Sir Sikander Hyat Khan, Premier of the Punjab.

The British government's federation scheme is now under consideration by the Indian Princes, a number of whom are suspicious of it.

The Punjab Premier's plan is described as an attempt to solve Indian political and communal problems by meeting as far as possible various criticisms of the federation scheme as embodied in the Government of India Act. It groups the provinces and states into seven zones, each consisting of one or more provinces and contiguous states.

Each zone would have a regional legislature consisting of representatives of its provinces and states.

Representatives of all the regional legislatures would collectively constitute a unicameral federal legislation having the same number of members and the same proportional representation as under the existing act.

ELDERLY MAN KILLED WHILE BUILDING BOMB SHELTER

THIEF REPENTS

Lincoln, Neb., Aug. 10 (AP)—C. C. Bingham's faith in his fellow men is being restored. Shortly after someone took a cash box containing $15 from his filling station he received this note:—"Enclosed please find $11. More will follow. I repent for this deed."

Merle Oberon co-starred with Laurence Olivier and David Niven in the year's finest romantic production "Wuthering Heights", now at the McCarthy Theatre for the last times.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

New York, Aug. 10—(AP)—Stock market leaders were hit for losses of one to three points in today's session without loosening up any real liquidation.

Activities picked up about one-third over Wednesday's slow-going proceedings, but slack intervals were frequent. Modest recoveries were in evidence near the fourth hour.

Prominent on the downward drift were Westinghouse, American Can, Allied Chemical, Du Pont, Chrysler, U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, Sears Roebuck, J. I. Case, General Motors and U.S. Rubber.

Fractionally lower among Canadian issues were Dome, McIntyre Porcupine, Distillers and Lake Shore. Dominion 4s in the bond market moved narrowly.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto Aug. 10 (CP)—Mining and industrial stocks chalked up index losses of a point to 1 1-4 in the early session of the Toronto Stock Exchange today. Western oils were down slightly, on moderate selling inspired by fear that some trouble might develop in Danzig. Most of the action was in the medium-price gold shares and among these recessions were held down to around 5 cents.

A few, including O'Brien, Macassa and Pickle Crow, widened losses to 10 cents. Buffalo-Ankerite was off to a new low for the year at 8.90, showing a drop of 50 cents overnight.

Nickel backed down a point to 48 and Smelters, Noranda, Hudson Bay, Waite-Amulet, Pend Oreille and Sherritt sold at losses.

Trade was light in the industrials with interlisted leaders, including Walker's Common, Ford A, Bell Telephone, B. A. Oil and a few others down small fractions. In the western oil group the market was a bit lower for Okalta, Calgary-Edmonton, Home and Anglo-Canadian.

Drop in Price of High Grade Eggs

Toronto, August 10—Price losses were recorded by top-grade eggs in every section yesterday on the Toronto open produce market, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported. Trading grew dull as warm weather continued to slow up demand. Butter and cheese remained quite steady.

Arriving in fair volume, egg receipts were more than sufficient for the quiet demand. Consequently, prices declined. In the ungraded section, A-large eggs sold at 24 cents and A-medium at 23 cents. A-large eggs in the graded section eased to a range of 26 cents to 26 1-2 cents, and A-medium to a range of 25 cents to 25 1-2 cents. Retailers' prices dropped one cent to 29 cents for A-large and 28 cents for A-medium.

The butter market showed a firmer undertone in the afternoon. While demand was not heavy, receipts were light. Prices remained unchanged in quiet trading. Offerings of first-grade creamery solids were fairly well cleaned up at 21 1-2 cents lb. Holders of Western butter were asking 22 cents, with only the odd sale being transacted at 21 3-4 cents.

Total exports of Canadian butter during the week ending August 5 were reported at 3,336 packages, while cheese exports for the week totalled 27,790 boxes.

Montreal Potatoes Recover

Montreal, Aug. 10. (CP)—Potatoes recovered part of losses on open produce markets here yesterday, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported. Egg, cheese and butter offerings all eased slightly in quiet trading.

Creamery butter prints to retailers sold for 22 1-2-3-4 cents a pound and solids for 22-22 1-4. Western butter delivered in Montreal was unquoted. Quebec No. 1 pasteurized in wholesale jobbing lots made 12 3-8 to 1-2. Receipts—135 boxes.

Ontario white and colored cheese were both quoted at 11 3-8. Quebec white and colored were both quoted at 10 5-8. Receipts 2,352 boxes.

Graded egg shipments sold at 27-27 1-2 cents a dozen for A-large, 25 1-2 to 26 for A-medium, 19-20 for B-large, 14 1-2 to 15 for C. Receipts —1,211 cases.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

Toronto, Aug. 10 (CP)—Most prices were steady on the Toronto Livestock Market today with lambs a shade higher on short supply. No prices were established for hogs although trend was steady. Cattle trade was slow with about 500 head of common quality left over from Wednesday.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Livestock Branch were: Cattle 100; calves 25; hogs 125; sheep and lambs 120.

Two loads of good weighty steers were included in the fresh receipts selling at $6.25-$6.50. A few common to medium butchers brought $5-$5.75. Cows were $4.50 for good butchers down to $2.50 for canners. A few stockers went at $4-$5.

Common veal calves were $5 for common up to $8.50 for good vealers.

Tone of the hog market was steady with yesterday's close of $10.50-$10.60 for dressedweights.

Good lambs sold at $8.58-8.75 with bucks $7.50 and culls mostly $6.50. Sheep were $2 for culls and $4 for good light ewes.

Fear Teacher's Back May Be Broken

London, Ont., Aug. 10—(CP)—Feared to have a broken back as result of an accident while cutting a tree at the home of his father. Arthur Thompson, 26-year-old teacher at Pembroke Collegiate, was to be X-rayed at Victoria Hospital today to determine the full extent of his injuries.

The young man, who is the son of Gordon Thompson, of Strathroy, is in a temporarily serious condition.

SLIGHT INCREASE IN BERRY PRICES ON CITY MARKET

Good Midweek Offering of Produce Available With Other Prices Steady

A slight increase in the price of berries was noted at the city market today where a fairly heavy midweek offering of produce was available.

The fruit was quoted at two boxes for twenty-five cents for reds while blues held at earlier quotations of three boxes for twenty-five cents.

Imported peaches were offered by the greater number of local vendors today with good quality stock selling at fifty cents the six quart basket. "Shiloh" plums made their debut and were offered at the same price.

"Yellow Harvester" apples headed a good display of this fruit, selling at twenty cents the basket. "Duchess" were quoted at twenty cents the peck with the popular "Red Astrachan" selling at forty cents for the same quantity.

Sweet corn, by far the best quality that has appeared on the market as yet, sold for twenty cents the dozen ears, although small varieties sold at fifteen cents the dozen. Potato quotations were steady with no change noted from Tuesday offerings. Peck lots sold at thirty and thirty-five cents according to quality.

Home-grown tomatoes were plentiful and of good quality. One dollar would buy a bushel while baskets were offered at twenty and twenty-five cents. Onions, carrots, beets and radishes were available in bunch lots at five cents each and three for ten cents. Cabbage and good quality cauliflower were offered at from ten cents.

Eggs were firm at 27 cents the dozen for "A" selects. Only a small offering of chicken was apparent.

REFUSE DEMAND

German-Italian Demands

The demands, said to have been submitted "unofficially" and to have been described by the axis powers as calling for a form of "benevolent neutrality" on the part of the Yugoslavia, were reported to have included:

1. Wartime control of Yugoslav railroads;
2. Placing of Yugoslav and military centres under supervision of Germany and Italy;
3. Placing all of Yugoslavia's war materials and foodstuffs at German-Italian disposals;
4. Granting Germany and Italy the right to cross Yugoslav territory to Rumania or Bulgaria.

Control of the railroads would give Italy and Germany direct rail connections across the Yugoslav province of Slovenia, supplementing the route through the Brenner pass.

Danzig 'a Blind'

Quarters close to the government expressed a belief that the axis powers may have been prompted by a desire from Italian Albania against Greece.

These quarters believed German agitation against Poland over Danzig was a "blind" to mask preparations in southern Europe. Declaring Germany was unwilling to risk a head-on collision with Poland and possibly an Anglo-French front which included Russia, these quarters said a lightning coup would be possible only in southern Europe.

9 PERSONS INJURED

3 Daughters in Hospital

The driver, Victor Robert Stanley, 47 of Dresden, and his son Robert, 14, were able to leave the institution after being treated for injuries. Three daughters of Stanley had to remain in the institution. they are Hazel Stanley, 20, who suffered severe lacerations of the lips and face; Evelyn Stanley, 16, who received injuries to her back and neck and shock and bruises, and Isabel Stanley, 12, who suffered head injuries and shock.

According to Provincial Constable Herbert Lanoton of Wallaceburg, the accident occurred shortly before eight o'clock. Stanley was driving his light delivery truck west on the 11th concession, with his oldest daughter seated with him in the cab, and the other children seated in the box.

Keirsebelch was proceeding south on the Prince Albert road. It was apparent that the drivers did not see each other's vehicles until they were within a few feet of the intersection. Both swerved to avoid a collision but were unable to avoid a smash.

SAFE SALVAGED FROM HARBOR BOTTOM

Owen Sound, Ont., Aug. 10—(CP)—A 1,000-pound safe aboard the steamship Hibou when it sank in Owen Sound Bay Nov. 21, 1936, has been recovered by salvage operations.

The safe, brought up after Diver Dennis Coffee of Toronto placed a block and tackle around it, contained papers belonging to the ship owners and $103.

Miss Ioná Johnston, stewardess, was the only victim of the disaster.

Iva Stewart, Peter Lorre and John King in "Mr. Lorre Takes a Vacation," now at the Belle with "Young Mr. Lincoln."

H. ED. QUINLAN DIES AT AGE 43

Native of Belleville Served Overseas With Canadian Engineers

Hugh Edward Quinlan, who was born in Belleville forty-three years ago, the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Quinlan, died in hospital in Montreal Wednesday night after a brief illness. His father was a member of the old firm of Messrs. Quinlan & Robertson who carried on extensive stone quarrying operations at Crookston in this county some years ago.

To many friends in Belleville the announcement of the death of Mr. Quinlan, will bring sincere feelings of regret. His boyhood and part of his young manhood days were passed in Belleville and he was popular with his associates. Occasionally he visited the city of his birth and renewed old friendships. During his residence in Belleville he was a member of St. Michael's Church.

The late Hugh Edward Quinlan served with the Canadian Engineers overseas during the Great War and was severely wounded. He held the rank of Captain. He was the last male member of his family; his brother Capt. Frank Quinlan was killed in France during the war and another brother, William Quinlan died in Montreal last year. He was unmarried.

Surviving him are three married and two single sisters.

The funeral will take place in Montreal on Friday.

400 Boxes Cheese Get Bonus Grade

Of nearly four hundred boxes of Peterborough district cheese graded at Lindsay this week by J. L. Irwin, Dominion dairy grader of the local office, none of the cheese scored below the bonus level of 93 points.

In that total from the factories of the northwestern section of W. J. Moore's area, fifty-five boxes from Selwyn factory registered 94 points.

Remarking on the cheese graded, Mr. Irwin reported to Mr. Moore that the cheese was among the best that had been graded by him this season.

During the past week or so heavy rainfalls have put pastures in rapidly improving shape and a normal return to average milk volume is reported from the majority of sections.

The encouraging feature of the industry this season is that a splendid quality of cheese has been maintained and there have been comparatively few "pick outs."

CRIPPLED YOUTH RESCUES HIMSELF FROM UPSET DINGHY

Toronto, Aug. 10—Capsized off Long Branch in the tiny dinghy from which his sister was drowned a year ago, 18-year-old Leonard Ferguson was given up for lost yesterday until he chugged off shore in a borrowed outboard to "rescue himself" two jumps ahead of the lifeguards.

A power boat manned with a full crew and grappling hooks roared up to the scene of the mishap to find the 'victim' coolly tugging his overturned craft back to land after first swimming ashore unnoticed by anxious onlookers who saw the swamped vessel bobbing half a mile out in the choppy waters of Lake Ontario.

Young Ferguson, who was crippled in one leg by tuberculosis as a child, is a brother of Gertrude Ferguson, who perished last September with her sweetheart, Alex Wheelans, while the two were attempting to cross the lake to Burlington.

SPENT GIRLHOOD IN LOG CABIN

Toronto, Aug. 10 (CP)—Mrs. M. C. Jackson of Toronto, whose girlhood was spent in the log cabin on her father's pioneer home near Napanee, celebrated her 90th birthday today.

She told questioners she could find no serious fault with the young men and women of today.

But, she said, "they certainly do not take care of themselves any better than we did and I don't think they enjoy themselves any more than we did."

3,000 RESIDENTS ARE PUZZLED

Montreal, Aug. 10.—(CP)—What the police department would like to known today is what happened on Duluth Street last night.

So would 3,000 neighborhood residents, a reporter and a photographer who, with thirty constables and four police patrol cars and the "Black Maria", gathered in five-block stretch over some sort of an argument. Nobody knows what the argument was about.

It all started when the high-pitched voices of youngsters were raised in argument about ten p.m. and things were complicated with the street in darkness because of electric wires short-circuited during a nearly-morning storm. Anyway, some one called the police.

'RIOT' PROPORTIONS

The police radio announcer ordered a squad car to investigate the argument. Ten minutes later it had magnified into a "riot" and two more cars went out. And then a fourth. A newspaper sent out a reporter and a photographer. Curiosity stirred by the whining police sirens, district residents thronged the street.

More telephone calls reached headquarters and squads of constables went to the scene. And the more police came, the more crowd thickened: Sidewalks and by-streets became impassable. Everyone talked at once but nothing happened.

Eventually the crowd dispersed. The street returned to normal. The "Black Maria" went back to headquarters with one occupant. A 20-year old youth who insisted on talking back when an officer told him to move on. He'll appear in Recorder's Court today.

ROME BANS TIME MAGAZINE

Rome, Aug. 10.—(AP) — Time magazine has been banned from Italy until further notice on account of an article in the issue of July 24, about Countess Edda Ciano, daughter of Premier Mussolini and wife of Foreign Minister Count Ciano.

London, Aug. 10.—(AP)— Henry Luce, publisher of Time magazine, was quoted by the News-Chronicle today as saying he understood that British News Agents' refusal to handle the magazine was due to an article about Countess Edda Ciano.

The wholesale organization representing the news dealers announced recently that it would not handle Time after July 31 issue. Unofficially Britain's stringent libel laws, which make the seller as well as the publisher responsible, were said to be the reason.

LICENCE TO WED ISSUED TO MAN 3 YEARS IN IRON LUNG

Chicago, Aug. 10 (AP)—Courageous young Fred Snite, Jr., who has been fighting for life in an "iron lung" for three years, was married today.

Chicago, Aug. 10.—(AP)—A marriage licence was issued today to Fred Snite, Jr., paralysis victim, who has been living in an iron lung for three years and Miss Teresa Larkin. It was understood Miss Larkin was an old friend. Young Snite recently observed his 29th birthday anniversary. Miss Larkin's age was given as 25.

9,193 IMMIGRANTS ALLOWED TO ENTER IN PAST 6 MONTHS

Ottawa Aug. 10 (CP)—Canada allowed in 9,193 immigrants during the six months ended June 30 the half yearly report issued today by the immigration branch revealed. While this is an increase of 13 per cent over the corresponding period of 1938, the comparatively small flow indicates the restrictions against immigration are being maintained.

"If everyone who wanted to come to Canada had been allowed to enter, the number would have been more like 250,000 than 9,000," an immigration official today said.

TRUCK DRIVER JUMPS SAFE

Gananoque, Ont., Aug. 10—(CP)—Ignace Driscoll, milk truck driver here, escaped death when a gasoline tank on his truck exploded, by jumping to safety. The cab of the truck was in flames when he jumped. The truck went over a 20-foot bank and was wrecked. He suffered slight burns.

SAYS HITLER WILL NOT GO TO WAR LIGHTLY

German Army Commander-in-Chief Declares Nation Backs Fuehrer

DUESSELDORF SPEECH

Duesseldorf, Germany, Aug. 10—(CP Havas) — Chancellor Hitler will never send Germany to war "lightly", Colonel-General Walther Von Brauchtitsch, commander-in-Chief of the German army, told armaments workers here today, but if he does decide "there is no other way" than the war the nation will stand behind him to a man.

"I can give you this sacred assurance in my capacity as an intimate collaborator of our Fuehrer," Von Brauchtitsch said.

He was addressing workers at the Metall-Borsig. The speech was broadcast to armaments factories throughout the Reich.

Refers to Non-Aggression Pact

Von Brauchtitsch, in an indirect attack on Great Britain and its anti-aggression front, which the Nazis charge is aimed at "encircling" Germany, said:

"We don't need to go asking the services of other peoples to send them into the fire with a view to defending our interests.

"The Reich does not have to intimidate the world but it is in a position today to brook no intimidation from anyone else.

"It is better to be feared, and therefore respected, than to be held in contempt and stripped of rights. Our awareness of our strength gives us the serenity we need in order to work. We can look to the future with the greatest confidence."

Berlin, Aug. 10—(AP)—Italian and German Foreign Ministers, Count Ciano and Joachim von Ribbentrop, will meet soon at Salzburg, Germany, it was announced today, "to consider the question of common policy of the allied (axis) countries."

It had been reported that representatives of the axis powers would meet for personal consultation on a plan of Chancellor Hitler for settlement of the Danzig-Poland question. Von Ribbentrop has a summer home at Salzburg.

(In Rome, Italian circles said Germany's claim to the Free City of Danzig, would be primary subject of discussion).

'ALMOST HOPELESS' SAYS ANATOMIST

Manila, Aug. 10 (CP)—An anatomy professor described as "almost hopeless" today the case of a baby girl born here Monday with her heart completely outside her body.

Dr. Juan Nanagas, Professor at the University of the Philippines, said his pessimistic view was taken because the exposed heart, which rests on the baby's chest and is connected to the body by a large artery, has no outside pericardium, or external membrane.

Meanwhile the baby, whose exposed heart is her only malformity, began her fourth day of life in apparently good general condition.

But even if the infant's life is prolonged, said Dr. Jesus Celius, heart specialist, it would be impossible to correct the rare malformation and place the heart in its natural position within the body.

IMMIGRATION QUOTA HOLDS BACK MANY THOUSANDS FROM U.S.

Washington, Aug. 10 —A wave of immigration is piling up behind the dams of the United States Immigration Act as panic-stricken hundreds of thousands flee from the fact or fear of racial persecution in Central Europe and from the shadow of war.

Immigration quotas from some countries are filled, for hopeless numbers of years. From Hungary, for instance, an applicant for a United States immigration visa, although accepted as such, may have to wait twenty-five years or more.

Ottawa, Aug. 10—There is no parallel in Canada for the immigration situation which has developed in the United States because Canada has no quota system and admits only desirable immigrants.

Actually, the Canadian system is one of "hand-picking" those who would enter the Dominion. Many thousand enter each year and this year the total will be quite heavy. No official figures were available.

Seen here with William Seymour one of her many husbands, is Mary Kirk Brown, "society glamour girl", now in a New York hospital being treated for wrists, gashed with a razor, which she admitted doing herself in an effort to take her life. She was once reported engaged to Max Baer, boxing's playboy, and her most recent husband was Robert A. Kelly. The wounds she inflicted were reported to be not dangerous.

HOUSES BANNED TO MAIL DELIVERY

Action Taken by Postal Authorities Because Stubs of Sweepstakes Sent to Ireland

Toronto, Aug. 10 (CP)—J. P. Girvan, Deputy Postmaster in Toronto, said today there were hundreds of houses in this city and thousands in Canada where mail is not delivered because they have been caught sending Irish Sweepstake stubs back to Ireland.

The Deputy Postmaster made this explanation after Dr. James Cotton, Toronto, complained the condition was "worse than regulations in dictator countries."

"It was brought to my attention when my report on the serious heart condition of a patient was not delivered," Dr. Cotton said. "As a result the man nearly died. The report and my instructions were not delivered at his home and the letter was not sent back to me for one whole month."

Dr. Cotton said he investigated and found there were thousands of cases where mail was not delivered because of bans placed on houses where residents mailed sweepstake stubs to Ireland.

Mr. Girvan said the ban applies to everybody in the house, whether the individual has broken the law or not.

"Mail is simply not delivered to that house," he said. "We notify them that they are on the banned list. The only way the ban can be lifted is by an appeal to the Postmaster-General. Usually, when this is granted, we take an assurance from them that the offence will not be repeated.

"Sometimes, when it is a solitary infringement, we restore the mail privilege when the person assures us he won't do it again.

"The ban lasts indefinitely and applies to all those using the mails illegally for purposes to defraud, including those dealing in Irish Sweepstake and other lottery tickets."

MUST CONTRIBUTE $20 TOWARDS COST OF REPAIRING DAMAGES

Peterborough, Ont., Aug. 10 — William Craig, 43, must pay $20 towards the cost of repairing damages he inflicted to 15-year-old Clarence Allen's teeth by hitting him in the face with his fist, it was decided in court.

Craig appeared in court yesterday on a charge of aggravated assault and was given two years' suspended sentence. Evidence showed Craig and young Clarence fought when Craig noticed the youngster and other boys climbing on the roof of William Doughty's shack. Doughty, 78, is Craig's father-in-law.

The court commented that while Allen got something that was coming to him, Craig used too much force.

WRONG PEW

At the office where refugees seek posts as domestic servants and English employers call to interview them an odd little incident occurred the other day. An important looking lady was shown in and, surveying the scene around her, remarked in a loud voice that she "did not see anyone here who looked at all suitable". It was then explained to her that she was in the room reserved for the English employers, not for the refugees.—London New Statesman and Nation.

PREMIER KING RECEIVES CHEERS AT TORONTO BANQUET

Hon. Ernest Lapointe, minister of justice in the Dominion Government, stood and led the cheers for Premier Mackenzie King at the huge banquet tendered in his honor in Toronto, when representatives from every province, except government officials in his own Ontario, gathered to do him honor. Mr. King stands by while thousands in the banquet hall responded to the cheer for the prime minister with the third longest term in office in the Dominion's history?

DOMINION'S LIBERALS GATHER TO HONOR MACKENZIE KING

Liberals from every part of the Dominion gathered at Toronto to honor Prime Minister Mackenzie King at a gigantic banquet on the occasion of the 20th anniversary of Mr. King's rise to the leadership of the Liberal party. Led by two pipers and followed by Col. W. P. Mulock, the prime minister visited all the dining rooms in the hotel where the banquet was held, to greet old friends who had gathered to honor him. TOP LEFT. Mrs. H. M. Lay, sister of the prime minister, is shown, TOP CENTRE, with members of her family as she attended the gala function. To commemorate occasion, Mr. King was presented with a gold medal by Dianne Stowe. UPPER RIGHT. Among the politically distinguished seated at the head table were Hon. CANNIFTON GAIN EDGE ON SHANNONVILLE

Win Third Game of Series by a 7-3 Score — Next Game on Friday

Foxboro, Aug. 10 (Special)—With Lorne Jarrell turning in a tidy five-hit pitching effort to limit the visitors to five small singles, the Cannifton "Sluggers" moved out in front for the first time in their best of five series with the Shannonville nine, when last night, on the home diamond, they cuffed the offerings of two visiting hurlers to all corners of the lot to pound out a decisive 7-3 victory in the third game of the S. H. League finals. With the series now standing two games to one in favor of Cannifton, last night's victors now have the Shannonville lads on the run and need only one more victory to take the championship.

In chalking up his second consecutive victory over the "Hawks" in the present series, Lorne Jarrell was complete master of the situation last night, tuning the opposition down almost in order for five innings and ran into trouble in only one frame, the sixth, when the Shannonville lads took advantage of an error, a base on balls and three timely singles to shove across their only three runs of the game. Snappy fielding on the part of the homesters aided materially in keeping the visitors off the score sheet with the Cannifton boys turning in two timely double killings to cut off threatened scoring sprees. Barberstock started on the mound for the Shannonville nine and went well until the fourth when four consecutive safeties sent him to the showers with Juby relieving him and finishing the pastime. In the three innings in which he worked, Barberstock was nicked for six safeties, one a double by Lorne Jarrell, while he allowed two bases on balls and struck out three. Juby was also touched for six hits and struck out four in the four innings he worked. Jarrell allowed only five hits, all singles, while he walked two and fanned five.

All but two of the Cannifton lineup connected safely with the top half of the batting order really going to town to account for ten of their twelve hits. L. Jarrell and Empson with a double and a single to their credit led the parade with E. Jarrell, Collins and Smallhorn getting a brace of singles. The hitting prowess of the losers was more evenly divided with no single batter getting more than one safety. Dies, however, with his timely single in the sixth inning did the most damage when he scored two on his single to right.

Defensively, Reid and Snider for the losers went well with Snider in centre for the "Hawks" snaring off two hard hit balls that were labelled and his feat of taking Gannon's bounder in the sixth to force Smallhorn at second was fast fielding. For the winners, Collins and Empson stood out in field; both were on starting end of double plays, Empson in the second inning when he snared Snider's liner to double Houston off second, and, Collins in the sixth when he took Houston's roller at third to step on the sack and force Dies before throwing to first for the second out to end the inning and cut short Shannonville's only scoring spree of the game.

Cannifton will have their chance to end it all on Friday evening when they visit Shannonville for the fourth game of the series as they need only one more victory to win their first South Hastings League championship. Shannonville on the other hand must win the next two if they are to win the silverware. Following the final series a benefit game will be played for Gerald Sager who had the misfortune to break his leg in the Shannonville vs. Latta series. This game is scheduled for next Wednesday evening and will be between the team which eventually wins the South Hastings League championship and an all-star aggregation picked from the other three teams in the league.

CHINESE STAGE DEMONSTRATION

Petition Presented to British Embassy in Tokyo in Chinese

Tokyo, Aug. 10—(AP)—Close to 200 Chinese demonstrated today before the British Embassy, already harassed by increasing Japanese demands for resumption of conferences on Anglo-Japanese differences in China.

The Chinese demonstrations, more orderly than demonstrations by Japanese which preceded it during the past month, ended when a delegation delivered a petition to the Embassy. Content of the document, written in Chinese, was not known at once.

France, U. S. Add to Complication

France and the United States, meanwhile, were reported to have declared to Japan their interest in economic problems arising out of the war in China, adding a new complication to the already stalemated Anglo-Japanese conference.

It was believed by observers the question of including other powers in consideration of issues between Great Britain and Japan had become a new barrier to resumption of the conversations.

The Japanese press hinted that Britain, before resuming her own talks, was awaiting the outcome of a conference of the five key ministers of the Japanese cabinet on a proposed Japanese military alliance with the Rome-Berlin axis.

New Incidents at Tientsin

Tientsin, Aug. 10—(AP)— New incidents indicated today that the Japanese army had stiffened its attitude toward foreigners in this North China city.

A white Russian woman told of being detained five hours before she was permitted to enter the British concession. Restrictions on persons going into and coming from the concession have been in force since June 14.

A Briton reported a sentry smashed his watch because it was set to local time instead of Tokyo time, which is an hour earlier. It was the second such reported incident.

A Belgian recovering from an operation said he was attacked yesterday by a Japanese sentry on the Peitaiho Beach station platform.

SIDNEY COUNCIL

The August session of the Sidney Council was held on the 7th inst. Minutes of the regular July meeting, also of a special held July 26th were read and adopted.

Motions were passed as follows:

Bleecker and Bush—That a grant of $25 be made to the Junior Farmers Organization towards the Home Improvement Plan sponsored by them.—Carried.

Danford and Wilson—That the following accounts be paid: Ontario Intelligencer, $3.99; Municipal World, $4.01; H. J. Madill, $1.40; Whillier Co, $13.09; W. D. Embury $4.50; M. Chard, $5.00; A. E. Strickland $3.75; Geo. H. Cobley $2.00.—Carried.

Bleecker and Danford—That Relief accounts for July be paid.—Carried.

Nicolson and Wilson—That accounts under Road Voucher No. 8 be paid—Carried.

Wilson and Nicolson—That a grant of $50.00 be made to the Stirling Agricultural Society.—Carried.

Wilson and Nicolson—That the restricted area in By-Law No. 1100 be changed to meet the requirements of the Department of Highways of Ontario.—Carried.

Various by-laws for striking rates were passed and the Council adjourned to meet Monday, Sept. 4th, at 1 o'clock p.m.

W. H. NOBES, Clerk.

The Stars Say—

For Friday, August 11

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

DOUBTFUL and conflicting conditions are likely to materialize this day, according to certain adverse configurations. While it is a stabilizing reign in some particulars, benefits also may come from minor changes. With property values, labor and old interests making steady gains, yet there are loopholes for fraud, trickery and other subtle undermining, unless vigilance and precaution are exercised. Be alert to all manner of duplicities and intrigues.

Those whose birthday it is are on the threshold of a year in which moderate progress may be made through increased values in old plans and possessions. It is a time of stabilizing influences, with steady gain by labor, industry and application, but with the exercise of precaution against intrigues and undercover snares. Minor but judicious changes may be helpful.

A child born on this day will be diligent, steadfast and earnest, although versatile, adventurous and enjoying change, and may apply itself in unusual lines, or in inventions of practical purpose.

HIGHWAY TO ALASKA NOT PREJUDICIAL TO ALBERTA INTERESTS

Ottawa, Aug. 12—(CP)— There is "not the slightest reason to suppose that the interests of the people of Alberta would be neglected" in selecting a route for an international highway to Alaska, Hon. Charles Stewart, chairman of the British Columbia-Yukon-Alaska Highway Commission, said in a statement issued today.

The statement was intended to clarify the scope of the Canadian Commission's investigation, in view of public statements and newspaper comment regarding Alberta's interest in the proposed highway and the practicability of an alternative route through that province.

EATON GROCETERIA

MOON ON THE WATER

by Ruby M. Ayres

Dulcie had been out very late last night; Jane had heard her creep up to bed long after midnight, and now she found herself wondering where she had been, and whether Gavin—but she had made up her mind to put all such thoughts away from her, and they must not be encouraged.

"I should stay in bed if I were you," she said more kindly.

Dulcie leaned forward and poked the glowing coals together.

"Has the postman been here yet?" she asked.

Jane flushed. "Yes, there was only one letter for me."

"I thought I should have heard from Josh," Dulcie said.

Jane made no reply, but she felt horribly guilty as she took the coffee pot from Mary and began to pour out.

When they were alone, she asked abruptly.

"Are you in love with Mr. Hallard, Dulcie?"

"In love with him!" Dulcie laughed contemptuously. "Of course I'm not, but he's rich—and before I marry him I shall take good care to see that he settles some money on me, that's all I care about."

Jane stared at her in bewilderment.

"But—he's so kind," she said at last.

"Is he?" Dulcie sounded wearily indifferent. "I don't care for that sort of kindness, it's so dull." She turned her face away before she went on: "It would suit me far better to take a chance with a man like your Gavin—not knowing what would happen, than to sail about on a secure pond with Josh."

"But—a moment ago you said that money was all you wanted," Jane protested. "And anyway, I can't see you—taking a chance with any man who was—poor."

Her sister did not answer, and Jane sat down at the table.

"Has Mr. Hallard asked you to marry him?" she asked presently

INSTALMENT 21.

"No, he hasn't, if you must know," Dulcie answered sharply. She stretched out a hand for the coffee. "But, of course, he will as soon as I give him the opportunity," she added with something of her usual assurance.

Was it as easy as all that? Jane wondered. And if so, had Gavin been given an opportunity to say how much Dulcie attracted him? Her heart began to beat heavily, although she quickly reminded herself that Gavin and she understood each other now, and there were to be no more misunderstandings and petty jealousies.

Dulcie laughed softly. "I expect you'll snap my head off," she said, and she glanced at Jane from under her long lashes, "but if Gavin didn't belong to you, I might be tempted to—well, to find out whether I attract him as much as he attracts me."

"Does he attract you?" Jane asked, and was amazed at the calmness of her voice.

"I imagine he must attract most girls," Dulcie answered.

Jane managed to laugh. "Well, don't let me stand in the way," she said casually.

"You couldn't—if I really wanted him," Dulcie answered.

She was not, as a rule, deliberately cruel, but this morning her head was aching distractingly, and, like most selfish people, she did not see why she should be the only one to suffer, and Jane was at hand and she enjoyed trying to rouse her anger.

But Jane kept quiet. She began to spread marmalade thickly on a piece of toast which was already covered with it.

Dulcie watched her for a moment in silence, till at last Jane said quite kindly, "Why don't you go back to bed? I expect you would feel better lying down."

"Yes, and get out of your way," her sister answered. "I suppose Gavin's coming round and so you'd like me out of the way. I know you hate me to be in the room when he's here."

Jane suddenly pushed her chair back and rose; there was a bright spot of color in either of her cheeks and it was with a supreme effort that she managed to control her voice as she said:

"If you hadn't a headache, Dulcie, I should take you by your shoulders and shake you. But you won't make me angry with your silly little jibes. You can say what you like, but it makes no difference. Why, Gavin would laugh if he could hear you. He——"

Dulcie started up, her eyes flashing. "Laugh, would he? Very well then, perhaps you would like to know that he was with me last night. That we spent the evening together—perhaps you would like to know——"

Jane took a quick step forward.

"That's a lie," she said.

Dulcie laughed. "Is it? Very well, ask him if you don't believe me—ask him, and see if he will deny it."

For a moment they faced each other in absolute silence, then Jane's clenched hands relaxed, and without another word, she turned and walked out of the room.

At the door she came face to face with Pamela.

"Where are you going?" Pamela asked. "Don't you want any breakfast? Is anything the matter?" But Jane did not answer; she went up to her room and put on her hat and coat, not even bothering to choose her best; she felt as if she were stifling, and that if she did not get out of the house at once she would say or do something desperate.

The sun was shining though it was cold, and she walked briskly, her mind seemingly numb. She found herself at the station, and because there seemed nothing else to do, she took a ticket to London.

The train was late and she walked up and down. She felt that she hated Dulcie, that she hated Gavin. It was as if she was chained between them while they took a delight in torturing her, knowing she could not escape.

The train came in at last and as Jane sat down by a window, for the first time she suddenly remembered Josh Hallard. And now she knew that she would meet him, that no consideration for her sister or for Gavin could prevent her meeting him.

Had Dulcie spoken the truth about last night. At the moment she neither knew nor cared. Let them go—let them do as they pleased; she had finished with them both. With sudden impulse she tore off the glove of her left hand and then the signet ring. Her finger felt lighter without it—more free—but for an instant she held it in the palm of her hand, staring down at it with coldly critical eyes before she opened the window and flung it out. Gone! She watched it flash for a second in the spring sunshine, before it was lost in the stubby grass. Gone!

After that she was not conscious of thinking about anything. And then they were in London.

Jane got out wondering why she felt so tired, as if she had been running, or had not slept for nights. She went out into the street. What a lot of streets there were, she thought vaguely—as soon as you had finished with one street and had turned the corner, there was another and another and another.

"I think I must be a little lightheaded," she thought ruefully, and presently she climbed on to the top of a bus.

"Where to, Miss?" She looked up at the conductor with an impatient little frown. Why did people ask so many questions? As if it mattered where she went or what she did.

"A tuppeny fare, please," she said and then again her mind seemed suspended for a little, perhaps because she was too hurt to think, or even to suffer.

Presently it began to rain. When next the bus stopped she rose and went down the stairs.

What time was it? It seemed hours and hours since she had faced Dulcie and had longed to strike her she looked for a clock—a quarter to one!

What part of London was she in? The rain was falling heavily now, so she hailed a taxi and gave the address of the restaurant that Hallard had mentioned in his letter. And now she was longing to see him again, to meet the kindliness of his eyes, to be with some one who understood.

It was a five-shilling fare by the time they reached the narrow street in Soho and the yellow-painted front of the D'Or Blanc. She counted out the money and a sixpenny tip, realizing that she was left with only half a crown and her return ticket; not that it mattered, for she might not go back—she might never go back. She pushed open the swing door, and saw Hallard sitting at one of the little tables.

He rose as she entered. "I was afraid you were not coming," he said as he took her hand.

And Jane thought: "That's funny—I should have thought he would be much more afraid I should come."

"What time is it?" she asked, and he told her that it was nearly half-past one.

"Was your train late?" he asked, and she said, "Oh, no, I've been in London all the morning."

He looked at her critically and saw the cold strain of her face and its pallor. He called to the waiter and ordered cocktails without asking what she would like.

"It's just as well," she told herself. "Because I shouldn't know what on earth to say."

It was a cosy little restaurant; when presently the mists began to clear from Jane's eyes, she looked around approvingly.

There was an open fire burning, and only about half a dozen tables scattered 'round the room. There was a little colored lamp on each table, and on theirs some violets in a green bowl.

Jane moved a hand to touch them. "How lovely," she said.

"I thought you would like them," Hallard answered.

And then she realized that no other table had flowers, and that he must have ordered them to please her. The little kindness hurt as even the most gentle touch can hurt a bruise, and she had to bite her lip hard to prevent its trembling.

It was only when she woke up to the fact that they had both been silent for some minutes that she spoke: "I'm sorry I was late. I got on a bus and rode about, and we went further than I realized, and then it rained——"

Hallard said gently, "Your coat is quite damp—won't you take it off? I will get them to dry it for you?"

"Shall I? Oh, thank you, I think I will." She slipped out of the coat and he gave it to the waiter—and then suddenly Jane thought: "I ought to have changed my frock—not that he will notice, but I ought to have changed it."

She was felling warmer now; the terrible tightness had relaxed about her throat, and the numbness had gone from her hands. Presently she made another effort at conversation.

"This is a nice restaurant. I've never been here before."

"I seldom come myself," Hallard answered. "Only when I want to be quiet." He did not tell her that it was one of the most exclusive and expensive restaurants in London.

Jane nodded. "Yes, it's nice to be quiet," she said rather piteously.

And then, suddenly she felt his hand over hers as they lay clasped in the lap of her frock.

INSTALMENT 22.

"What is it, Jane?" Hallard asked, and then as she could not answer: "What is the matter, my dear? Can't you tell me?"

She dared not look at him, but the dreadful thought came to her that if he spoke so kindly she would disgrace herself and him by bursting into tears, so she just shook her head, and presently he took his hand away.

The waiter brought dishes with little covers over them, and presently he filled two glasses with red wine.

"I hope you're hungry," Hallard said, "because I am, and it's no fun eating alone."

"Yes, I believe I am hungry," she answered, and presently, to her surprise, she found that she was really enjoying the food.

"And that's all wrong," she told herself ruefully, and she felt that she wanted to laugh. It was so useless trying to be heart-broken and tragic, for life had a way of refusing to permit it.

"Cigarette?" Hallard asked.

"Thank you." And then for almost the first time she looked at him. It was he, she knew, whose kindness and silent sympathy had gently roused her from the apathy into which she had fallen, and had given her back at least something of her old philosophical courage.

And yet all Dulcie wanted of this man was his money—all Dulcie could see in him was a means to an end. She was blind to all else that he had to offer to a woman—if he loved her.

She started when suddenly he spoke: "Feeling better?"

"Thank you, much better." She gave a little sigh and relaxed, leaning back in her chair. "It was a lovely lunch," she said gratefully and yet for the life of her she could not have told what they had eaten. "And you have been very kind," she added in a low voice.

He was sitting with his elbow on the table, one firm hand pushing back the thick, fast-greying hair from his forehead, and presently he said slowly, "Not so kind as I should like to be, Jane."

Jane stared at him. Not so kind as he would like to be?

He turned his head to smile at her. "May I explain that?" he asked. "Or mustn't I?"

"If—if you like," she said helplessly.

Hallard ground out the end of his cigarette before he spoke again, and then he said slowly, as if choosing his words with care, "I don't know how little you have heard about me—or how much—but I should like to tell you about myself—if I may."

Jane thought: "What has it to do with me? Why need you trouble to tell me?" and yet subconsciously she knew that she wanted to hear, and presently he went on:

"When I was quite a young man—am nearly fifty now—I married, and four years later I was forced to divorce my wife. No doubt you already know that. It was a great blow to me, because at the time I cared for her. It rather upset my ideas about women, and I am afraid I grew to look upon them all as—well, as selfish creatures who want a man only for what he can give them, and with very little intention of giving anything in return. I still find them amusing, but I have never again taken a woman seriously until"—he paused before he went on deliberately—"until the day I came to your house and met you."

He raised his eyes to her incredulous face, smiling faintly. "You find it difficult to believe, perhaps, but it is the simple truth. If you remember, we agreed at once to be friends, and when I left you it was with a warmer feeling in my heart than I have known for many years. Since then I have often thought about you and wished to see you again, and then when I returned from Paris—when I was on my way down to your house—it was of you I was thinking—it was you I wanted to see; you are such a real person, Jane," he added.

He stopped speaking as if silenced by the depths of his own sincerity, and Jane suddenly raised her eyes to a long mirror on the wall opposite which reflected them both.

She looked at him first, wondering why he seemed so like a stranger—or was it like a friend? Some one whom she had known for years—and had always cared for and trusted? And then she looked at herself. She saw a girl in a not very smart hat and frock, with a pale face and eyes that just now looked enormous in their bewilderment—a girl with no pretensions to beauty, and yet to whom this man had just said: "It was of you I was thinking—it was you I wanted to see."

Not Dulcie—not Dulcie!

And then suddenly she thought of Gavin—she loved Gavin, even though in an access of passionate anger and jealousy she had thrown his ring away and had told herself she was finished with him. She loved him—and she knew what exquisite happiness it would have been if he had said to her, as Hallard had just said: "It was you I wanted to see."

Gavin who, in spite of his promise to her, had spent last evening with her sister. If only people could love where it would mean happiness, or refuse to love where there was not complete trust!

(To be continued)

FARM FOR TRADE

In an Ontario newspaper Dr. Keksch, of Balassagyarmat, Hungary, advertises "Hungarian farmer would like to exchange 1,000 acres (400 hectares) of good land for a farm in Southern Canada." He does not stipulate the size or value of the farm desired.

We do not think there will be many offers. In any war which might break out in Europe, Hungary might well be the battleground. That is probably why the farmer there, well-off one would jude from the size of his holdings, wants to get out. But anyone who would want to give up a good farm here to go to Hungary at the present time should have his head read. It wouldn't be worth taking the risk, even for 1,000 acres.—Windsor Star.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was smoking in back of the sporting page and ma looked all through her shiny blue handbag for about the 6th time, saying, O deer I must of lost it, how provoking, I declare I'd rather throw a dollar away to the 7 winds and know just where it is rather than mysteriously lose it and have all this uncertainty, I know I didn't spend it because I can acount for every penny to a split hair, so that's the only explination, I lost it, O deer.

Well as long as you're sure you lost it, nollege is power for Peet sake, pop said. Look at it fillosophically, what's gone is gone. That's a way I look at my hair, I know it's lost and I've resigned myself to the fact that there's no way of recovering it, so I just sensibly forget it, he said, and ma said, Well I suppose you're right, there's no use spilling any unnecesserry milk when the water's once over the dam. One of the bridge ladies told me the name of a miraculous unbelievable hair tonic, speaking of hair. She claimed her husband had given himself up for lost, but after 2 applications of this miracle werker his bald spot is like a new man, ma said.

Yee gods, what did she say the name of it was? pop said, and ma said, I cant remember, I dont pay any attention to such things, nothing has ever been invented to bring back hair, I've heard you say so a hundred and one times and more.

But for Peet sake this may be an exception, pop said, and ma said, Hee hee they're all exceptions according to you, I didn't hear anybody say any such thing, I was just testing out our sensible way of fillosophically resigning yourself to losing things hee hee.

If that's your idea of a practical joke it's a sad and dizmal failure, pop said.

Ma just keeping on laughing, proving it wasn't a failure to her.

TIME OUT AT THE POOL TABLE FOR JOHNNY LONGDEN

Taking time out from his task of maintaining his imposing record of riding winners, Alberta's Johnny Longden takes time out for a pool session during the current meet at New York's ancient Saratoga. His partner is Mrs. Longden. Johnny was the continent's leading rider last year and is piling up firsts again this year, possibly in sufficent numbers to again take the mythical crown.

EYES ON SALZBURG

Italo - German Conference Expected to Cover 'Encirclement' and Far Eastern Issue as Well as Balkan Problems

Salzburg, Germany, Aug. 11—(AP—Foreign Minister Count Ciano of Italy arrived today for a three-day conference with Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop of Germany and to attune the Rome-Berlin axis to new conditions in Europe.

Ciano brought suggestions from Premier Mussolini on what the closely co-operating political and military partners should do about the Free City of Danzig, the Balkans and the Far East.

The questions of Danzig and "defensive measures" against what the Rome-Berlin partners have called "encirclement" by Great Britain and France were expected by many observers to be the crux of the discussions. Talk of Japanese participation in the Italian-German military alliance figures in axis discussion of the alleged "encirclement."

Italy Favors Moderation

Even the question of peace or war. It was held by some neutral observers, might hinge on the outcome of the talks.

The general impression in well informed circles was that Ciano would present from Mussolini the suggestion that Germany proceed with moderation.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Aug. 11—(CP)—Showers have occurred in Manitoba and the Lake Superior region while in nearly all other parts of the Dominion the weather has been fair and moderately warm. Pressure is high over Ontario, Quebec and the eastern States, while moderate disturbances are centred over Manitoba and the Mackenzie Valley with a deep low area off the Labrador coast.

Lake Superior: Fresh southerly winds; cloudy with scattered thundershowers. Saturday: Winds shifting to westerly; partly cloudy and moderately warm; probably scattered showers over east portion.

Manitoba: Moderate to fresh winds; cloudy with scattered showers. Saturday: Mostly fair and moderately warm.

Saskatchewan and Alberta: Fair and moderately warm. Saturday: Partly cloudy and warm; probably scattered thundershowers.

Why the Weather!

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Wind and water! A single glance at maps of the prevailing winds and of the ocean currents reveals at once a similarity and suggests that one must depend upon the other. In general the winds cause the ocean currents. The first great authority on this was our own Comdr. M. F. Maury who was honored for his work here and abroad, receiving the degree of doctor of laws from Cambridge University. Maury collected thousands of observations of wind and currents from sea captains all over the world, and published his collection of nine years in 200 manuscript volumes. This great work resulted in all maritime nations working together on ocean meteorology to the great benefit of navigation.

FIRST BRITISHER TO SEE GERMAN INVADERS IN 1914

Irish Resident of London, Ont., Mistook Cuirassiers for French Cavalry

INCIDENT NEAR MONS

London, Ont., Aug. 11—(CP)—If Duncan C. McLeod hadn't mistaken a patrol of German Cuirassiers for French cavalry he might have fired the British army's first shot in the Great War. As it is, he believes he is among the few men in Canada who took part in the first mounted skirmish.

Resident of Canada since 1920, McLeod is a member of the staff of Westminster Military Hospital here. He now is 46 years old, married and the father of a small daughter.

News that the Mayor of Mons, Belgium, wishes to present medals to the Canadian soldiers who aided in the liberation of the city on the eve of the armistice stirs McLeod's memory to those August days 25 years ago.

FOUR SWEPT THROUGH RAPIDS

Young Persons in Motorboat Survive Trying Experience in Ottawa River

Ottawa, Aug. 11—(CP)— Four young persons, swept down the Ottawa river rapids near Lake Deschenes, a few miles west of the city, survived to tell the story last night.

Al Roy rescued the two boys and two girls with his motorboat as their battered rowboat swept into calm water with the quartette clinging to it.

Gabrielle Lebrun, 24, Ireine Larose, 24; Gordon Hiscoe, 25; and Harry Creighton, 19, had been out fishing. An oarlock broke as they rowed across the swift water above the rapids.

"We tried to beat the current by using one oar as a paddle and making use of the other in the one good oarlock, but it was no use," said Creighton, "so as we entered the rapids we steered with an oar at the stern of the boat. We got through the first bit of white water, but in the next dip the boat shipped water and turned over. We clung to the boat until we were through it all."

The rapids extend for about half a mile. The rowboat was stove in by upthrust rocks during its swift passage through the cataract, but none of the four persons clinging to it was hurt.

BLAMES VANDALISM AS PARK METER SYSTEM LOSES MONEY

Detroit, Aug. 11 (CP)—While other cities reported sizeable earnings from their parking meter systems, Hamtramck lost $893 in three months operation, according to city Controller Peter Szmczak who blames vandalism for most of the trouble. Within a week seven meters were found smashed, five more were robbed and 22 meter-cover glasses were broken.

FORTY HOTELS IN WINDSOR GIVEN WARNING

Hofer Brewery Has Ten Days to Prepare for 30 Day Suspension

GORDON'S STATEMENT

Hotels Must Bring Beverage Rooms Up to Requirements Within Ten Days

Toronto, Aug. 11—(CP)—Notice of a 30-day suspension of the licence of the Hofer Brewery at La Salle, near Windsor, and warnings to 40 Windsor hotels their licences will be cancelled unless they conform with the Ontario Liquor Control Board's beverage room requirements were issued last night by Liquor Commissioner A. St. Clair Gordon.

Mr. Gordon announced the Hofer Brewery will be given 10 days to bottle its present brew before the suspension order takes effect. Similarly, the hotels have been notified that they lose their permits unless they bring their beverage rooms inside the Board's requirements within 10 days.

Incident in La Salle

Announcement of the brewery licence suspension was said to have followed an incident July 12 in La Salle in which officials of the brewery allegedly entertained soldiers of the Essex Scottish regiment. Charges laid during a brawl in front of the brewery the same night await disposal.

"They might as well realize once and for all that the law and our requirements must be lived up to," said the Liquor Commissioner last night in an interview. "We have already notified these places that we mean business."

Reports have been received from board investigators in Windsor indicating unsanitary accommodation in some hotels. The warnings were believed prompted by these reports and others showing pinball and slot-machine games were being operated in some licenced hotels.

"We are invoking the authority we have to stop this sort of 'treating' business," Mr. Gordon said. "And if we hear of any similar infractions on the part of other breweries they will get the same sort of treatment from us."

QUEBEC SEEKS PUBLIC WORKS

Use of Governor-General's Warrants for Relief Rejected by Prime Minister

Ottawa, Aug. 11—(CP)—The Dominion government has the Province of Quebec's proposals for remedying the unemployment relief situation under study. The cabinet met briefly last evening following a conference with Premier Duplessis and a number of Quebec Mayors, and adjourned overnight.

Premier Duplessis was main spokesman for Quebec yesterday, and urged upon Prime Minister Mackenzie King and his assembled cabinet that his province sought public works rather than direct relief. Prime Minister Mackenzie King rejected a suggestion from the Provincial Premier that money for relief purposes be provided by issuing Governor General's warrants. Mr. Duplessis suggested the money could be used to enter upon a works program with Quebec on a 50-50 basis, relieving the municipalities of the burden.

Ship with Homeless Jews Cruises Up and Down Coast for Two Months

Constanza, Rumania, Aug. 11 —(AP)—Homeless Jews continued today to pour into this seaport with the faint hope of crashing the sea blockade into Palestine.

The freighter "Tiger Will" sailed with 840 Jewish refugees. More than 700 Polish Jews arrived by special trains and 1,606 Czecho-Slovak Jews landed at Braila, on the Danube.

The tramp steamers are provided by the "Betar" organization in which are grouped Palestine's extreme Jewish Nationalists. Passage rates are high.

A handful of ragged men brought news of the steamer Lisel and its 800 Jewish passengers. The Lisel's captain was in jail in Palestine, it was stated, and most of the passengers were held in camps. Ten passengers were buried at sea.

For more than two months—with water and food running low—the Lisel cruised along the Palestine coast, waiting for an opportunity to crash the blockade. The crew mutinied for higher pay, which the master granted.

With passengers exhausted from hunger and thirst, the Captain finally surrendered to British authorities and the Lisel was escorted into Haifa by two destroyers.

Germany Cannot Wage Successful War, Even By Lightning Thrust

Dr. Lajos in New Book Says Reich Has Only 1,500,000 Men of Two Years' Training — Labor Shortage, Especially in Agriculture, Reported — Says German Railway System Rotten

By FRED BACKHOUSE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Aug. 11—(CP)—Startling claims that Germany has serious internal weakness are made in a little book, "Germany's War Chances," written by Dr. Ivan Lajos, which promises to become a best seller here.

Germany cannot possibly wage a successful war, the author deduces and he offers a mass of evidence, culled from statements in the controlled Nazi press and by German spokesmen.

When the book appeared in Budapest it caused a sensation. In one week nearly 300,000 Hungarians bought it; fresh editions were sold out every few hours.

Recently the book was banned there and it was announced that the public prosecutor was entering a criminal prosecution against the author, a young professor of constitutional law.

Rules Out Lightning War

Dr. Lajos tosses out the pet theory of the Nazi militarists, the blitz-krieg or "lightning war."

"The German Reich has at its disposal scarcely more than 1,500,000 men who have taken part in a thorough two-year training, in comparison with the 5,000,000 which France possesses," furthermore, Germany lacks staff officers and commanders. His authority? an official German publication.

In the German railway system, according to official data quoted by the author there is urgent need for 4,000 locomotives and 100,000 coaches and trucks. The system "is in a rotten condition."

Shortage of Farm Class

Walter Darre, German Minister of Agriculture, was quoted as writing in January, 1939, that there

225 Cu. In. Boats May Vie For Regional Honors at Picton

Prince Edward Yacht Club Will Decide Whether to Sponsor Event

Picton, Aug. 11 (Special)—The ideal waters of Picton Bay find favor with boat racing enthusiasts and as a result the Regional championship of the 225 cubic inch class crafts may be decided here on Labor Day. At the end of each season there is a Regional championship when the points won in races at all sanctioned American Power Boat regattas are totalled, along with the results of the final race. The winner receives the valuable B. A. trophy, emblematic of the 225 class championship.

This is for region 13 and includes most of Ontario and Quebec. The Prince Edward Yacht Club is debating the matter and will decide in a few days if they will sponsor the event, which would bring leading 225 class drivers here in what would be the greatest meet of its kind in Canada. Sea flea championships would also be decided at this meet.

Official Is Found Fatally Shot

Baton Rouge, La., Aug. 11 —(AP)— George Heidelberg, in charge of student and national youth administration employment in Louisiana State University, was found fatally shot at his home yesterday.

His wife was secretary to Dr. James Monroe Smith, former President of the university now indicted on charges of embezzlement, forgery and other alleged crimes. Dr. Smith gave himself up at Brockville, Ont. She now is secretary to Dr. Paul M. Hebert, who succeeded Smith as acting president.

City Police Chief W. D. Atkins stated Heidelberg apparently shot himself.

Student employment and scholarship grants at the university recently were investigated by L. S. U. authorities.

GERMAN OFFICER MAY BE INVITED TO INSPECT R.A.F.

London Circles State He Could Take Message Back to Hitler

BRITAIN DETERMINED

German Concentration Not Yet at Stage Usually Preceding 'Action'

By PIERRE MAILLAUD
Havas News Agency Staff Writer

London, Aug. 11—(CP-Havas) —Great Britain may invite a senior German military officer to inspect the Royal Air Force and take back a message to Fuehrer Hitler that this country is ready and able to fight, diplomatic circles said today.

These sources said reports from Berlin indicate that Hitler, busy consulting his western defences, building his eastern fortifications and laying up a food supply, has not yet reached the "concentration" stage which in previous instances has preceded definite action.

Hitler Unconvinced

The Fuehrer, it was added, is still not convinced that the strides in British airplane production have made London's intervention in any Danzig showdown a dangerous probability.

Diplomatic quarters here suggested the man most likely to sway the Fuehrer would be Colonel-General Erhard Milch, Nazi air force chief of staff.

The difficult international situation it was pointed out, would make an invitation to General Milch Delicate. But observers recalled that in August of last year, when the Czecho-Slovak crisis was reaching its peak, General Victor Vuillemin, then chief of the French aid force general staff, made a similar inspection trip to Berlin.

HALF OF ENGLAND EXPERIENCES GREATEST TEST

Blackout Covers Area Populated by Thirty Million Persons

OF GREAT VALUE

London, Aug. 11—(CP)— Great Britain's greatest blackout—a demonstration of civilian and military defences against bombing raids—early today blotted out lights in half of England, an area populated by 30,000,000 persons.

As dawn streaked the eastern sky, just before the signal for 'lights on," Sir John Anderson, Lord Privy Seal and minister in charge of civilian defences, told reporters the experiment would prove of "great value" but that it was impossible yet to "express a considered judgment."

As daylight progressed anti-aircraft searchlights which had fanned the sky for 3 1-2 hours were dimmed and London, nerve centre of the 28 blacked-out counties of southeastern England came back to life.

Few Planes Seen Over London

Early air ministry reports on the success of London's defences—pursuit planes, anti-aircraft guns and the balloon barrage—were sketchy but to Londoners who tramped about in the dark hours thought it was significant that few bombing planes were seen over the city.

Five hundred bombers simulating an enemy roared in over the eastern and southern coasts in attempts to dodge through and score 'hits' despite 800 defending planes and 60,000 land observers deployed with gadgets and guns to detect and shoot down the raiders in make-believe.

Albanians Organize to Regain Independence for Native Land

Washington, Aug. 11—(AP)—Faik Konitza, former Albanian diplomatist, and now a man without a country, disclosed optimistically today that Albanians are forming an international organization to help regain independence for their native land.

"Albania will once again be independent," said Konitza former Envoy to the United States. "Albanians themselves are determined upon it. It will come about through one of two means—either a general war in which Italy will be defeated or through a change of regime in Italy."

The former minister, who represented his country in Washington for nearly 13 years, said he is awaiting advices from King Zog, who fled before the Italians and who now lives in France.

Plane Takes Off From Cape Breton Island Community

New York Fliers Said, According to Report, "They Hoped to Land in Eire" but Gave No Further Details

350 GALLONS GAS TAKEN

Caretaker, However, Says Fliers Would Not Definitely Say They Were Contemplating Transatlantic Flight

St. Peter's, N.S., Aug. 11—(CP)—Two New York fliers, Alex Loeb, 32, and Dick Decker, 23, took off from Point Michaud Beach near this south Cape Breton Island community today on what they said was a trans-Atlantic flight. They said their destination was Eire.

Flying a Ryan monoplane, the pair said they hoped to land in Eire, but gave no further details. The plane carried 50 gallons of gasoline. They took off from the sands at Point Michaud at 10.04 a.m. EDT.

They had been seen around Cape Breton airport at Sydney, N.S., 50 miles from here for about a week, but gave no indication of their intentions to fly the Atlantic.

'EXPOSED HEART' BABY MAY LIVE PHYSICIANS SAY

Baltimore Surgeon Suggests Plastic Surgery as Means of Saving Life

QUOTES FORMER CASE

Manila, Aug. 11—(AP)— Baby Mary Heart Rafael, born Monday with her heart completely exposed, breathed normally late today under the stimulation of oxygen treatments and chemical injections. Doctors expressed new hope for the infant's life.

An incubator was brought into use to maintain body temperature and proper pressure after a sudden respiratory condition had led doctors to fear the child might not survive another day.

The doctors unofficially expressed belief the respiratory difficulties might be caused by gradual closing of the hole in the upper chest through which arteries lead from the exposed heart. They said another case might be general heart fatigue resulting from the unnatural position of the organ, which rests on the child's chest and is protected by a thin glass cup.

Plastic Surgery Suggested

Baltimore, Aug. 11—(AP)— A Baltimore surgeon who 17 years ago assisted at an operation on a baby born with heart exposed, suggested plastic surgery today as a possible means of saving a Manila baby which has lived since Monday with its heart resting on its chest.

Dr. Cyrus Horine, associate professor of surgery at the University of Maryland Medical School, said the Baltimore baby died within three days, but "if we knew then what we know now, the story might have been different."

Research indicated, he continued, that the most practical method of remedying the exposed heart condition seemed to be skin grafting, together with rib fracture and reconstruction to cover the organ naturally.

NEWS ODDITIES AND BRIEFS

SLUGGED ON HEAD, DRIVES OFF BANDITS

Toronto, Aug. 11 (CP)—Campbell Cork, 65, was slugged on the head with a lead pipe but managed to foil efforts of three men to hold up the gasoline station where Cork was attendant. Cork staggered out of the station after he was slugged, and shouted for help. The trio fled and Cork chased them until one man fired at him.

FIVE WOMEN WANT TO BE EXECUTIONER

Ossining, N.Y., Aug. 11 (CP)—Five women have applied for the job of official executioner at Sing Sing prison where condemned prisoners are put to death in the electric chair.

Prison officials refused to reveal the identity of the women whose applications were among 350 to 400 received for the position held by the veteran Robert Elliott, now seriously ill.

CATCHES HER OWN BABY

Olivet, Mich., Aug. 11 (CP)—Mrs. Ivan Montague went fishing the other day and caught a seven-month-old baby. Ivan, Jr., wiggling in a basket in the centre of the boat, fell overboard. His mother had prudently tied him to her belt beforehand and pulled him to safety.

PENNIES FINANCE HEALTH CLINICS

Montreal, Aug. 11 (CP)—Financed with pennies raised by youngsters throughout Quebec province, clinics for eye, ear, nose and throat will be held this Autumn by the Junior Red Cross in the country district surrounding Shawville, Que.

Mrs. R. B. Shaw, Provincial Supervisor for Quebec Junior Red Cross, announced last night that the examinations would be made in the district, 50 miles northwest of Ottawa, by a Montreal specialist.

FOUR CHINESE WILL BE TRIED BY JAPANESE

Alleged Terrorists Will be Handed Over by British to Japanese for Trial

London, Aug. 11—(AP)— The government announced today that four Chinese alleged terrorists who had been the centre of the Anglo-Japanese dispute at Tientsin would be handed over to Japanese authorities for trial.

It was announced that new evidence submitted by the Japanese had established prima facie cases against the four Chinese and that they would be handed over immediately.

CONFESSED SLAYER TAKEN AWAY TO UNDISCLOSED JAIL

West Palm Beach, Fla., Aug. 11.—(AP) — Fearing mob violence, police authorities today delayed arraignment of Charles Jefferson on charges of abducting two Miami High School girls, slaying one and holding the other prisoner three days.

A few hours after the 34-year-old Jefferson confessed yesterday to assaulting and fatally stabbing Ruth Frances Dunn, 17-year-old brunette beauty, officers rushed him away under heavy guard to an undisclosed jail.

Officials reported there was an undertone of anger in street gatherings here as details of the case became generally known.

SLIM PICKINGS FOR MUSHROOM HUNTERS

The summer's mushroom crop has been a decidedly slim one so far and the effort of picking has hardly been worth while for the early morning risers who have been searching the parks and lawns. This season's dry weather has apparently killed the spores of the fungus and resulted in slow and thinned growth of the mushrooms.

DISCUSS PURCHASE AT SPECIAL MEETING

Members of city council will debate the purchase of further equipment for the city fire department as recommended by Alderman Laurie Lewis, chairman of the Fire Committee, at a special meeting of the council to be called on Tuesday evening next.

Though the next regular meeting of council was not scheduled until September, disposal of considerable business makes necessary the calling of a special meeting by Mayor Bone, it was stated this morning.

Any resident who has a communication to present council, or any local deputations will be heard at this meeting, it was announced.

Uncollected Taxes of 1938

In a report issued by the Citizens' Research Institute of Canada, it is shown that Belleville reported a percentage of 19.8 in uncollected taxes for the year 1938.

In the list of cities, Woodstock was given first place with a percentage of 8.5 in uncollected taxes, Peterborough was second, with a percentage of 9.5, Ottawa third, with 9.7, Kingston stood sixth with a percentage of 11.2.

Toronto is listed as having a percentage of 13.3 in uncollected taxes, Sault Ste. Marie 17.5 and Sarnia 17.4.

PAVING TO START ON HIGHWAY GAPS

One and ¼ Miles of West Huntingdon - Belleville Road Paving Approved by Dept. of Highways

Government approval of an estimated cost of $6,800.00 passed by the Hastings County Council at its June session, to pave the "gaps" approximating one and one-quarter miles on the road between West Huntingdon and Belleville, will send the machinery of the Consolidated Sand and Gravel Company paving contractors, into action in the near future, it was learned from an authoritative source yesterday.

County workmen and machinery under the supervision of Road-Superintendent W. L. Langlois are now reducing the gradient of the West Huntingdon hill, preparatory to the laying of the pavement.

Decision to proceed with the paving was made by the Roads and Bridges Committee of the County Council at a special meeting held this week, following the receipt of approval of the expenditure by the Department of Highways.

Although Road Superintendent Langlois could not be contacted yesterday, it is understood that paving work will start immediately following cessation of work on the West Huntingdon "cut".

DREADED HORSE DISEASE CASES IN WEST

Yorkton, Sask., Aug. 11 (CP)—Two fatal cases of encephalomyelitis, dreaded horse-disease, occurred in the Bredenbury area, 30 miles east of here, with death of a mare and her colt. Authorities state widespread use of vaccine has been responsible for satisfactory control of the disease which claimed thousands of equine lives on the prairies last year.

Looks At Crops In New York State

To The Ontario Intelligencer,—.

"We returned home last night from Syracuse. I was pleased to see how well all the grain looked from Belleville to Odessa, then from that on to Kingston, and Gananoque to Ivy Lea, I did not see much grain. Across the line to Clayton, Watertown and Syracuse I saw but little real good pieces of grain. Their grain over there seems later in harvesting and not of the quality of our grain over here. They go more into hay and corn. They grow a lot of corn and it looked good. The land around Clayton looked to be very stoney. After one gets about ten or fifteen miles out of Watertown which is a hilly country, for the next fifty or sixty miles to Syracuse it has the appearance of fine land but quite level country. I saw lots of corn of a good color and a good length but little grain that I could see. Syracuse has grown to a large city since I was there last. We were out to see Hitching's big apple orchard of hundreds of acres. His apples are shipped to all parts of the world. They look to be well loaded. This was the only big orchard I saw as I saw none coming the whole distance from Clayton.

"I was very happy to have the privilege of attending my unseen radio Friends Meeting on Sunday night and to have the privilege of an introduction to Evangelist Pitts. When I told him I was from Belleville, he wanted to be remembered to his friend in the city, who had written to him. His meetings are well attended and in fair weather they are held outside along side of the Rescue Mission building. He is a man who is deeply interested in his work and has splendid success in his work.

5 LARGE PLANTS TO BE OPERATED WITHIN 10 YEARS

Mr. Jan Bata, Head of Famous Boot Firm Makes Statement on Visit to Frankford

The hope to have five large factories in operation within the next ten years on the Canadian site of the company at Frankford, Ont., was voiced yesterday by Mr. Jan Bata, head of the famous Czecho-Slovakian shoe manufacturing firm who arrived in the Trent River village the other day, where he will inspect present plans for the model community village and operating plants that will spring up in the near future.

"While it is not yet known just how large the Canadian factory will be, we are starting to build in the near future and hope to have five large operating plants constructed in the next ten years," he added.

Referring to the publicity already afforded the company's locating in Canada, Mr. Bata stated, "We are not looking for publicity, but we wish to be fair to the people of this country and give them a clear insight into our methods of operation."

Family Tradition

Nearly 600 years of family tradition stand behind the company, Mr. Bata stated. "We can trace the Bata family back for 320 years, in church records, and every man has been a shoemaker. Tradition counts a great deal and we, as offsprings of a long line of shoemakers, are continuing in this business. There are factories in Czecho-Slovakia and in England and two factories are now being constructed; one in the United States, and this one here," he said.

"We are not opposed to unions," said Mr. Bata, "but we do not care to have any one come in and try to run our business. The officials deal directly with the men and refuse to deal through the leaders of the unions."

The plans for the modern community call for dormitories, both for single men and single women, clubhouses, theatre, swimming pool and sport fields. Each family will be housed in a modern home and will have sufficient land for their own gardens.

GRASSHOPPERS NO MENACE HERE

Hastings County So Far Has Not Seen Any Invasion by Winged Pest

Reports of damage to crops in this central section by grasshoppers were not confirmed by agricultural representatives of Hastings and Lennox-Addington Counties, questioned today.

"There was some damage last year by the hoppers, but so far we have had no word in Hastings County of any loss and there have been no reports of any invasion of the county by the grasshoppers," stated Mr. Lynn Fair, Stirling, agricultural representative for Hastings.

Grasshoppers need dry weather, and the rains we have had recently would tend to cut down the grasshopper population," stated Mr. C. W. Buchanan, Napanee, representative for Lennox-Addington. "We haven't had any word of crop damage down in Lennox and in fact things have looked better since the rains."

POLICE COURT

"Perhaps it would be to the best advantage of all concerned if you two men would dissolve partnership," counselled His Worship Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., after he sentenced Robt. J. Potter and Eric Knapp, two Kingston young men, to ten days in the common jail following individual pleas of guilty when the pair appeared on charges of vagrancy and admitted the same before His Worship this morning.

"These are the two men who were found loitering at the rear of McFee's Jewellery Store, about two weeks ago," informed Acting Chief Arthur Harman, following which Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C. introduced the list of previous convictions of both men, both of which included arrests for breaking and entering, with jail terms following.

"After reading these convictions and charges it would not be improper to think these men might have had designs when they loitered at the rear of a jewellery store," suggested Mr. Donnan. His Worship gave them ten days each, which allowed them their liberty as both have been on remand since Aug. 1st.

A Brighton woman appeared on a charge of vagrancy and after serious contemplation stated she "guessed she was guilty".

"How long will it take you to get out of the city?" asked His Worship.

"Just as soon as I can pick up my clothes," answered the woman with an appealling look in her eye.

She was placed on three months' probation.

Charges of the taking of a motor car without the owner's consent, were read to 17-year-old Ray Thompson and two juveniles in a subsequent Juvenile Court. The charges were dropped against the teen-aged lads, while Ormonde Butler, local barrister appearing for Thompson, was granted an enlargement in the older lad's case. The trio of lads were arrested in Kingston.

YOUNG FARMERS CHOSEN TO JUDGE AT WINTER FAIR

Prince Edward Junior Farmers Hold Successful Achievement Day at Quinte Inn

GIRLS SELECTED

Vernon Striker Wins C.N.E. Shield for Best Young County Farmer

Selected through the merit of their livestock-judging abilities from forty-seven youthful Prince Edward County farmers, Messrs. William Nightingale, Huff's Island, Floyd Huffman, Ameliasburg; Don Walker, South Marysburg and Ralph Richards, Demorestville, will represent the southern county as its judging team at the Royal Winter Fair held in Toronto this year.

The selection was made at the Prince Edward County Junior Farmers' Achievement Day held at Quinte Inn yesterday, where a large crowd watched the future prize stockmen of the district go through their judging paces.

Young lady farmers of the county some twenty all told, also vied with each other in competition for the honor to represent their native county in the Home Project Judging. The team selected that includes the Misses Frances Wallbridge, Huff's Island; Mildred Hall, Huff's Island; Ruth Hickerson, Consecon and Helen Law, Mountain View will also compete with other county teams at the forthcoming Winter Fair.

Five junior farmers, who showed surprising ability in the judging of all classes of livestock and who won two-day trips to the Fair included Messrs. Vernon Striker, Milford, Orville May and Ivan May, South Marysburg; Don Ackerman, Picton, and Ross Benway, Hillier.

Wins C. N. E. Trophy

Vernon Striker, Milford's youthful entry in the competition won the Canadian National Exhibition shield emblematic of the best junior farmer in competition.

For distinct achievement in completing six projects in the Home Project Division, the Misses Marion Wallbridge and Mildred Hall, both of Huff's Island, were awarded special certificates.

While the judging competitions were held at Quinte Inn under the supervision of Mr. Fred Webster, Prince Edward County Agricultural representative, with Miss A. Pollock, Toronto, supervising the girls' division, the evening banquet was held in the basement of Albury United Church.

The special speaker at this function was Mr. Arthur Huff, prominent Mount Pleasant farmer, just returned from an extended trip to Europe. He spoke of general conditions over there, especially those pertaining to agriculture and livestock.

Wellington Growers Harvest 30,000 Boxes Berries

With upwards of thirty-thousand boxes already harvested Messrs. Baitley and Munday, prominent Wellington, Ontario, raspberry growers are nearing the end of the harvest of a near-record crop.

One hundred and thirty pickers gathered the fruit that covered a patch of roughly nine acres. Early indications, that pointed to a slim yield through continued drought, changed as timely rains brought a new lease of life to the rapidly drying crop.

Last year Messrs. Baitley and Munday picked twenty-seven thousand boxes from their acreage.

Fire Destroys Crookston Home

Sweeping through the dry frame structure shortly before midnight, fire of undetermined origin totally destroyed the house and contents of Mrs. H. S. Cameron, Crookston resident early this week. The house was owned by a Mr. Samuel Douglas. The house-loss was covered by insurance but the contents are a complete loss.

Mrs. Cameron and her family were absent at the time, returning some time later to find their home a mass of blazing ruins. Neighbors noticing the flames and smoke that rose high in the air dashed to the scene, but the fire had gained too much headway for them to save anything.

OBITUARY

MISS LOTTIE R. MILLER

Miss Lottie R. Miller passed away on Thursday, August 10th., at the residence of her sister, Mrs. William A. Fry, 25 South Front Street. She had been in failing health for some time.

The late Miss Miller, who was in her 47th year, was born at Pittsburg, Ont., her parents being the late Mr. and Mrs. William H. Miller. For some years she resided in Napanee and for the past year and a half she made her home in Belleville. Friends will regret to learn of her death.

Surviving her are one sister, Mrs. William A. Fry, Belleville; two brothers, Mr. Adrian Miller, Napanee and Mr. Overton Miller, Bath.

The body is resting at the Belleville Burial Company Funeral Home, Campbell Street. The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

MRS. ALICE CADMAN

Mrs. Alice Cadman passed away in the Belleville General Hospital on Thursday evening, August 10th., after a lengthy illness.

The late Mrs. Cadman, who was in her 85th year, was born in Huntingdon Township, her parents being the late Mr. and Mrs. Edward Marsh. For the past year she had made her home here and prior to which time she resided in Madoc. In religion she was a member of the United Church and well respected.

She leaves no immediate relatives. Her husband died some years ago.

The funeral will take place in Madoc on Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock Standard Time.

LATE DAVID PARKS

(Ameliasburg)

The funeral of David Parks took place Thursday afternoon, August 10th., from the residence of his son-in-law, Mr. Joseph Beaumont, on Highway 14, first Concession of Ameliasburg and many friends were present. The service in the home was conducted by the Rev. W. R. Pair of the Pentecostal Assembly, assisted by the Rev. T. Smith of the United Church at Ameliasburg. During the service Mr. P. Drope sang a solo in keeping with the occasion.

Interment was made in Bethel Cemetery in Hungerford Township, the service at the graveside was conducted by the Rev. T. Smith.

The bearers were four grandsons, Harry Beaumont, Donald Beaumont, Morley Handley, Carl Handley and two neighbours, David Lowe and Clarence Cornell.

RAIN IMPROVES CROP OUTLOOK

Warden Thompson Says Farmer Will Not be Too Badly Off

"The county looks much better lately, and the recent rains we have had have proved of immense value," commented the Warden of Hastings County, Geo. E. Thompson of Springbrook, last evening.

"In my own section I notice a particular improvement in things, and from reports I've had from other sections, it appears that the farmer will not be too badly off after all, though earlier the weather had been anything but favorable for the majority."

Huff's Island

HUFF'S ISLAND—Misses M. Hatfield and B. Wallbridge who have been attending summer school at Toronto and Hamilton respectively have returned home.

Mrs. Fairman, Sr., spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. A. Munroe, Crofton.

Mr. and Mrs. R. Anderson, Wellington, were dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. L. Wallbridge on Sunday.

Mr. H. Wallbridge spent the week-end at Hamilton and Dunnville.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Long and Arthur, Shannonville, Mr. and Mrs. H. Long and children, Kingston, were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. T. Nightingale.

The island was well represented at the regatta at Massassaga on Monday. The Rotary Club is to be congratulated on the manner in which they planned and carried out their project. They worked hard and deserved success.

Mrs. Hatfield and Miss M. Hatfield attended a picnic at Glen Ross on Monday.

Miss Lottie Wallbridge spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Mac Wallbridge, Sidney.

$60,000 OUTLAY ON STREET REPAIR IS PROPOSED

Picton Names Delegation to Wait on Deputy-Minister of Highways

$48,000 IN LABOR

Picton, Aug. 11 (Special)—If the Ontario Government gives its consent, the town of Picton will seek to undertake an extensive program of street repairs under the Federal works-relief program, recently announced. At the town council meeting this week, there was a full discussion of the matter, and a delegation of Acting Mayor H. S. Colliver. Deputy Reeve Lance Nethery and Councillor Clifford Gerow together with James Hepburn, M.L.A., was appointed to go to Toronto next Tuesday to interview the Deputy Minister of Highways.

The local plan calls for an expenditure of $60,000 of which $12,000 would be for materials and the remainder for labor. Of the latter cost, the Federal Government is said to be willing to pay fifty per cent.

It is proposed that the plan, involving a net cost to local taxpayers, including carrying charges, of $42,000 to local ratepayers, be provided by the general assessment of the town on a fifteen year debenture issue not to exceed one mill increase on the present assessment.

Paving, repairing of gutters and curbs would be done. No action will be taken until the decision of the Ontario government is secured.

Springbrook

Bruce Joyce and children of Belleville and Mrs. Carrie Joyce spent the week-end at the latter's home here in the village.

Miss Helen McKeown and friends who have been visiting in the village left on Monday for their home at Royal Oak, Mich.

Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Mumby and Mr. and Mrs. Lindsay Mumby called on Mr. M. McComb of Campbellford who is ill.

Mr. and Mrs. Alex Geraldi of Stirling are spending a few days this week with Mr. and Mrs. George Williams.

Mr. and Mrs. Angus Mumby of Moira were Sunday guests at Mr. Percy Mumby's.

Miss Helen Ingram of Seymour is holidaying at Mr. Orrie Barton's.

Several from the village and vicinity attended the McKeown reunion at Oak Lake on Monday.

Mr. Sid Mason and son George Mason of Stirling motored to Toronto on Sunday and spent the day with Mr. and Mrs. Richie Mason.

Mrs. V. Folick of New York is the guest of her sister, Miss Ida Owens.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Reid and family of London, Ont., are guests of Mrs. Grace Reid and other relatives in the community.

Mr. John Benson of Toronto spent the week-end and holiday with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Benson.

Mr. and Mrs. Will White and son of Oshawa were recent visitors of Mrs. Fred Fenn and other relatives in the community.

MAKESHIFT RAFT CARRIES 3 BOYS INTO OPEN BAY

Young Swimmers Fail to Notice Wind Blowing 'Craft' Off Shore

'FROG-KICK' BACK

Three nude boys on a ricketty raft provided a sensation near the Bay bridge last evening and almost stopped traffic on the bridge road as car owners halted their machines to observe the boys' predicament.

The youthful bathers had doffed their clothing to enjoy a swim in the bay near Zwick's Island, au naturel. A makeshift raft nearby was used by them as a diving platform, and during the enjoyment of the swim none of the boys observed than an offshore wind had caught their frail craft and was carrying it out into the open bay.

Despite their efforts at hand paddling the occupants were carried ever nearer to the bridge from which spectators observed the predicament in grinning fashion, and it was not until all three, with concerted action had deserted the raft for the water, then frog-kicked it into calmer waters and the safety of their clothing that traffic again resumed its slow crawl.

Current Offerings at Belleville Theatres

Advance Information on Screen Offerings Supplied by Theatre Managers.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Mr. Moto's Last Warning"

Peter Lorre, as Mr. Moto, Ricardo Cortez, Virginia Field, John Carradine, George Sanders and little Miss Joan Carol, head the excellent cast of the famous Saturday Evening Post's sleuth who now pits his wits against a killer's cunning at the bottom of the sea, in his new adventure mystery thriller, "Mr. Moto's Last Warning" which is now playing at the McCarthy Theatre.

"Mr. Moto's Last Warning" is a perfect detective-mystery story that will not only thrill you, but gives Peter Lorre his greatest opportunity of cunning and sharp detecting against a new background, which is none other than near the Suez Canal. All members of the large cast are excellent in their respective character roles and the picture has been well produced and will be enjoyed by all. The companion feature, "West of Cheyenne" featuring Charles Starrett, Iris Meredith and the sons of the pioneers, famous radio stars who blend thrills and action with good old time western songs, is a splendid outdoor adventure production that balances exceptionally well with "Mr. Moto's Last Warning" to make the entire offering now at the McCarthy Theatre one of the best. A clever cartoon offering entitled "City Slicker" is also presented in addition to the above two feature hits.

AT THE BELLE

"Jack Benny and Rochester"

Local members of that almost innumerable legion of screen and radio followers who turn to Jack Benny for the best in comedy have a distinct treat in store for them when his new picture, "Man About Town," opens next at the Belle Theatre with Rochester and Dorothy Lamour in co-starring roles.

Styled as a comedy with music, "Man About Town" presents Jack in the most natural role he has ever had in motion pictures, surrounds him with bevies of beauties and sensational dancing by "Rochester" who makes his screen debut with his radio boss, and by the world-renowned Merriel Abbott Dancers. He plays an American theatrical impresario who gets into a series of hilarious escapades with the English nobility in an effort to win the love of his singing star, a role essayed by Dorothy Lamour. The role is tailored precisely to Jack's most effective screen and radio personality, and really gives him an opportunity to gag his way through hilarious situations in his most effective manner.

"Rochester" Has Dance Specialty

Employing the foggy English capital city for background, the Morrie Ryskind story—he did the stories for "My Man Godfrey" and "Stage Door"—gets under way when Jack's troupe finally joins him in London. Jack immediately becomes somewhat downhearted to learn that Miss Lamour is favoring the attentions of his orchestra leader, Phil Harris. On the advice of his valet, "Rochester" who introduces a dance specialty, Jack decides to show Miss Lamour that he can be a Casanova when he wants to be.

Jack has little luck until he meets an attractive and lonesome lady of the English nobility, a role played by Binnie Barnes. She is distressed because her husband, Edward Arnold, spends too much time attending to his business. On the advice of a friend who has been in a similar position, she invites Jack to her country house for a week-end. In a cleverly devised situation Edward Arnold has gathered that Jack is dangerous as far as wives are concerned, and then matters really become embarrassingly hilarious for Jack.

Of course, Jack does manage to make love to Miss Lamour and to present his show. And what a show it is! Girls by George Petty, the famous magazine illustrator who chose twenty of Hollywood's most delectable beauties to represent the Petty Girl and on the screen. Songs by Frederick Hollander and Frank Loesser, and Matty Malneck and the latter entitled "Strange Enchantment," "That Sentimental Sandwich" and "Fidgety Joe." Amazing acrobatic dances by the Merriel Abbott Dancers in a harem sequence that would make a sultan turn purple with envy.

The featured supporting cast of the picture also includes Betty Grable, E. E. Clive and Matty Malneck and his orchestra. Arthur Hornblow, Jr., the "Ziegfeld of Hollywood," produced the picture for Paramount with Mark Sandrich directing.

Another of the ever-welcome "Crime Does Not Pay" stories, "While America Sleeps", Popeye in a funny cartoon "Leave Enough Alone" and the popular Belle Newsreel will be exhibited on the same program. A new and thrilling champter of "The Return of the Lone Ranger" will be exhibited this week-end.

"Young Mr. Lincoln"

A smart show is now being presented at the Belle, "Young Mr. Lincoln," a picture thrilling with its drama, romance, human interest with Henry Fonda in the title role supported by Arleen Whelan, Marjorie Weaver, Alice Brady, Eddie Collins and Pauline Moore.

Peter Lorre is seen in his strangest crime adventure in "Mr. Moto Takes a Vacation," the companion feature attraction with lovely Virginia Field and John King, the romantic interest in the story. "Shooting For Par" a subject of interest to all golf fans will also be exhibited.

GERMANY

was a shortage in German agriculture of more than 800,000 men.

Gustave Behrens, chief of the Reich food office, wrote last March: "Anyone who goes through our villages will note what the consequences of the labor shortage are in nearly every farmstead.

"The overstraining of the peasant women is causing a terrible increase in the cases of premature birth.

"The state of health of the youths in agrarian regions is also degenerating as a consequence of overstrain."

There is a great deficiency in fats and fodder, says the author.

At Peak in Armaments

In the armaments industry, Germany is without doubt at the zenith of its capacity. "Its engineering industry has made tremendous progress," admits Dr. Lajos.

Impressive figures are produced to show the extraordinary strides Germany has made in the production of steel as compared with Great Britain and France.

But, the author argues, Berlin is working at full strength. The peak has been reached. London and Paris, on the other hand, are only just beginning. Their reserves are inestimable.

The author says that in the very life blood of war, oil, Germany is miles behind. She needs about 6,000,000 tons annually in peacetime and produces about 40 percent of this herself. Germany would need about 40,000,000 tons annually in order to wage war.

Quality of Armaments

As regards the quality of German arms, Lajos tells of heavy tractors that had to be abandoned on the "peaceful" invasion of Austria, in fine weather; of submarines delivered to Turkey that had to be withdrawn and completely refitted after a few weeks; of the turrets in the capital ships in the German navy that showed cracks after a few practice broadsides.

In one chapter, Dr. Brinkmann, one time director of the Reichsbank, is quoted as saying: "The three pillars of national economy are labor, raw materials and capital. In our country all three are exhausted."

There are copious quotations and references to official sources in the book. There is a minimum of personal comment.

RIBBENTROP

Forster's Address Unrevealing

Danzig, Aug. 11—(AP)—Danzig Nazis looked today to the Salzburg conference of Italian and German Foreign Ministers for the clue to their immediate future which their district leader failed to give in a bristling but unrevealing speech.

They felt that talks between Count Galeazzo Ciano of Italy and Joachim von Ribbentrop of Germany might produce a key to the situation blocking their often promised "return to the Reich."

Though he appealed to citizens of other nations aligned against Germany to prevent a war and voiced again a belief that the "hour of liberation is coming," the closest he came to setting a date was in a wish that it might be "not far distant."

12,000 'Protective Police'

Many of the "protective policemen" who have been conscripted here and put into training were in the crowd which heard him assert that the Free City was prepared to defend its right "with its blood." Conservative observers estimated that about 12,000 men are now enrolled in this force.

Hitler's Voelkischer Beobachter headed the speech with this characterization in large type:

"Danzig's answer to war-mad Poland."

"Lasting warning," said Boersenzeitung, attributing "Polish insolence" to the "English game."

The Polish newspaper Kurjer Polski's article likening Germany to ancient Carthage as a "nest of contagion" which must be "abolished" aroused the ire of the German foreign office mouthpiece, Deitsche Diplomatisch-Politische Korrespondenz.

Henry Fonda as Lincoln, Marjorie Weaver as Mary Todd, in romantic scene from "Young Mr. Lincoln," now at the Belle Theatre.

THE ONTARIO INTELLIGENCER
THE DAILY ONTARIO INTELLIGENCER is published every afternoon (Sunday and holidays excepted) at The Ontario Intelligencer Building, Front Street, Belleville.

'HE WAS THAT KIND OF MAN'

Newspapers yesterday told the story of an act of heroism which will keep alive the name of John Weeks, veteran employee of the Consumers Gas Company of Toronto, who stayed at the post of duty and was fatally scalded when a steampipe burst as he was trying to clear a drain in the basement of the building. He climbed up a stairway and dragged himself four hundred yards to warn the chief engineer to draw the fires and avoid a boiler explosion. Weeks is dead, but many are living through this heroic action.

The progress of the human rece has been upward whatever men may think as they peer over the international scene. Men will undergo great suffering and endure death for others.. It is this spirit which brought the race of man to the place it has reached in the life of this planet and will carry humanity on to heights yet unrealized.

Those who knew this hero say of him that "he was that kind of a man". No finer tribute could be paid. No nobler act could have been performed under any circumstance, than this act in the basement of the building and his successful effort under great suffering to warn others. It is well to bear such a reputation for loyalty to duty, that everyone knows what one will do under any circumstance.

WRONGLY NAMED

How the pioneers erred in naming birds and animals is told in the Field Museum news and names are confused in different states, the same names being used for entirely different creatures.

Who is to blame for this chaotic condition in naming the creatures of the earth and sky? The pioneers, worthy in so many respects, are the culprits, says the New York Times. In settling America they encountered many new birds and animals, and carelessly gave them the names of other creatures they had known at home.

Here are some of the paradoxes in bird names, pointed out by Rudyerd Boulton, curator of birds:

"The bird commonly called a robin is not a robin but a thrush. A real robin is a small British bird, one-third the size of our so-called robin, and only distantly related although superficially alike in having a red breast.

"The real partridge is European, and has been introduced in some places in America where it is often called the "hunky" from its proper name, Hungarian partridge. Our bob-white is called partridge in the South, and the ruffed grouse is called partridge in Canada. In the Middle West the bob-white often is called a quail, which is confusing because the true quail is a European bird that migrates to Africa.

"Just to make things a little more complicated, our ruffed grouse is sometimes called pheasant in the East—a term that is properly applied to the long-tailed "ringneck" introduced from Asia.

"What we call a warbler does not belong to the true warbler family at all. The true warblers are Old World birds. America has only one native species of warbler, but it is called a blue-gray gnatcatcher instead of a warbler.

"Our so-called oriole is really a blackbird, unrelated to the true orioles which are an Old World family unrepresented in the Western Hemisphere. Likewise, our meadowlark actually is a blackbird. However, America's only true lark is, for a change, called prairie horned lark—some one slipped and failed to give it a wrong name.

"Even that common little street gamin, the English sparrow, is not a sparrow by any means—it is a species of weaver-bird an immigrant first brought from Europe in 1850.

"In Florida lives a turtle which is misnamed a gopher, says Karl P. Schmidt, curator of amphibians and reptiles. There also is a gopher the little mammal called a gopher in the North) and they call that a salamander. They have a true salamander and they call that a "Congo eel."

Colin C. Sanborn, curator of mammals, contributes the note that what is called a prairie dog in the West is a ground squirrel ,and in Illinois a ground squirrel is called a gopher, but out West again is a real gopher that they call a gopher, of all things, and a ground squirrel that they call a ground squirrel.

What one calls a ground-hog is no relative of the pig, but is also a ground squirrel or woodchuck.

Then, of course, there is the classic misnomer pointed out to every schoolchild—the American buffalo which is not a buffalo but a bison, very distinctive from the true buffaloes of Africa and Asia.

AT HIS MOTHER'S GRAVE

No spot in all the world than this more dear.
Your head lies there; how I recall those eyes
Whose beaming light removed from me all fear,
You were so young, the frost on age that lies

On your brown tresses lay not. On your breast,—
Whence my first nourishment I drew, and where,
Tired by my boyhood world, I fled for rest,
And cuddled warm, I lisped my earliest prayer,—

Flowers, at the call of Spring, from sleep are waking,
Planted by her you left ere memory dawned.
Birds on the boughs sweet melody are making,
While gentle breezes bend each little frond.

I'll pluck a leaf, keep it, for sake of you,
In that best Book whence you your comfort drew.

UNCLE SAM HAS GIVEN JAPAN SIX MONTHS NOTICE that unless "So Sorry, Mr. Moto" mends his ways he no longer cares to do business with him, and Mr. Moto is wondering when that happens where he will get his war material to continue the Chinese war with, hitherto supplied by the United States. "Immediate foreign effect," says the Time magazine, "was to shrink Japan's swelled head over making Britain knuckle under, and to start Japan fuming worriedly about the source of war materials after next January when the United States embargoes could be voted." Japan may find that her new friends in the Berlin-Rome axis will be more of a liability than an asset.

HON. G. HOWARD. FERGUSON IS LEAVING THE OLD HOME TOWN of Kemptville for Toronto. The bright lights have at last got Howard, who has maintained a home at Kemptville all these years, through all the ups and downs of his political career which led onward and upward through the Legislature from a private member's desk to a Cabinet position, Minister of Lands, Forests and Mines, perhaps most important of all, to the Provincial Premiership, thence to the Seats of the Mighty as Canadian Commissioner at the Empire's centre in London, England. Through all the turmoil of his exciting career, when political Indians were looking for his scalp and he was vowing to nail their hides to the Queen's Park Barn door, Howard could always backtrack over the week-end to the old home town of Kemptville and see his troubles of the week dissolve in a haze of tobacco smoke in the corner store where all the questions of the Empire are settled in debate every Saturday night. Back in Kemptville is where the ambitious young lawyer first won his political spurs and toppled from his throne the village Pooh Bah who seemed to have a stranglehold on the political dictatorship of the riding. Alas Kemptville holds nothing more for its favorite son, Howard Ferguson, son of a country doctor who went so far against heavy odds and is still going rather strong where Big Men and Big Money congregate. Hon. G. Howard Ferguson's career as a prominent Canadian is interesting and colorful but the greatest thing about him and longest to be remembered is his genial good nature, his perpetual smile which seldom came off, and his friendship which was sure and steadfast and something to be prized as worthwhile. Kemptville, as the home of the Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, will retain with pride that distinction, and will always hold him in pleasant memory wherever he may be.

HEAT HIT NEW YORK CITY PARKS AN AWFUL WALLOP, the prolonged drought burning up the grass and shrubbery in the city parks and compelling a continuous drenching with the hose instead of just the usual night applications. The situation became so acute that an army of 3,000 civic employees was mobilized to drench the grass, trees and shrubbery in the parks on a twenty-four hour day schedule. The lawns in the parks were abandoned and will have to be reseeded, work being concentrated on the trees and shrubs.

Mr. J. W. London will leave for Ottawa tomorrow where he will attend the R. E. Synod.

Old Hotels Go Streamlined

One recalls the old register on the corner. Thumbed and dirty certainly, but a record of guests that sometimes ran back through the years. It was there for the inspection of all and it was a well-read book, either out of curiosity or for the study of weird penmanship.

Progress, and consequent development, have passed by many of these old hotels, though they still may be operating. Not doing so well, but as good a means of making a living as any other in the little community that in some way "missed the boat".

It is the same in the United States as in Canada. Travellers reaching a mere hamlet in New York State are amazed to find a splendid hotel for their accommodation. It is an example of many others: built in the days when business was good, its owner prospered greatly. One in mind has been in the same family for more than three-quarters of a century, and the present owner takes pride in keeping it up to the mark: Everything spotlessly clean, good beds, excellent meals—but few patrons. The owner may not be making any profit, but he's happy, and wouldn't change places with the head of any city hotel. And he doesn't even bother about keeping a register; his memory is as efficient as office equipment.

A touch of romance clings about these old places. When the imaginative native who has been away for a few decades returns home he will see ghosts in the big "sitting room". The old patrons—or just the loafers—have gone, but there is the corner where one of them sat out the day and the evening; and over there another one; near the big box stove still another local "character", and so on. He will not be interested in the stable and the old hostler whom all the farmers knew, because now it is a garage; but the old hostler knew the gossip of the place, and it is a pity he too is gone.

Delegates to the convention of the American Hotel Association may know nothing of these old hostelries—they are doing business in a vastly different and better way; but many an old-timer does remember them, and is convinced that, in their way and in their time, they catered well to the simpler needs of an earlier public.

The American Hotel Association is to hold its convention in Montreal in October. It will bring to the city executives of vast institutions with their thousands of rooms, their multifarious conveniences and luxuries, their innumerable services, their ballrooms, dining-rooms, grillrooms, convention halls and so forth, everything that the term modern hotel implies. It is doubtful if anyone will be there to contrast the towering all-inclusive structures of today with the little inns of an older time, which are still to be found tucked away on the English countryside and to a lesser extent on the byways of this continent, places with quaint names, with little taprooms, with great hearths and rambling corridors, places where post-horses used to be changed, where foaming tankards were lifted up to thirsty gentlemen travelling by coach.

The forthcoming meeting of the American Hotel Association has prompted the Toronto Globe and Mail to discuss the developments that have come in the business of accommodating the travelling public. The tourist, it says, has invaded all parts of the country, and, as a consequence, good hotels will be found now where there wasn't much justification for their exixstence a generation ago. It proceeds:

Memory carries back to the old town or village hotel in the days when there was less travelling than at present, when local and neighborhood patronage provided the chief support—farmers in to buy goods and with produce to sell. A company-owned hotel in these places was unknown, and patrons hailed the owner as "Jack" or "Bill". The boniface's contact with his patrons was direct and personal, and the hostelry's success depended on his popularity. He was a great fellow with the glad hand. His pocket was the office till.—Montreal Gazette.

HOPEFUL OF DANZIG'S RETURN

Paris, Aug. 10.—(CP-Havas) — L'Excelsior (Independent) today published an interview with Albert Forster in which the Nazi Party leader for Danzig indicated belief that Great Britain and France will yield to German pressure and permit the Free City's early return to the Reich without war.

CAUSE OF SEVERE ATTACKS OF ASTHMA

It is interesting to see how the knowledge of asthma and its treatment has progressed in the last twenty to thirty years. There was no known cause in my student days and treatment was by amyl nitrite (inhaled) or nitro-glycerin.

Then came the knowledge that some stoppage of the passages of the nose was the cause and removal of spurs and straightening of the septum (division between nostrils) certainly helped a great many cases.

When it was later found that sensitiveness (allergy) to various foods, dusts, pollens and other substances caused attacked of asthma, it was felt that all about the cause of asthma had been discovered. More recently it has been shown that nervousness and emotional disturbances, while not a cause in itself, was a real factor in bringing on asthmatic attacks in many cases.

The most recent information on the cause of asthma is recorded in the Oklahoma State Medical Association Journal by Drs. R. M. Balyeat and L. E. Seyler, who believe that more than 90 per cent of all cases of intractable (very severe) asthma are due to two causes:

(1) sensitization factors (food, fur, feathers, dusts, pollen).

(2) mechanical factors (plugs of mucous, pus-like formations in bronchial tubes, and dilatations—permanent enlargement of the little air sacs in the lungs).

These physicians believe that the formation of these little plugs (which close or partly close the little tubes carrying air in and out of the lungs) is of equal importance with sensitiveness in causing attacks of asthma. Most of these cases start with a swelling of the little bronchial tubes due to the substances to which the patient is sensitive, just as the lining of the nose and throat swell when attacked by these substances. A little late some infection occurs in the nose, throat and bronchial tubes and this leads to the formation of mucous and pus-like material which forms plugs. It is the plugging up of the little bronchial tubes which causes attacks of asthma.

In the milder forms of asthma, the little plugs of mucous can often be removed by kneeling on a chair, putting hands on the floor, head between hands and coughing vigorously for a minute or more.

CAR OF FUTURE

From the World Automotive Engineering Congress comes prediction that the car of the future will be teardrop in form . . . not for the sorrow it causes, but for speed. It will bulge big at the front and taper to a tail at the rear. It seems that our cars nowadays are built wrong end first in shape.

The car of tomorrow will be either "a front drive engine in front", or a "rear-drive engine in the rear. Figure it out.

It will be a buttoned-up affair. Door handles will disappear and give place to buttons for entrance into a commodious room with light, movable seats. The roof will be translucent to let in the light, yet kill the glare.

More buttons. A button will regulate the temperature, another button condition the air, another cause a concealed bed to jump out at you. The car can be driven from any seat; the controls may be passed from place to place, something like the remote control of the modern radio.—Galt Reporter.

A MAN'S MEASURE

Had a most interesting chat with Joseph W. Fair, well-known resident of Listowel, who comes out of retirement as a C.P.R. engineer today and takes the last Listowel-Linwood train over that route.

We're just passing on something which this veteran 77-year-old engineer wrote and which on printed cards he sends to friends throughout the country.

It is entitled "Measure of a man", and is as follows:

Not—"How did he die?"
But—"How did he live?"
Not—"What did he gain?"
But—"What did he give?"
These are the units
To measure the worth
Of a man, as a man
Regardless of birth.
Not—"What was his station?"
But—"Had he a heart?"
And—"How did he play his God-given part?"
Was he ever ready
With a word of good cheer,
To bring back a smile,
To banish a tear?
Not—"What was his church?"
Nor—"What was his creed?"
But—"Had he befriended those really in need?"
Not—"What did the sketch in the newspapers say?"
But—"How many were sorry when he passed away?"—F.B.K. in Stratford Beacon-Herald.

SCHOOLBOY'S COW

Writing an essay on "cows", a student rises to the heights of wit when he says: "The mos' important part of a cow is the receptacle in which the milk is stored. This is called the udder. By a clever arrangement it is divided into four compartments each with a separate tap. By this means the milk is divided at the source so that one part goes to the landlord, one to the mortgage company, one to the government, and one to the farmer."—Bowmanville Statesman.

Black Bass Are Inconsistent

The black bass of our inland waters are making trouble again, says the New York Times. Out west the other day a tired business man restfully angling for sunnies in a quarry pool discovered that a nine-pound small-mouth was running off with his line, and the poor chap was obliged to haul out the monster and have it photographed. That's only only of many bass atrocities reported since the season opened. Evidently the bass this year are as truculent and predatory as ever.

When the summer sun has warmed the water of pond or lake or stream, the bass leave their home in the deeps and go on the warpath in the shallows against their encircling enemies.

On ledges and sands and under lily pads they lurk to waylay passing schools of innocent infant pickerel and horned pout and minnows. To the carefree cricket that strays from its native heath into their spawning bed or living room they deal swift destruction. Toward the shy, retiring crawfish and the guileless, defenceless angleworm they show no mercy. Their animosity extends even to hand-pointed effigies of all such inferior races, including the rubber mouse and the wooden squid or plug.

But let a victim of their rapidity happen to conceal a barbed hook on its person, and they resent it with every fibre of their being. They leave for distant parts in high dudgeon. They scuttle for the bottom and sulk under snags and rocks. Bristling with rage, they go in for aviation and fling themselves at the sky till one yearns for a shotgun to subdue them.

Yet the bass, for all their reputed ferocity, are inconstant and inconsistent, and thereby the work of chastening them, in which thousands of men and boys nobly engage at this time of year, is made difficult. Faced with a strong force of water-whippers bent on establishing justice in the depths and restoring the balance of nature a bit, these submarine outlaws may suddenly become, to all appearances, lovers of peace.

Flip a plump and tender hellgrammite down among them, and they lift indulgent brows and simply let it wriggle. Try to decoy them into battle by showing them a far-flung frog or the juiciest grasshopper of the veldt, captured and pressed into service after a breathless stern chase, and they ignore the temptation calmly, or, still worse, they look it over and turn away pityingly.

Many a punitive expedition returns to port with the settled conviction that the bass tribe has at last developed a social conscience and renounced war forever. But no, on the morrow, when the coast is clear, the black horde will be running amuck again and strafing the weaker neighbors with great gusto. Pirates are never pacifists for long.

Thus, what for others is vacation time is for the bass fisherman a period of rigorous service to mankind. If the bass ever multiply to a point where they fill our fresh waters and developing legs, invade dry land and become a menace to traffic, it will not be his fault.

He is dedicated to a lifelong passion. The joys of family life, the pursuit of fond ambitions, the theatre and the arts, good books, quiet talk around the fireside with his friends—these will lure him as they do other men. But when the call comes, when the bass are on the warpath, he will excuse himself and rise and go.

What Newspaper Readers Read

Readers may recall that in the questionnaire published some weeks ago by the bureau of advertising, Canadian Daily Newspaper Association, information was asked regarding the classification of news found "most useful and interesting". A preliminary analysis, dealing only with returns from cities, shows that 45 per cent. of all who filled in the form polled for "general news". For the Ontario zone as a whole the ratio was 46.4 per cent., for Woodstock 42 per cent. With 18.7 per cent. placing "local news" first, these two classifications account for more than 60 per cent. It is probable they are rated fairly high by other readers as well.

There has been a rather general tendency on the part of publishers to feel that large numbers of newspaper readers were interested only in certain pages or features. Persons have been heard to say that they read only the sports news, or the financial page, or the comics. If one may judge by the returns from this survey, the proportion of readers who find special pages or features of chief interest is surprisingly small. In Woodstock, the proportion rating sports first was much higher than average at 7.1 per cent., while 3.6 per cent. put financial news first and 5.4 per cent. the comics.

The most general commentary on general news was that "only by reading the daily newspapers could one keep abreast of the times." Evidently a great majority of people read their newspapers pretty thoroughly, and do not confine their interest exclusively to any particular page. It is a tradition, of course, that an error in the paper, even in the most obscure corner of an inside page, is almost sure to be brought to attention by some readers. Perhaps the newspapers staffs go to unnecessary trouble in skimming the cream of the news for Page 1. At any rate, it would seem in regard to advertisements that "position" is less important than may have been assumed.—Woodstock Sentinel-Review.

A Publisher's Gamble

John H. Hopkins, founder and president of the successful firm of New York publishers bearing his name, who died the other day, chiefly owed his success to the fact that he was the "discoverer" of Robert W. Service, "the Canadian Kipling". Mr. Hopkins had left another firm to go into the publishing business for himself, and away back about 1909, he saw possibilities in the writings of Service, who was sending stuff down from the Yukon. Hopkins published them and a tremendous public was created. For years the publisher found Service a 'gold mine' for himself from the gold mining area, and through Service he financed the development of his company.

The publishing business is always a bit of a gamble. Anybody can get a book published by paying the costs of the first printing, but in the case of established authors there is no difficulty. The publisher who "discovers" a new author who looks to have written a "best seller", is lucky because he has probably bade the writer a friend for life, one who will give him all his work in future, thereby assuring a stream of royalties for both of them as long as the output continues and as long as there is a demand for these books. That is why publishers are as anxious to secure "readers" of new books who are likely to spot books likely to make hits.

There are many publishers who have been fortunate to get the first offering of successful authors. These writers are the "meal tickets" of their publishers. The value lies in catching the writers at the beginning of their careers. But many a fortune has been missed because publisher after publisher has rejected a new book, just as many a theatrical producer has lost a fortune by turning down a play which afterwards made a fortune for some other man. There have been hundreds of such misses in the publishing and theatrical world.—Stratford Beacon Herald.

Australian Girls Voice Dislikes

Having long suffered repetitions of what men do and do not like about them, Australian girls, who are reputed occasionally to give points to their sisters in Europe and America, have now raised their voices in chorus of their definite dislikes about men. The most frequently mentioned are:

(1) Walking on the wrong side of a girl in the street, and keeping hats on, smoking, or not standing up when speaking to a girl.

(2) Gossiping, especially about women.

(3) Wearing loud shirts, hats, ties and socks.

(4) Being childish about their hurts.

Here are some more:

"Men who call for you and sit in the car and toot instead of coming to the door annoy me intensely."—Society girl.

"I wish men wouldn't say 'Mr. Smith speaking', instead of 'Smith speaking' on a telephone."—Switchboard girl.

"I hate men to say 'I'm in love with you—I've never been in love like this before.' There's no need to tell lies."—Beauty expert.

"I don't like men with hairy chests in bathing trunks."—Nurse.

"Men who burn holes in carpets and chairs are the ones I detest. We don't buy ashtrays for fun."—Married woman.

"Why must men chat to waitresses? It's most embarrassing. Women don't chat to waiters."—Nurse.

"Generally hateful to most girls, I think is the mauling man who, when talking to you, must put his hand on your shoulder or hold your arm. He mightn't mean anything, but he's a nuisance."—A widow. — Australian Press Bureau.

NOISES AT NIGHT

The Dean of St. Paul's, who has been complaining humorously about sleepless nights amid the noises of the city, would have found many sympathizers in ancient Rome.

Julius Caesar (so Shakespeare says) liked to have around him men who sleep o'nights, but he had himself done much to murder sleep by a law which prohibited heavy street traffic in the daytime before late afternoon. The rich might find rest in their mansions far enough away from the centre, but the highly strung literary men of the early empire seem to have had disturbed nights. Juvenal complains of nights made dreadful by rumbling wagons and the midnight "language" of cattle drovers. "It needs a fortune," he says, "to sleep in Rome".

Martial, who lodged in a noisy quarter where, as at Deanery of St. Paul's, "all the city is at my bedside", gives us a curious list of his own particular spoilers of sleep: among them a night bakery, a firm of gold beaters, and a schoolmaster who started school before cock-crow and kept wouldbe sleepers alert with his shouting and the swishes of his cane.

Near the end of life Martial retired to a little estate in his native Spain, and when friends wrote condoling with him on his distance from cultured life he made a pleasant reply: "I am enjoying immense and remorseless sleep till 9 a.m., and I now make up for all the nights I lay awake during thirty years in Rome."—Manchester Guardian.

KEEP COOL THE "SALADA" WAY

Infuse 6 heaping teaspoons of Salada Black Tea in a pint of fresh, boiling water. After 6 minutes strain liquid into 2-quart container; while hot, add 1 to 1½ cups of sugar and juice of 2 lemons, strained; stir until sugar is dissolved; fill container with cold water. Do not allow tea to cool before adding cold water or liquid will become cloudy. Serve with chipped ice. The above makes 7 tall glasses.

Weyman, the manager, was successful and was presented by Mr. Roy Kenney with the handsome trophy, an engraved cup. A delicious picnic supper was served after which an amusing scavenger hunt was organized, and the delightful outing concluded with dancing at the pavilion. The committee in charge of sports included Miss Laura Melchior, Miss Gladys Emerson, and Mr. Kenney, while Mr. Don Dalrymple assisted greatly in the afternoon's arrangements.

Fashion Flashes

STAY OUT to dinner if your daytime dress is smart. A good choice for all day and on into the evening is a dark blue silk marquisette with vertical tucks from neck to hem except for horizontal tucks near the hem of the skirt.

A breath of romance hovers around a long cape of black net with wide horizontal tucks and matching hood.

It is wise to spend money on a casual coat, one that will last for years and always look well. Such a choice is a beautifully cut polo coat fashioned of white camel's hair cloth. A swank model is double-breasted with high notched revers.

It is only meant for the right figure, the lean-waisted girl. We refer to the bared midriff frock of cotton printed in a vivid exotic design. Skirt is full and above the bared waistline, the top is rather high-necked.

Smart women like tailored dinner suits. beauty is a slim sheath of ice-blue satin worn with a medium blue satin jacket, the jacket bordered with a scroll and rose design in blue, pink and silver sequins.

A good pal for summer days or evening is a jacket of silk in a bright red and white plaid with a blue line. It is collarless and hangs straight.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Murder and Illicit Love Affairs Will Out

Did England's great novelist, Charles Dickens, who wrote of every aspect of life and love with almost superhuman sympathy, understand all human beings in his world, but one, and that one, himself? Was he touchingly kind to all human creatures except one, and that one, his wife?

As everybody knows, Dickens, at age of 46, after his wife had borne him eleven children, calmly banished her from his life for good. It was a matter of separation, not divorce.

Was the poor woman guilty of some offense? Dickens, who was very reserved about the whole affair, never even claimed that she was. He did however say that Mrs. Dickens agreed to the arrangement, a statement that even his most fervent admirers always found it difficult to accept.

Dickens' wife was neither interesting nor beautiful. She was, as the wife of a genius often is, greatly her husband's inferior. But can a faithful wife and patient mother be thrown overboard because her girlish charm is spent? Dickens' children didn't think so. Loyal to both parents, they protested against their mother's banishment.

Now, more than half a century later, a recently published book has set free an unpleasant rumor. Dickens freed himself from his wife, this story says, because of his infatuation for an 18-year old actress who later bore him a child.

There may be nothing in the story, but certainly nobody would ever have listened to it for a moment, if, during all these years, people hadn't been asking themselves why the great humanitarian chose his undeserving wife as the victim of his one known act of cruelty.

Was he bored by her? Probably. Does that excuse him? By no means, —unless he had some unlikely additional grievance that nobody has ever been able to guess.

Dickens' children have told that he once said to them: "The greatest treasure I can bequeath to you is an untarnished name."

Did he accomplish this bequest? Alas, that illustrious name, the name of a great writer and a great lover of his fellow men, was not after all to persist without a stain.

If, when domestic love began to seem dull to him as it doubtless did, Dickens had honestly considered his wife's side of the case, and if he had faced the fact that his children's mother deserved the most honorable treatment he could give her, he would thus have insured himself against attack and his personal reputation would never have invited the barbs of a belated scandal.

If there is anybody who should have understood the elementary primer of family life, as the ages have formulated it, it is Charles Dickens. More almost than any other man, Dickens should have seen the selfish cruelty of abandoning his life partner. Sooner than anyone he should have been able to understand and resist the passing attraction of a young girl's pretty face.

It is a matter for tears that at the critical time strength and understanding should both seem to have failed him.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Before You Travel "Read Up" on Your Trip

Is your vacation to include some sightseeing? That is, are you going to either or both of the World's Fairs, or to a city which you have never visited before, or to a place rich in historical background?

You'll make your sightseeing more vital and thrilling, bolster up your conversation, if you do some "home work" in reading before you go.

Sightseers are of two kinds.

There are the travellers who never take the trouble to find out anything about the places to which they are going. By some form of transportation they are "taken", and in a vague, dull-eyed sort of way they "look", principally when they are told to and at what they are told to. They contribute little to the conversation except constant repetitions of worn-out adjectives . . . . "wonderful", "lovely", "charming", "grand", or whatever their favorites are. And either they say to their companions or silently regret to themselves, "Why in the world didn't I read up on this before I started on the trip?"

Then there is the other kind of travellers. They seize every opportunity to make an Important Occasion of an anticipated trip. They take advantage of the wealth offered them in the public libraries, in the hundreds of carefully-prepared brochures offered by the railroads and travel agencies, garnering interesting facts that will make them the "informed" travellers they insist on being. They have eyes that really see, they have ears that really hear, and they have minds that really understand. These people are the interesting people in the world, whether they are at home, or "at home" in travelling.

I urge you to make a resolve to be an informed traveller, to gather knowledge before a trip as well as during a trip, because you and I know how much grist this will mean to your conversation mill. And good grist is what we need if we aren't smugly satisfied with being just "run-of-the-mill" talkers.

That greatest of all social assets —the ability to talk intelligently— doesn't just happen. It has to be nurtured, fed with all the vitamins that make "good talk". And there are lots of conversational vitamins in intelligent travelling.

Of course, I don't mean that before, during and after our trip we talk like a guide-book; on the other hand, I'm sure you'll admit that a colorless repetition of "wonderful", "beautiful", and the like aren't the stuff of real conversation.

To talk interestingly, you've first got to have something interesting to talk about. The keen-eyed and keen-minded traveller is alert to all opportunities to store his or her mind with interesting conversation pieces.

Think about these wise words: "He that would bring him the wealth of the Indies must carry the wealth of the Indies with him. So it is in travelling—a man must carry knowledge with him if he would bring home knowledge."

Dear Mrs. Beeckman

I have been secretly married since last January and I want to have a reception and announce my marriage.

Please tell me how the invitations should be worded. The reception will be held in the evening.

Jane

Friendly little notes of invitation would, I think, be the most appropriate form of invitation for your party. They might read somewhat like this:

Dear Mary,

Mother and I would be very happy if you and Tom would come to a small party that we are giving at our home on Saturday evening, September ninth, at nine o'clock. Do tell us that you will both be with us. . . . . we're looking forward to welcoming you.

Dearest love to you both.

Devotedly,

Then, on the evening of the party, you and your mother (your father if you and he wish) and your husband, might stand in a group near the entrance of the living-room, to greet the arriving guests. After you and your mother have greeted a guest, your mother might say, ". . . and Jane's husband, George Caldwell". This graciously and appropriately tells the good news.

Weddings

NELSON—STEWART

The home of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Stewart, Hastings, was the setting for the wedding on Monday afternoon, when their daughter, Effie Edythe Roxena Stewart, Reg.N., became the bride of Mr. Clarke Jay Nelson, Phm. B, of Trenton. The ceremony took place under an arch of wood ferns and summer flowers, with Mr. Hinton, a former pastor, officiating, assisted by the present pastor, Rev. Mr. Glover. The wedding march was played by the bride's sister, Miss Viola Stewart and during the signing of the register, Mrs. Charlton Grigg, also a sister of the bride, sang "I Love You Truly."

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a graceful gown of white silk net over taffeta. Her veil of embroidered silk net, fill in soft folds to the floor, and she carried a bridal bouquet of red Talisman roses and baby's breath. Miss Evelyn Stewart was her sister's bridesmaid, frocked in Queen's blue silk net over taffeta with tiny matching veil. Her bouquet was of gladioli in pastel shades. The flower girl, Miss Joan Grigg, niece of the bride, wore a floor-length frock of pink organdie and a wreath of garden flowers in her hair. Her small nosegay was also of garden flowers. Mr. Wm. Nelson of Trenton, brother of the groom, was best man.

A buffet luncheon was served after the ceremony. Banks of flowers and pink and white streamers were effective decorations in the dining room.

Mrs. Stewart, mother of the bride, was gowned in navy flowered sheer with corsage of rosebuds and baby's breath, and Mrs. James Nelson, mother of the groom, wore a black and white silk ensemble with corsage of rose buds and baby's breath.

For an extended motor trip to Toronto, Niagara Falls, Rochester, the Adirondacks and Quebec, the bride chose a navy sheer frock with navy accessories, and white flannel coat. On their return, Mr. and Mrs. Nelson will reside in Trenton, Ont.

BONGARD—McCORMAC

A pretty wedding was solemnized in Kingston at the Presbyterian Manse, August 9, when the Rev. James Evans united in marriage, Lois Margaret, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William McCormac of Stella, and Clayton Edmund, eldest son of Mrs. E. Bongard of Picton.

The bride looked charming in a dress of turquoise sheer with white accessories, carrying a bouquet of Sweetheart roses and white carnations interspersed with baby's breath and maiden's hair fern.

The bride's mother was becomingly attired in blue flowered sheer with navy accessories. The groom's mother wore sky blue sheer with white accessories.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the Roy York Cafe, where only the immediate relatives were present. Later the bride and groom left amid best wishes from their friends, for Bowmanville, where they will be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. D. Carruthers. The bride travelled in grey with navy blue accessories.

On their return they will reside near Picton.

BACK INTEREST continues to interest. A dramatic evening frock is of taffeta plaided in red, white and blue. It is draped in wide folds to achieve back fullness and there is a big self fabric bustle bow. The hem is turned back to a wide cuff.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Nephritis Often Follows Heavy Colds

Nephritis, a dangerous kidney complaint, so often follows in the wake of a heavy cold and infection of the middle ear that I continually warn mothers of the dangers that lie in the wake of these infections.

The history of many cases I have attended has been just this—a bad cold in the upper respiratory passages hangs on until it gets up in the middle ear and causes more trouble. Sometimes it is the glands of the neck that are involved in the infection before the nephritis occurs. Occasionally there are no complications beyond the cold in the head and throat. This continues for some time and then the nephritis appears. Chronic tonsillitis or infected sinuses can and do cause nephritis as well, but not as frequently as do the more acute infections.

Because of this danger of nephritis to all who have bad colds we watched the Quintuplets with the greatest care. For a long while, for a number of reasons, they were particularly susceptible to colds. They weren't as robust as normal children because they were premature, for one thing. And so each time they showed that they were suffering from colds, we watched the urine every day to see if it showed that the kidneys were being involved.

Thank goodness, we have had their tonsils out, and they don't have colds any more. That is one worry less we have now—susceptibility to colds has been greatly decreased.

As I have said, there is always an infection of some sort present when nephritis occurs. The parents will notice that the child doesn't recover from a cold as rapidly as he should. He becomes pale and tired; every move seems to be an effort and all efforts to awaken him from his lethargy will be met with little success. Getting him out of bed in the morning becomes a real chore.

You may notice that the child doesn't pass as much urine as normally and what he does pass is very highly colored. The urine may be bright red, or smoky-looking, as though it contained a lot of foreign material. This coloring or smokiness is due to the presence of properties in the urine that should by rights have been retained in the blood stream.

To recapitulate, red blood cells are the usual cause of the red color. Their presence in the urine also explains the child's paleness, for as these red cells are drained out of his system, he becomes anaemic. Sometimes the discoloration of the urine passes unnoticed. Then the first thing that the parents will notice is a good deal of swelling and puffiness around the child's face.

If this warning goes unheeded, the child's condition will grow worse and worse until the unfortunate youngster goes into convulsions and becomes unconscious.

No Need To Be Dowdy

By HELEN FOLLETT

AMONG THE sisters there are mines of undiscovered loveliness. Many a woman who walks with her shoulders thrown forward, tummy out and chest flattened may have a back of beautiful lines and proportions. She doesn't know it. With a stretching up of the spinal column, a neat nip in at the back of the waist and a lift of the chest, the back takes its place among her beauty assets.

Color Important

Many a lovely complexion is given a "yallery" cast or a greyish look because rouge and lipstick are unfortunate color selections. Cosmetic chemists offer a wide range of tints; a flattering one can be found. The woman who is a copy cat and uses complexion batik that enhances her dearest enemy, is not doing justice to herself. Let her visit a beauty shop and consult the make-up attendant. She will have access to open containers; can try out one tint after another. It is the only way. Complexions are of such varying tones, there can be no set rules.

"Know yourself" is a good beauty maxim. Don't underestimate your good qualities. Remember that defects look worse in the mirror than they do to the observer. Professional advice can be had at small expense.

There's no reason for any woman being overweight or dowdy. The correct diet will reduce inches without injury to the health and a clever dressmaker will give flair and manner to clothes. Woman is more or less of a pageant; every one of her should be on her toes pictorially.

VIRGINIA BRUCE

Has developed the lovely lines of her back

It isn't possible that the one who is afflicted with an offensive breath can be unaware of this distressing state. There is a metallic taste in the mouth when one awakens.

Infected tonsils, teeth that need attention, disorders of the intestinal tract are usually responsible. If fastidious care of the teeth and frequent use of a mouth wash do not bring conditions to normal, the old family doc should be consulted. He will get at the root of the matter.

An offensive breath makes one a social outcast. It is a symptom that something is wrong with the physical machine. The afflicted one should not delay in seeking relief.

HOW TO GET RID OF WHITEHEADS

By HELEN FOLLETT

JUST AS THE well-nourished body stores up resistance against disease, so does the well-cared-for complexion carry an insurance against its own particular griefs. Cleanliness, lubricating and friction help the skin to function normally, keep the surface smooth; underlying fibres resilient and strong.

Milia, or whiteheads, worry some of our beauty complainers. The mouth of the pore closes, sebaceous substance banks up in a beadlike mass. In nearly all these cases complexion care has not been fastidious. Everything should be done to speed up circulation. Cold water applications and massage are of benefit.

Mere pressure won't remove these white points. Hold a needle in a flame so that it will be sterilized, split the beadlike blemish its full length, hold the wound open, pick out the substance with the needle. Apply alcohol. Next day use hot moist applications. Follow with a five-minute massage with a heavy cream. Friction with an ice cube.

No external remedy will keep whiteheads from forming. To avoid them it is necessary to cultivate an epidermal coat that is in healthy, normal condition. The daily bath is helpful because it assists the skin in its work as an eliminating organ.

The large girl has her beauty problems. Choice of gloves and shoes is of the greatest importance. A heavy girl needs comfortable shoes, but not the kind that make her trotters look larger. White gloves she should never year.

Hair must not be bouncy or long. The neat coiffure, with shadowy wave lines and rolls close to the nape line, reduces the large appearance of the head.

HEDY LAMARR

Who is noted for her fine skin and clear complexion

Belts should be placed fairly low, round and square neck lines avoided. Bulging sleeves only add to dimensions. Dark colors are more flattering to her figure than light ones. Simple lines and limited ornamentations are her beauty requirements.
